Help Start New Traditions...New students have been invited to share in the traditions at Northeast Missouri State University. A traditions campaign through admissions has featured a viewbook and poster with the scene pictured on the Nemoscope.

The viewbook won an award of excellence in the 1978 regional competition of the Council for Advancement and Support of Education. The photograph of the poster won a silver award at the 1979 University and College Designers Association national competition.

Editor's comments

Normally this space is reserved for the "President's Comments," but as your new editor I thought it would be appropriate in this issue for me to update you on preliminary plans for the Alumni Association and for the NEMOSCOPE.

In this issue we are making some design changes which will improve the readability of the NEMOSCOPE. By including snapshots selected from years past we hope the "Notes" section will be more visually pleasing as well as bring back pleasant memories.

We have found that as a result of adding more photos to the "Notes" section we will need to be more brief in future editions in order to bring you as many updates on classmates as possible.

Also, we have included the new "Around the Quad" column to bring you news of campus happenings and events. We have selected those of most interest to alumni.

We will continue to strive to feature articles and news about alumni as well as flashback pieces in hopes of bringing you a harmonious blend of information about Northeast. Let us know your likes and dislikes; feature suggestions are always welcome.

Along other lines but still related to the NEMOSCOPE, we are able to bring you the NEMOSCOPE because it is supported by the Alumni Association. If you like reading the paper, I hope you will consider joining the Association.

Our costs have gone up while dues have remained the same since 1967 when the Association was founded. In short, I think the membership is looking at a dues increase in July 1981. We haven't settled on a figure, but we hope to give all alumni a year's advance notice, the thought being that many of you will wish to become life members under the current dues structure. We will be evaluating our Association services for members and hope to add new services and benefits soon.

Finally, March 20 was a grand day on campus. Dr. Lloyd Johns (B.S.E. '52, M.A. '56) was the speaker at the Baldwin Lecture (That lecture is printed on page 11 of this issue.) But also, we honored retiring faculty and staff plus those who have served the University for 25 years and for 10 years. Among the 10-year honorees was our President, Dr. Charles J. McClain.

Sometimes 10 years doesn't seem like a very long time, but when measured against the growth of the institution it is interesting to note that almost half of you were students while Dr. McClain has been president. More than half of the faculty has been hired since February 1970 when he became president.

His leadership is appreciated on campus. Off campus he is recognized for statewide leadership in educational circles at all levels. At a time of instability elsewhere (six new presidents among the public colleges in Missouri in the last five years) he has continued the tradition of stability, growth, opportunity and excellence at Northeast. He appreciates those of you who were here prior to 1970 for what you have done and leads us all ahead to a bright tomorrow.

Memories

Editor's Note: Dr. Charles J. McClain, NMSU president, would like to share the recollections of James T. Craig with NEMOSCOPE readers.

Dear President McClain:

How thrilled I am this afternoon to have received your very nice letter. Thank you for thinking of me and taking the time to write me your feelings. Memories of years past: in the 1920s my father ran a grocery store on south Mulanix street and I recall driving our delivery truck (Ford pickup) down on south High Street to Dr. John R. Kirk's house - when he was president of K.S.T.C. In particular - as Mrs. Kirk quite often would have some fresh-baked cookies ready for me to taste as I visited a bit with her. And - in May of 1931, when Dr. Kirk, then president-emeritus, came to me in Dr. McClure's political science class on 2nd floor Library Building, and asked if I would drive him (in his Marmon straight 8) to St. Louis that afternoon. He wanted to visit his son Todd, then a coach at Beaumont high school. That afternoon, as we were going east of Columbia on U.S. 40 - Dr. Kirk looked at the speedometer and said "Mr. Craig, she'll do sixty." One other memory - of Dr. Eugene Fair before he became President of K.S.T.C. He lived on east Washington street in the 800 block, not far from where I lived at 1103 east Harrison street. Many times I was over at the Fair's house, playing with his son Robert, or "Toady" as he was nicknamed.

Clark Stutler, who was asked to serve as master of ceremonies Saturday, Oct. 27th, is my wife's uncle. Her name is Schnelle, but her mother's maiden name was Stutler. She and Clark grew up in Boynton. Sunday and Monday following the homecoming Clark and his wife Nell (a southerner from Memphis) and my wife and I enjoyed visiting at his sister's home in Boynton - Mrs. Olive Holliday. Clark and Nell and my wife and I have kept contact with each other over the years. Both remarked to us, and to other friends and relatives there, how wonderful it was for Clark to have been asked to preside at the Class of 1929 Reunion Banquet. I am sure that you had a part in this decision. It will never be forgotten.

Back to the Homecoming: just as at the Homecoming featuring the Faurots several years ago - an unexpected thrill for my wife and I was to see and hear the marching Ritenour High School Band from Overland, Mo. I was hired at Ritenour in the fall of 1932 to start both a band and an orchestra - with just 7 students. By the fall of 1934 Ritenour had its first marching band - of about 18 players. At half-time the announcement was made that this year's Ritenour Band had won 1st in the AAAA division.

As we sat in the Stokes Stadium this time, I recalled I played on the Bulldog football team in the game in October, 1930, in which this stadium was dedicated. We played Central Eagles (Methodist College in Fayette, Mo.) and lost 12-7. The director of athletics from the Univ. of Mo., C.L. Brewer, gave the address before the game.

A family affair

Editor's Note: It's evident that the Gesling children love NMSU! Here's what their mother, Mrs. Thelma Gesling (B.S.E. 1955), has to say:

I really appreciate your sending a copy of the program from the Homecoming Buffet showing that Debbie is a recipient of the Alumni Scholarship.

