Jim Barnes, professor of comparative literature, has a selection of several poems included in Dancing on the Rim of the World: An Anthology of Contemporary Northwest Native American Writing, to be released by the University of Arizona Press in September. Barnes' poetry is included because he lived in Oregon for 10 years.

Marlow Ediger, professor of education, received notification that two of his manuscripts have been accepted for publication by the Academy of Pedagogy in the U.S.S.R.

Miles Lovelace, professor of education, served this summer as one of 33 national judges to select the 100 outstanding first-year teachers in the annual American Association of School Administrators "Sallie Mae First-Year Teacher Awards." The two $1,000 winners from each of the 50 states will be announced in a September issue of Newsweek. Judges rate nominations on five categories including academic preparation, leadership in non-academic activities during collegiate years, teaching performance during the first year according to the nominating school district, teaching performance compared to other first-year teachers in the same district and teaching performance according to the judges' criteria.

President Warren congratulates senior Tom Hackworth on being selected to receive a Youth Leader Award from Religious Heritage of America. Hackworth is one of ten youth leaders nationwide who will participate in a leadership conference and be honored during Religious Heritage of America's 40th Annual National Awards Program in Hershey, Penn., Oct. 26-28.

Youth awards are presented to individuals for their outstanding service and commitment to their church, school and community and who demonstrate in their daily lives the principles of honesty, integrity and religious values.

Religious Heritage of America, founded in 1951, is an interfaith association which seeks to establish role models by recognizing men, women and youth who daily apply their faith.

At Northeast, Hackworth has been a member of the varsity cross country team, president of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and a member of Delta Chi fraternity. Hackworth, an interpersonal communication major, is from Liberty, Mo.
