"Pershing at West Point"

President's Comments

How often we have used the phrase, "I wish you were here," when writing home. Though the phrase is old and trite, it expresses my feelings at this time of the year.

We feel a special responsibility to maintain the strength of your alma mater. When you join us for Homecoming 1977, you will have an opportunity to sense the high spirit of the campus. Those of us who have the privilege to serve this fine old school have a unique opportunity. In a sense, we are like children privileged to spend what often seems only a day in a great botanical garden. Our eyes constantly behold the growth of wonderful youth. How we meet our responsibility to them determines in large measure the strength of the University and its reputation as an intellectual center. I genuinely believe that each member of the University community has a new sense of hope and joy about the future of Northeast and its strength as a University.

As we face the future, we are very sensitive to the role and importance of faithful and loyal alumni. We want very much for each of you to maintain a relationship with the University. Achieving this objective is no small assignment. We invite your comments, your suggestions, and your ideas about ways that we can best serve you and best serve the current students who will soon join you as alumni. I sincerely hope that you will return to Kirksville for Homecoming 1977. "Wish you were here" can then be expressed as a hearty "Glad you're here" from your many classmates, professors, and all of us who so much want you to "come home again."

Best Personal Regards,

Letters

Dear Mr. Harrison,

I enjoy reading the NEMOSCOPE and other publications put out by the Alumni Office because I have a warm feeling for Northeast.

As a farm girl, I lived near Bellflower, Mo., and did many jobs of farm life such as plowing corn, milking cows, etc. When I arrived at K.S.T.C. (summer of 1921) I had many dreams. I wanted to teach in high school, be a college dean of women, have a happy marriage (I had two) do foreign mission work and travel. ALL of these goals were realized, not through my own strength but with the help of God. The University means more to me because my brother, N. Webster Rickhoff, who has passed on but was well known as a student, teacher, principal of Greenwood School and guidance director.

I am retired at Presbyterian Homelife, a lovely home in Fulton, Mo. There are many ways of being useful here. Due to eye problems, I can no longer drive a car or carry on with some of my hobbies such as piano playing, vast reading, etc. I have been overseas four times and taught in Iran. I have now been in all the states. The past year I have taken tours to the New England States and Alaska.

The class of 1926 had such a wonderful 50th anniversary reunion the Fall of 1976. I certainly feel indebted to Mr. Harrison, the staff and others who participated for a perfectly wonderful time with many pleasantries which made the occasion great. My thanks are late but nevertheless sincere.

I have not received the NEMOSCOPE regularly but hope to keep my subscription paid up to date hereafter and be able to read about my classmates as well as the faculty and student activities of the present time.

Best Wishes to all,
Cytha E. Rickhoff Bevard Fielder

Dear Mr. Harrison,

I guess it is about time that I check in with you. It was 51 years ago today since I was graduated from Northeast Missouri. I chose the correct profession. Education is what I really enjoyed and I had more than 40 years of it. I ended my career as comptroller of Centenary College of Louisiana in Shreveport.

My wife (Aleatha Hutcheson, formerly a student at Kirksville) and I have been escorting tours for Continental Trailways since retirement. We have taken 27 tours for this company. In fact we just returned Aug. 1 from Nova Scotia and the Atlantic seaboard on a 23-day tour. I am enclosing three folders on tours which are coming up except the Florida Nassau which we took in March.

I want you to know that I owe much to Kirksville and the education I received there.

Aleatha and I have had a wonderful life and are still enjoying it. We went to Hawaii for our 50th wedding anniversary last January.

Our "Good Lord" has been most generous with us and I hope we have represented our institution in a commendable way.

We still hope to get back to the campus if we ever have time.

Sincerely,

Frank D. Austin

Speech and hearing clinic hears need of deaf child

Young Jeremy is a healthy, active 3½ year old boy who lives in northeastern Missouri.

But young Jeremy is far from the normal child for his age.

Jeremy was born deaf.

Because of his handicap, the Speech and Hearing Clinic at Northeast Missouri State University (NMSU), Kirksville, has become of the most important factors in his life.

"It's the guiding light," says Jeremy's grandmother, with whom he lives. "If it wasn't for the clinic here, I don't know where we'd go...St. Louis...Kansas City...I don't know where."

The clinic is one of a few in the state certified by the American Speech and Hearing Association (ASHA), a professional organization of speech pathologists and audiologists, and is utilized by the NMSU Division of Special Programs to provide training and experience for students seeking degrees in Speech Pathology.

Jeremy and his grandmother are not identified because of the clinic's policy on confidentiality. No release of information about any client is allowed without a signed permission form. All records are confidential according to the ethics set by the ASHA.