Debbie has really enjoyed NMSU. She thinks the teacher/student relationship is outstanding. Since she was a true stranger to the area when she arrived, she has appreciated the friendliness and the concern that is shared by the faculty and students. Another of our children, Jim, joined her this year and is now attending NMSU. We have another son, Mike, that is a senior this year and he's applying to NMSU also. Another daughter, Susan, is a sophomore in high school.

William N. Corbin has been named debate coach beginning fall semester. Corbin has 25 years of debate experience at Idaho State University in Pocatello. Corbin replaces David Buckley, who resigned amid allegations that he and some debate squad members had been involved in the theft of documents from the University of Missouri-Columbia Library.

An alcohol awareness program is in full swing on campus in an effort to acquaint students with the dangers of drinking. Dean of Students Terry B. Smith has reissued a set of 1977 guidelines to all campus organizations which outlines what actions the University will take if the organizations violate state laws regarding alcohol abuse. This fall a 19-year old sophomore, David Andres of St. Louis, died as a result of voluntary overconsumption of alcohol.

Dialogue seems to be the key word for Iranian students attending NMSU after the U.S. citizens were taken hostage in Tehran. The United Campus Ministries sponsored an evening when Iranian and American students exchanged views. Immigration officials were on campus in December to register the Iranians.

Kirksville jewelry store owners report a brisk business from students hoping to take advantage of high gold prices. Many University students are turning in class rings, old watch cases and Army medals.

The end of an era is on the horizon as Kirksville voters approved a bond issue to build a new junior high school, thus vacating the Ophelia Parrish Building on the NMSU campus after more than 50 years. The new facility is expected to be ready sometime in 1981. Meanwhile a feasibility study will be conducted to determine the future of Ophelia Parrish.

The Campus Coin Laundry at the corner of Patterson and South Franklin is closed. The University purchased the building from Cliff Rogers when it came on the market late last year. Future use of the building is undecided.

The 1979 IFC Scholarship Cup went to Alpha Tau Omega fraternity with a cumulative grade point average of 2.76 on a 4.0 scale. The ATO pledge class also was the campus leader with a 3.0 grade point average.

QUEEN IN OVERALLS—Sue Williams, former Miss Iowa Hereford Queen, feeds the cattle at the Animal Health Technology Barn on the campus of Northeast Missouri State University.

Overalls Fit Women in Agricultural Careers

by Mary Rhodes
Student Staff Writer

When Sue Williams tells her friends she wants to be a farmer, most are surprised that a former queen would trade her crown for a pair of overalls.

But the former Miss Iowa Hereford Queen and sophomore at Northeast Missouri State University says she feels her career choice is "the natural thing to do."

After completing her degree in animal husbandry and animal health technology, Sue says she hopes to return to the family farm near Iowa Falls, Iowa, where she has already started building her own herd of registered Hereford cattle.

She says her friends find her occupational choice somewhat unusual for a woman. But women majoring in agriculture are common at NMSU since more than 41 percent of the 267 agriculture majors are female. Five years ago less than five percent of the majors were women.

"My friends sometimes don't understand my farming interest, especially with the big cattle. But I've been working on our farm helping my dad with the cattle as long as I can remember. My dad needed the help and I really enjoy working with the animals," she says.

Being a female never stopped anyone in her family from helping with the farming operation.

"My mother has always helped with the cattle. I guess I've always been a little bit of a tomboy," she admits. "It wasn't any big deal for me to get out and help with the cattle branding, dehorning or anything else that was necessary."

Sue even helps with the hay baling and boasts she can buck hay, too.

The Williams family operates a 500-acre farming operation with 80 head of registered Hereford cattle while raising field crops of soybeans and corn.

Sue first became involved with cattle when she was only nine years old and started raising her first calf for 4-H shows. By age 10 she was showing registered cattle at county and state fairs. To date she has won more than 20 blue ribbons and the Grand Champion Award for a Hereford heifer at the Hardin County Iowa Fair.

The money she has earned raising calves has paid for her first two years of college.

"It makes you feel great to see the cattle that you have spent so much time raising win at the fairs," she says. "It's really exciting to win especially since we have been the underdogs by working with mainly a middle bloodline developing it into a top-rate one."

Sue's decision to work in agriculture has received much encouragement from her parents.

"I think my dad was happy to see me follow in his footsteps because my brother will probably go into a career in journalism or dramatics," she says.

Originally Sue had planned to attend NMSU for two years to obtain a certificate in animal health technology. But because of the expanding agricultural programs being added at the University, she decided to stay two more years for a degree in animal husbandry.

Currently, NMSU has received the governor's recommendation for a $1.6 million agricultural addition because its program is the most rapidly growing among universities in Missouri while having the most limited facilities.

A significant growth of 112 percent in the enrollment in the agriculture program has demanded the expansion of the facilities along with the addition of several instructors.

Plans for the new facility call for specialized labs in animal physiology, meats and plant science. In addition to the labs, the new facility would provide additional agriculture classrooms and faculty offices. The agriculture programs now are carried on in temporary facilities with one laboratory in the existing Industrial Education Building, constructed in 1970.

NMSU now offers many areas of study in agriculture including agriculture education, agri-business, certificate, agronomy, agronomy certificate, animal health technology, animal science certificate and general agriculture.

By obtaining both a certificate and degree in agriculture, Sue says she will be flexible in employment opportunities as she realized marriage and a family might alter her plans.

"No matter where I live I will always want to work in agriculture. If I marry someone who lives on the farm it will be great. But if I marry someone from the city there are plenty of jobs related to agriculture in industry I could do, too. I can always fall back on my training in animal health technology."

Her father's farming operation probably couldn't support both of them now. But she would also like to work as a field representative for a cattlemen's association while building up her herd.

"There aren't very many women in agriculture right now. In fact, the Hereford association in Iowa doesn't have any women as field representatives, although women are starting to enter these positions in other beef associations.

"I'm not a women's libber, but I do think women can have a place in agriculture.

"Agriculture is increasingly becoming an important industry in our country. I want to be a part of it," she says.

Tap Room is local 'hot spot' in 1980

by T. Grant Peery
Student Staff Writer

The sign hanging above the front entrance to the boarding house proclaiming "Traveler's Fireproof Hotel" would have flashed its neon light in reddening embarrassment had it known what was happening in the hotel basement at about midnight on Jan. 10, 1980.

The Kirksville Fire Department received a fire alarm at approximately 12:20 a.m. and proceeded to the hotel where firemen found the basement engulfed in flames and smoke beginning to fill the upper stories of the structure. The fire was reported by employees of the Tap Room who were in the bar, along with about 40 patrons, at 12 midnight.

Ron Roling, a bartender at the Tap Room, said he noticed the place filling up with smoke and decided to try to locate the source. "We thought the fireplace might be backing up, so we checked it out," said Roling. "Then, I went back and scoped on the bathroom. I saw smoke coming through the upper wall of the bathroom. That's when we called the fire department."

Another employee of the Tap Room, Phil Colbert, was at the bar, but not working when the fire broke out.

"Phil went into the back room and checked the back door which connects the Tap Room to the Traveler's," said Roling. "He saw flames about six feet from the door. If he hadn't checked that, the whole place would have gone. He was the unsung hero."

Roling explained that he was able to stop the firemen, who were going upstairs and direct them downstairs. "By the time they got there, the back door was on the verge of catching fire. The back room was full of flammable stuff."

After notifying the fire department, the bartenders began to evacuate the customers.

"Nobody really wanted to go," Roling said. "They thought it was a hoax. Of course, at 12 midnight, you know how it gets. We had to kind of take it easy. Once outside, no one was allowed back in."

Pam Webster, a senior from Lancaster, Mo., was standing at the bar when she noticed the smoke. "Everyone kept saying that it was plastic cups in the fireplace," she said. "We could smell it. I told them I didn't think it was cups."

Jenny Pickett, director of Blanton-Nason Halls, got quite a surprise and Pancake City, Joey and Johnny's Pizzeria and the Tap Room had only minor smoke damage. Undaunted by all the confusion, the two latter establishments opened for business on the following day.

Had the Tap Room been gutted out beyond repair, a piece of the University history and tradition would have gone up in the smoke.

BADLY BURNT BASEMENT-Charred doorways and blistered walls provide evidence of the fire that put the heat on the bottom floor of the Traveler's Hotel. The upper stories received only smoke damage.

from the chain of events which occurred. "We were celebrating my birthday and there were about ten of us sitting at a table. Another lady and I went to the bathroom about 12:05. When we came back, everyone was gone except for about ten people. I asked Gary Berg, who was sitting next to me, 'Is it one o'clock? Everyone is leaving.' About then, the bartender asked us to go outside."

Although most of the people were able to leave the bar and hotel safely, seven persons were injured, two of them seriously. One female resident of Traveler's received leg injuries when she jumped from her fourth floor room to a shed roof, three stories below. The sad segment of this incident is that the flames never came within three floors of the woman. Another resident was seriously injured from smoke inhalation.

It seems a miracle that no one was killed in the Great Kirksville Traveler's Hotel Fire. Almost as unbelievable is the fact that none of the businesses involved were burnt to the ground. The hotel received only smoke damage to its upper stories, Ever since its arrival in 1933 after the Prohibition era, the Tap Room lounge has been a favorite with not only NMSU students, but also Kirksville College of Osteopathic Medicine students. The interior of the bar, complete with its original, initial-carved barrel tables and soul-warming fireplace, continues to hold an atmosphere which relaxes the mind after a hard day of classes. Even University instructors and administrators sometimes visit the bar to mingle with the students in their own territory. While other establishments in the Kirksville area have tried disco lighting and music or other means to create an enjoyable environment, the Tap Room carries its own such environment naturally.

Whether it was luck, fate, alert bartenders, or the spirit of beer drinkers past that saved the Tap Room from the Great Kirksville Traveler's Hotel Fire, no one can say for sure. One thing for certain is that, barring further such incident, the Tap Room will continue to serve and please the college crowd as it has been doing since its opening more than 45 years ago.

BARROOM BLISS-Patrons of the Tap Room may congregate in the rear of the building for a game of eight-ball, grab a booth near the front or gather at the bar for a chat with bartender Fred Vocke.

SIGN SLIP-UP-The Traveler's sign remains intact after firemen were able to contain the blaze in the basement.

Non-education Degrees Increase During Decade

by Mary Rhodes
Student Staff Writer

Although NMSU has been known primarily for its production of teachers, the number of non-education degrees granted has increased in the last 10 years.

According to a report compiled by the University, the number of B.S. degrees granted in 1979 increased 68 percent from 1969 with the number of B.A. degrees rising 77 percent.

Figures indicate a larger percentage of the total number of undergraduate degrees are being issued in non-education fields. In 1969 only 26 percent of the total undergraduate degrees issued were B.S. degrees while in 1979, 55 percent of the total degrees issued were B.S. A total of 64 B.A. degrees were granted this year, the largest number in 10 years.

The report also showed that fewer students are majoring in education with the number of degrees in that area decreasing by more than half in the past 10 years. Yet for the first time since 1973, the number of B.S.E. degrees increased in 1979. The number of B.S.E. degrees should remain stable although the share of the total degree production may fluctuate, according to the report.

With the addition of many certificate programs into the curriculum, the number of certificates granted has increased significantly. In 1979 the number of certificates issued increased 68 percent making it the largest total since 1971.

The percentage of B.S. degrees granted to women increased from 17 percent in 1972 to 37 percent this year. Women were primarily majoring in home economics, nursing and social science, although an increasing number of degrees in business were being granted to women.

In the field of education, 72 percent of the B.S.E. degrees were awarded to women compared to 55 percent in 1972. The report stated men have shifted from the B.S.E. program to other degrees at a faster rate than women.

The number of M.A. degrees granted decreased 27 percent in 1979. A 40 percent decrease in the number of women receiving M.A. degrees was the most noticeable change from 1978.

Overall, the total number of degrees and certificates awarded in 1979 was down five percent from the previous year, according to the report.

A total of 1,286 degrees and certificates were handed out in 1979 compared to 1,352 in 1978. In the 10-year study of degrees issued at NMSU, the report showed the number of degrees and certificates peaked in 1974 at 1,698. Based on enrollment trends the degrees granted should increase slightly in 1980, according to the report.

At the college level, Peterie was an instructor at UMC before obtaining his present position.

The NMSU graduate has displayed his work in more than 100 local, state, regional and national exhibitions and has works in more than 100 private and public collections.

Lyceum Series Stages Varied Entertainment

by Peggy L. Davis
Student Staff Writer

What do Eleanor Roosevelt, Vincent Price, Helen Keller, the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, Harry Chapin, former President William Howard Taft, and newspaper columnist Drew Pearson have in common? They all have taken part in the Lyceum programs presented throughout the years at Northeast for the benefit of the University and the community.

Today, the programs are part of the Lyceum Series. The word "lyceum" is of Greek origin meaning "an organization sponsoring such presentations as lectures and concerts." The programs are for education, culture and entertainment, said Dr. Gilbert Kohlenberg, professor of history, who has been chairman of the Lyceum Committee since it was reorganized in the spring of 1960.

The first cultural programs were started in 1899 under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association when the college was the North Missouri Normal School, and was called the Lyceum Lecture Course.

In the academic year of 1898-99, the Young Men's Christian Associations of the Normal School and the American School of Osteopathy jointly established a lecture course. According to the Centennial History of the Northeast Missouri State Teachers College, "Their purpose was to bring to the campus the best possible lectures, music and entertainment talent." The YMCA Lecture Course helped the students keep up with the times since television and radio were not yet in existence.

From 1899 until 1924, the lectures presented eminent personalities such as Vice President Thomas R. Marshall, former President Taft, and Helen Keller who spoke on various topics.

One unfortunate incident happened on Nov. 5, 1913, during one of the Lyceum courses featuring The Ben Greet Players, an English company staging Shakespearean plays.

Walter H. Ryle, a country boy who had just started Normal School in September 1913, had gone to see the "Merchant of Venice," the first cultural program he had a chance to see in Kirksville.

Since he went an hour early to get a good seat, Ryle saw the manager of the players take down the large American flag, which detracted from the scenery on the stage. The Ryle went on to become president of NMSU.

The last YMCA Lecture Course was an address by statesman William Jennings Bryan on March 25, 1924. He spoke on "The Three Involuntary Relationships of Life."

The YMCA course became the Community Lecture Course sponsored by the Kirksville community and the various schools. It later became a part of the Civic Music Organization, a national organization started in the 1930s to provide cultural opportunities for the public.

In the spring of 1960, the community committee had trouble getting support. They then came to the University for help. Ryle, who was then president of NMSU, organized a committee for the new Lyceum Series, consisting of six faculty and staff members and three townspeople from the Civic Music Committee. Dr. Gilbert C. Kohlenberg, then head of the Division of Social Science, was named chairman. After 1967 townspeople no longer sat on the committee. In the 1970s representatives of the Student Senate were added; later the student members of the Lyceum Committee were the president and vice president of the Student Activities Board.

One of the Lyceum programs that Kohlenberg remembers best in terms of impact was Eleanor Roosevelt's lecture on March 21, 1961. She spoke before a packed auditorium with audience members seated behind her on the stage. The wife of the former president spoke on, "Is America Facing World Leadership?"

Other programs have featured newspaperman Pearson, who spoke about his interview with Russian leader Nikita Khrushchev; the Milwaukee Ballet company in 1977; and the Claude Kipnis Mime Theatre in March 1979.

The New York Brass Quintet performed in 1973; Chuck Berry was on campus in 1976; Harry Chapin performed in the Homecoming

Vincent Price

Concert in 1976; and Leonard Nimoy was the guest lecturer in 1977 with numerous other performances during the years.

Today, Kohlenberg and the Lyceum committee still see the need for the series. Students, along with faculty and staff members and the community, continue to attend the programs in large numbers to see programs such as the St. Louis Symphony, which performed for the fourteenth time at NMSU on Nov. 15; and the Kansas City Philharmonic, which is also sponsored by the Missouri Arts Council, on March 4, 1980.

The rest of the series slated for the 1979-80 year was Broadway's smash comedy "Deathtrap" on Feb. 20; New Orleans Ragtime Orchestra on March 24; and nationally syndicated columnist Garry Wills on April 17.

Although students now have the opportunity to hear and view cultural events on radio and television, NMSU will continue to provide culture, education, and entertainment through the Lyceum Series.

NCATE Survey Sent to Alumni

A comprehensive questionnaire requesting institutional, demographic, professional education and programmatic information from alumni was sent to teacher education majors of the 1975 to 1979 classes in late February.

The questionnaire is part of the evaluation process Northeast Missouri State University is undergoing for re-accreditation of its teacher education programs by the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education.

The response of NMSU graduates is needed to address many of the standards outlined by the NCATE association and to assist in establishing the credentials of Northeast Missouri State University with the organization.

Visitation on campus by an NCATE Team is presently scheduled for fall 1981. At that time, a strenuous and rigorous examination of the teacher education programs will validate the institutional report and determine NMSU's status as an NCATE institution.

Students Exchange Campuses

by Peggy Davis
Student Staff Writer

"Living a thousand miles away from home is a lot different from living a hundred miles away from home," said Chris Neill, a junior from Butte, Mont.

Neill is the first student to transfer to Northeast Missouri State University on the National Student Exchange program which is in its second year of operation. It was started last year at the University by Deanna Apperson, assistant to the dean of students.

Started nationally in 1968, the program allows students like Neill the opportunity to spend all or part of their sophomore or junior years at one of the 45 state-supported institutions at in-state (resident) tuition fees, said Keith Syberg, coordinator of the program.

Syberg said the exchange program is divided into two plans. Under Plan A the student would pay the host college's tuition and fees. Under Plan B the student would pay his own college's tuition and fees. NMSU is under Plan B. Students may keep their financial aid that they received from their own college.

Most of the students who are enrolled at Northeast are from this area, Syberg said. Students may apply for the program and get the chance to be on their own while going to another college in a different area, which Syberg thinks is the greatest benefit of the program.

Neill said she has "grown up a lot" since she has come to NMSU. She thinks that the exchange program is a good one, giving her a greater insight into Midwestern culture and people. She finds the students somewhat more sophisticated than those back at Montana State University.

Neill, who is a graphic arts major, says, she enjoys the beauty of the campus, especially the architecture of the buildings.

She said that Montana State has more of a technical approach to graphics, whereas at NMSU she has been given a "real boost" to her art education.

Her limited background in art was one of the reasons that she chose Northeast. She also picked NMSU because of its central location to St. Louis, Kansas City and Chicago. The main reason she applied for the program was her desire to be on her own.

About 30 students applied to go on the program under its first year of existence at Northeast. However, only five students are currently on the program. Those on the programs are juniors Joel Caton from Nelson, New Mexico State University; Lisa Staples from Springfield, California State University-Chico; Lela Kathleen Hill from Rea, Montana State University; Valerie Lynn Schaffner from St. Charles, California State University-Chico; and sophomore Kim Perry from Oskaloosa, Iowa, Moorehead State University.

Once these students come back to Northeast, they will evaluate the program, Syberg said. He is not yet working solely on expanding the program, but is evaluating how the participating students and universities benefit from the exchanges.

His goal is eventually to send 25 to 30 students to other colleges through the exchange.

The cost of the program is $400 a year for NMSU. "If the students get something out of it, then it is $400 well-spent," Syberg said.

Childhood Program Translated to Costa Rica

by Peggy Davis
Student Staff Writer

Elizabeth Evans did not go to Costa Rica in summer 1979 on a vacation. She went to work.

Evans, assistant professor of education at Northeast Missouri State University, specializes in early childhood education.

She was invited originally by the government of Costa Rica to design a three-level child development center and playground, to plan the curriculum for children three months up to six years, and to train teachers for public and private schools.

"It was a tremendous experience. I have never worked harder," she said.

As a representative of NMSU, she was the first faculty member to participate with the Teacher Exchange Program with the Universidad Nacional de Heredia.

She was assisted by Vera Gomez-Piper, originally from Costa Rica, who has attended the Universidad Nacional. Piper, NMSU instructor in Spanish, received her B.S.E. in 1969 and her M.A. in May 1979 from Northeast.

While in Costa Rica, Evans' main duty was to develop and to plan programs and lectures. Piper interpreted and adapted them into Spanish for Evans, who spoke little Spanish.

Evans said she could not have accomplished what she had without the help of Piper. "We were a team." Piper could pick up on what she was lecturing and understand right off what she was trying to get across. "Vera knew where to add the emphasis and personal touches in the right places."

"I felt a great satisfaction in helping other teachers and in providing new ideas in childhood education," Piper said. "We had a lot of good times, but we worked hard."

While in Costa Rica, from the first of June to the middle of August, Evans and Piper gave more than 35 lectures throughout the country in communities, and public and private schools.

Many of their days started at 7 a.m. and ended at 10 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays. The lectures could last from six to eight hours, Evans said.

One such lecture she recalled was one that took place in an all-purpose tin building in a rural area at Nicoya during a hot afternoon. "Sweat was running off of our faces as we lectured," Evans said.

More than 200 Costa Ricans gathered around them listening to the lecture. Evans said she was shouting to Piper so she could translate while Piper was shouting to the Costa Ricans so they could hear.

After they finished, the audience just hung around, Evans said. They were then asked if they could come back for the evening to lecture some more.

They discovered that it was not the teachers, but the administrators who saw the need for this type of education and sought them out to lecture.

Education has always been one of the greatest priorities of Costa Ricans, and even more so since it was the International Year of the Child, Evans said. The government and the University pushed for more educational programs since it was during this year.

For two weeks at the University,

COSTA RICAN VISIT—Elizabeth Evans (center) presents a copy of her book on child development to University President Charles J. McClain. Evans, writing the book for the Costa Rican government, toured the country in summer 1979 with Vera Piper, who translated Spanish lectures for Evans.

Evans and Piper lectured morning, afternoon and evening to more than 150 students.

In addition to the lectures, Evans wrote a book in 2 1/2 weeks for the Costa Rican university on development of children from three months to six years including curriculum and building plans.

Besides planning the early childhood center at the National University, Evans launched the early childhood teacher education program at Texas A and M in 1968 and 1969 where she did doctorate study. She also had planned a childhood program in Manitoba, Canada.

Her education also includes a B.S.E. and an M.A. in Early Elementary Education from Northeast and special work in early childhood at Colorado State University at Greeley and Mills College in Oakland, Calif.

Evans is involved with several childhood associations, having served on the International Kindergarten Board of the Association for Childhood Education and the Editorial Board of the Journal. She is currently on the International Infancy and Early Childhood Committee of ACE and is vice president of the Missouri Kindergarten/Early Childhood Association for Childhood Education. She is an active member of Organisation Mondiale Pour L'Education Presolaire.

Evans said the exchange was a "fine professional experience." But "it was not a vacation."

PLANET-SIZED ACHIEVEMENT FOR NMSU GRADUATE—An oil painting by Gerald D. Walker, a 1978 honor graduate of Northeast Missouri State University, has been accepted for display in the Missouri State Capitol Museum.

The work depicting the first lunar landing was chosen by a commissioned jury for approval of the Missouri Executive Office.

Walker is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Merle D. Walker of Kirksville.

PORTRAIT OF AN EDUCATOR—Dr. Gilbert C. Kohlenberg (right), former head of the Social Science Division at Northeast Missouri State University, was honored at a faculty division meeting on Thursday, Jan. 17.

Faculty members and alumni of the division donated a portrait of Dr. Kohlenberg to the University. Accepting the portrait is Dr. James J. Lyons, who has assumed the duties of division head.

In presenting the portrait, Dr. Ruth W. Towne, professor of history, said the gift is a tribute to Dr. Kohlenberg's service to the division, to the University and to higher education. She is the only current member of the division to serve with Dr. Kohlenberg for his entire term.

Dr. Kohlenberg was division head from 1955-79 when he returned to full-time teaching as professor of history. He joined the faculty in 1950.

His education includes a bachelor's degree from Shurtleff College, Alton, Ill., a master's degree from Washington University, St. Louis, and a doctorate from the University of Illinois, Urbana.

The portrait was painted by William Unger, artist-in-residence at the University. It will hang in the Social Science Division office in Room 214 of the Administration/Humanities Building.

Sigma Tau Gamma Alumnus Is Named "Man of the Year"

Greg Rumpf, 1979 graduate of Northeast Missouri State University, received the Ellsworth C. Dent Man of the Year Award from Sigma Tau Gamma social fraternity during its national convention in August 1979 in Pittsburgh.

This award is the highest bestowed annually upon a Sigma Tau Gamma member and graduating senior. This is the first time it has been received by a member of the NMSU chapter.

At NMSU, Rumpf was president of Student Senate and of Sigma Tau Gamma and was a member of Interfraternity Council. He graduated in August 1979 with a B.A. in Political Science with an area of concentration in Public Administration.

Rumpf presently is an administrative assistant with the city of Moberly.

Honors Program Offered To High School Students

How can a student get college credit before graduating from high school? Through the High School Honors Program at Northeast Missouri State University.

The program allows superior high school sophomores and juniors to earn college credit by taking summer classes at the University. The students either commute to classes or live on campus in University residence halls.

Up to 12 semester hours of credit may be earned in 10 weeks each summer.

To be eligible for the High School Honors Program, students should have taken a nationally recognized test such as the SCAT, PSAT, ACT and CTMM.

As an alternative, a free examination to enter the program will be offered at 10 a.m. Saturday, April 19, in Room 103 of the Administration/Humanities Building.

Interested students may send applications and letters of recommendation to:

Grad Attends Oxford University To Study English Literature

After Kitti Carriker Eastman (B.A. 1979) visited the home of novelist Thomas Hardy at Dorchester, England, she was inspired to read six of his novels.

"It helped me to relate personally--once you've seen the places you've read about, they seem so real," she said.

Kitti received her B.A. in English from Northeast Missouri State University in May 1979. In summer 1979 she had the opportunity to see much more than Hardy's home as she Kitti, who eventually plans to teach on the college level, said she feels her stay of Oxford will enhance her career. "I'm glad I went; the experience will help when I teach," she said.

She is a graduate assistant in the Language and Literature Division working towards the completion of her master's degree in summer 1980 in addition to her work in the Northeast writing lab.

Kitti is the daughter of Willard and spent six weeks studying at Oxford University in England.

Kitti scheduled her own literary field trips to supplement those she took in class. "I went to Stratford, Canterbury, and Hardy country to name just a few," she said.

Mary Carriker, Wentzville, Mo. She recently married Bruce Eastman (B.A. 1978).

"I'd definitely say Oxford lives up to its reputation," she said. "I think the study is more personal there; they emphasize it above all else."

Ways to Preserve Education Outlined in Lecture

Dr. W. Lloyd Johns, president of California State University, Sacramento, named education as another resource to preserve at the 23rd annual Baldwin Lecture of Northeast Missouri State University on March 20.

"Education, a vital national resource, is the chief mechanism our society has to provide intellectual strength, to preserve the resources necessary for the good life, and to help keep alive our spirit of national pride and dignity," he said.

Dr. Johns spoke to 350 persons in the Georgian Room of the Student Union Building.

Traditionally prominent educators are invited to discuss issues in education at the Baldwin Lecture held in honor of Joseph Baldwin, the University's founder and first president.

Higher education as a national resource is a $50 billion-a-year enterprise that employs nearly two million people working in some 3,000 institutions serving 11 million students, Dr. Johns said.

In addition, more Americans than ever before now have college degrees. In 1978 almost 16 percent of American adults over the age of 25 had college degrees in contrast to 4.6 percent in 1940, 6.2 percent in 1950 and 7.7 percent in 1960.

A college degree still means more earning power, he said. The median income of high school graduates has dropped from 73 percent of college graduates in 1956 to 71 percent in 1978.

"The future, internationally, belongs to the educated nation—the highly educated nation," Dr. Johns said.

But education has to be defended. Education as an institution has come to be viewed with suspicion along with the family, church, government or business.

"It is not suspicion based on research, or even a carefully considered loss of confidence. It lies in the viscera, not the cerebrum."

He described the suspicion as based on "a feeling that since the world is so complex and the problems so bewildering, it is better to doubt everything but that which provides immediate pleasure. In fact, the rallying cry of those caught up in this odd combination of suspicion and selfishness could be "Gratification Now!"

To conserve education as a national resource, Dr. Johns suggested four courses of action:

- to get involved in the political process,
- to inform the public of the current value of education,
- to encourage people to register to vote,

faculty and staff members were honored.

Six faculty and staff members who have planned retirement in the 1979-80 academic year were recognized. They are George Bass, Physical Plant; Farrell "Bud" Flynn, Physical Plant; Howard Morris, Physical Plant; Wilbur "Dick" Mullanix, Physical Plant; Dr. H.B. ## Alumni Tour Program For 1980

BAVARIAN Mountains, the pride of Bavaria, interspersed with lakes, and the lower Alpine landscape with its lush pastures. White clouds in a blue sky and white sails on blue lakes. Bavaria is white and blue. But it is also green--green with meadows and woods. There is space for nature and for people who like a quiet life which they can enjoy.

Our tour will provide you with air transportation from Kansas City, accommodations for eight days and seven nights in a tourist style inn, the free use of a rental car with unlimited mileage, two meals per day, AND tickets to attend the Passion Play located in Oberammergau. This tour will be departing July 31 and costs only $1,015 per person.

This play has been performed since the 17th Century when the Plague ravaged Germany. The elders of OBERAMMERGAU made a solemn vow before the altar to stage a play of the life and sufferings of Christ every ten years if they were spared the plague. The town was spared and the play has been performed ever since. Admission to the play is included in the tour price.

Perhaps you would be interested in taking a quick drive to view Innsbruck, the home of the 1976 Winter Olympics. There is much to do and much to see in this entire area. Approximately 2 kilometers from Inzell (the Bavarian village in which you will be staying) exists the so-called "Gletschergarten" (glacier garden). It is the largest of its kind in Germany and offers, because of its particular geological structure, a unique look into the history of earth formations during the glacial period.

In coordination with our unique fly / drive program, we have also designed a fully comprehensive bus tour that visits Munich, Lindau, Zirl, St. Wolfgang, and of course, Oberammergau with admission to the PASSION PLAY. This option costs only $1,125 and includes air transportation, accommodations, private motorcoach transportation, two meals daily and more.

'Here, Lucy...'

by Peggy L. Davis
Student Staff Writer

What happened to Lucy?

For three years, NMSU has been without a bulldog mascot. The last mascot Northeast had was Lucy, a registered English bulldog owned by the Tom Schertzer family of Kirksville.

Lucy, who was born in December 1970, obtained the status of Bulldog mascot for Northeast in 1972 and held it until 1976, when she died in her sleep in December.

Lucy received her position of mascot because of her connections. The Schertzers were friends of Russell Sloan, who was NMSU's head football coach from 1969-72. Sloan asked the Schertzers to let Lucy be the mascot, and for four football seasons she was.

Schertzer said Sloan "was bananas over Lucy." Many times Sloan would pick up Lucy and take her to football practice and let her run loose on the field while the team was practicing, Schertzer said.

Schertzer or one of his three children usually took Lucy to the football games. When they could not, one of the cheerleaders would usually come by and pick her up. Schertzer said Lucy was a friendly dog. "She really enjoyed going to the games."

Before going to the games, Lucy was bathed and dressed in a purple knitted sweater. He said that the minute Lucy was driven to the game and heard the band playing, she was ready to go down to the playing field.

Lucy usually stayed on the sidelines on a leash with the cheerleaders or with team members. However, in one game, Lucy got loose and ran out onto the playing field. She was finally caught and taken to the sidelines. There is only so much that a mascot is allowed to do, but one thing that the mascot did do is add incentive to win, Schertzer said.

Besides attending games, Lucy also had ridden on Homecoming floats, had attended pep rallies, had been on local TV shows and had several promotional and news pictures taken, one with the Homecoming queen candidates, Schertzer said.

Although Schertzer had bought Lucy for a pet and to raise bulldogs, Lucy never had any puppies. He said, "I figured her (Lucy's) calling was to be a mascot."

And maybe soon, another bulldog will have the calling to be a mascot for Northeast.

BIGGER THAN THE AVERAGE BULLDOG--Rich Smith, a sophomore from Park Forest, Ill., becomes a very tall Bulldog when he turns into the mascot for Northeast Missouri State University. Smith is six feet tall.

Sophomore Hears Bulldog's Call

by Steve Looten, Index Staff Writer

Since the 1979 Homecoming football game against Central Missouri State University from Warrensburg Oct. 27, athletic contests at Northeast Missouri State University have gained an added attraction—Rich Smith.

Though his name may only be recognizable to his friends, Smith instantly becomes a well-known campus personality when he dons his six-foot, dark brown uniform.

Smith, a sophomore, is the Bulldog mascot.

The mascot is a creation of the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity. "We thought it would be a good idea," Don McCollum, junior president of the fraternity, said.

Smith said, "Some of the guys saw me doing flips at the house and thought I would do well (as the mascot). Besides, they think I'm half-crazy anyway."

Smith's gymnastic interests also aided him in his selection as mascot. He was a gymnast at Rich East High School in Park Forest, Ill., for three years.

The mascot suit is made of two shades of brown fur, with the headpiece being sewn atop an old army helmet. It cost $200, Smith said. Jo Newman, wife of Wayne Newman, director of financial aids, made the costume.

Though the fraternity is responsible for the mascot, they do not want it to be simply for the fraternity's enjoyment, but for the entire campus. "We want to promote spirit and give people something to laugh at while at the games. It is just our way of contributing," Smith said.

He cites his favorite antics as lifting his leg at referees and opponents, chasing youngsters around the court, and stealing the ball from the ball boy, Aaron Pitney, eight-year-old son of assistant coach, Ben Pitney. "He (Pitney) takes his job so seriously that occasionally he will get mad at me," he said.

"I also like to slide across the floor on my stomach during the introductions before the game. The little kids all like it," he said.

Though he said he has not been informed of what he should and should not do as mascot, Smith has set a few guidelines. "I don't want to infringe on the game at all," he said. Ted Giannoulas, San Diego's chicken mascot who began the recent mascot craze, is famous for his humorous arguments with major league baseball umpires. However, Smith does not want to follow suit. "I can't see myself arguing with a referee, though there have been times I wanted to. They have a rough enough job as it is," he said.

From the start, Smith was careful not to upstage the cheerleaders. "But I have been going to their practices lately, and they plan to insert me in some of their mounts and pyramids."

Smith also has a few other ideas to expand his talents as mascot. "The uniform is like my own little sauna suit, but now I can do flips and handsprings without it bothering me."

"When I put on the dog's head, I become the dog and hyper-energy seems to shoot through me. Basically I'm a shy person. The uniform helps me come across to people a lot better," Smith said. "As long as nobody objects, I'll continue doing it."

So run and hide, little kids. Watch where you stand, referees. And beware Aaron Pitney, Smith plans to be haunting you for at least two more years.

Football Coach Recognized

Bob Evans (B.S.E. 1949) has been recognized as one of the premiere high school football coaches in the state of Iowa by the Des Moines Sunday Register. Evans is into his 24th year as head football coach at Mount Pleasant High School.

After 23 seasons at Mount Pleasant, his record stands impressive. His career record is 149-46-4 with 40 consecutive wins between 1957-61. His teams have won 12 Southeast Six and Southeast Seven Conference titles.

The 1963 team under Evans was undefeated, untied and unscored upon as it was named the mythical state champion by United Press International.

Evans was named coach of the year by the Register after guiding an undefeated team in 1959. He has also served as president of the Iowa Football Coaches Association; has been a Shrine All-Star game coach several times; and was inducted into the Iowa Football Coaches Hall of Fame in 1969.

After graduating from Macon High School, Evans attended NMSU earning a degree in physical education. He went to Mount Pleasant in 1949 where he was assistant coach before being named to the head position. In addition, Evans has served as the school's athletic director since 1957 and has coached basketball, baseball and golf.

Evans is married to the former Winifred Kimler of Atlanta. She is a 1950 graduate of NMSU with a degree in music education.

They have four children: Stan, Robert, Kathryn and Spence. The family resides in Mount Pleasant.

"REMEMBER THE TIME WE BEAT CAPE, COACH?" Those and other memories of football games spanning at least four decades were relived in St. Louis on Feb. 22 when more than 125 alumni, many former football players, attended an alumni reception in conjunction with a Midwest coaches meeting. Among those joining head football coach Bruce Craddock and his staff were George Anastasoff (B.S.E. 1956), center; President Charles J. McClain, left; and former football coach Red Wade.

The 1920 Version of the Proverbs

A good stand-in is rather to be chosen than great riches, and the favor of the Prof rather than silver and gold.

The wise student laugheth at the faculty's jokes and is passed, but the foolish smileth not and is flunked.

Train up the Freshies in the way they should go and when they are Seniors they will not depart therefrom.

Boast not thyself of thy future grades, for thou knowest not what a Prof may do.

Listen not to the idler nor the loafer, lest thou skip the wrong class and art caught.

Go not in the way of the janitor, for he is a man of force and a policeman by office; his wrath when kindled is a consuming flame; but his leniency, when secured, is a balm to the trembling heart.

Harken unto us, O ye unsophisticated, and attend to the words of our mouths.

Let not thine heart incline toward the fair lady; go not astray in her paths, for verily her mind is set upon the "Princess;" the sign of the "Palace" and "Olympia" lieth in her path; she longeth for "cream chocolates;" and her desire for "Club House Sandwiches" diminisheth not; her love of flowers increaseth daily; yea, both the sweet peas and the violets are objects of her admiration.

Remember now thy father in the days of H. C. L. when the calls on him come thick, for the time draws nigh when he will say unto thee, "My son, thou art no pleasure to me; shuffle for thyself."

A soft answer turneth away wrath, but a soft look opens the purse of the easy.

The prudent man forseeth an examination and crammeth for it; but the simple discerneth it not, and gets flunked.

Swipe not thy fellow-student's fountain pen, nor his text-book, nor yet his note-book, that thy days may be long in this great College, which the State of Missouri hath given thee.