Jeremy's grandmother first suspected a hearing loss when Jeremy failed to make the normal cooing sounds a child makes, and when he didn't respond to sounds around him. She consulted a doctor who referred her to Dr. J. Paul Hunt, associate professor and audiologist at the NMSU clinic.

Hunt diagnosed Jeremy as having a profound sensorineural hearing loss, a hearing loss due to nerve damage. Hunt instituted a program of weekly therapy and fitted Jeremy with a hearing aid at the age of one.

For the first year the therapy concentrated on teaching Jeremy's family how to cope with his handicap and how to deal with various problems. In turn, they worked with Jeremy at home. Hunt believes that from the outset of a child's training program, the parents are the key counselors, therapists, and educators. Much of the child's success, he says, will be contingent on how effective the parents are.

Clinicians began teaching his grandmother American Sign Language and she enrolled in a class at the University to learn the language. She taught other members of the family and worked at teaching Jeremy sign language. He learned his first sign at the age of ten months.

In the past year the emphasis has shifted slightly to working with Jeremy at the clinic to build up his confidence and reinforce what he is learning at home. According to his grandmother, the clinic has been a constant source of instruction and information on how to deal with various situations related to deafness.

"The reason we don't have any major problems is because of the clinic," she says. "We've had help to answer our questions...they (the clinicians) are here to give us answers and they work!"

According to Hunt, the basic goal of the Speech and Hearing Clinic is to provide full clinical services in the evaluation, clinical management, and counseling of persons with speech, language, and hearing disorders. Other goals include providing a setting in which students majoring in Speech Pathology may acquire required clinical experience under qualified supervision, meeting the needs of the geographical region for clinical services in speech and hearing, and promoting research in the areas of speech, hearing, and language development.

In addition to problems related to hearing loss, the clinic deals with articulation problems, stroke victims, laryngectomy patients, cleft palate, delayed speech and language skills, and stuttering. There are nearly 700 enrolled in the clinic, and over 2,000 diagnostic evaluations are performed yearly.

According to his grandmother, Jeremy has made tremendous progress. "At first he didn't respond at all," she says. Today, however, "He has gained self-confidence...he understands what you say in sign...and he lip reads."

"He does know he's different," she adds, but, "he's very well adjusted." Jeremy will continue his therapy at the clinic until he turns five. At that time he will enter the Missouri School for the Deaf, at Fulton.

Hunt believes that Jeremy will be able to make a healthy adjustment and become self-reliant. One reason, he feels, is because the problem was caught at an early age.

"Early identification is certainly a prime contender in enhancing the prognosis of the congenitally deaf child," Hunt says. "Infants can have their hearing evaluated as early as three days and sometimes hearing impaired infants receive their first hearing aid at six months of age."

"Our clinic here provides the community with a valuable public service, as well as tremendous experience for Speech Pathology majors." Hunt explains that, in order to be certified by the American Speech and Hearing Association, a clinician must submit evidence of the completion of a minimum of 300 clock hours of supervised direct clinical experience with individuals presenting a variety of communication disorders, such as articulation, language, fluency, voice, and aural rehabilitation.

Jeremy, who was born deaf, uses sign language to communicate with Joni Boysen, a Speech Pathology graduate student.

In addition to the clinic, students work in the Kirksville Diagnostic Clinic, Head Start, hospitals, nursing homes, and student teaching. Upon graduation, NMSU Speech Pathology majors work in private and public schools, clinics, and hospitals.

To offset costs, the clinic charges a minimal fee for diagnostic evaluation and for therapy. However, Hunt emphasizes, financial assistance is available and no one is turned away because of an inability to pay.

For Jeremy and his family, the clinic's services have been invaluable. "I had no idea this was here," his grandmother says of the clinic.

But now that she does, she adds, "We're going to keep coming and keep coming until they tell us not to."

Diane Emge

Speech pathologist studies communication disorders

"There are so many areas of communication disorders," says Diane Emge, graduate student at NMSU. "I think graduate school is when they are studied more closely."

Diane received her B.S.E. in Speech Pathology from NMSU last spring and is now working on her master's degree. More states are requiring speech pathologists to have a master's degree to practice, she says. Diane says she wants to be prepared for the possible change in Missouri.

After graduate school, Diane plans to take examinations in speech pathology so she can earn her Certificate of Clinical Competence from the American Speech and Hearing Association.

Another professional group, the University's Speech Pathology Organization (SPO), has provided her with many meaningful experiences outside the classroom. Among the activities the former president of SPO cites are sign language demonstrations, discussions with clients who have had speech disorders, and lectures from experts in speech pathology.

Diane decided to come to Kirksville from her home in O'Fallon, Missouri, because she was offered a Regents Scholarship at NMSU. With a straight "A" average, Diane earned her scholarship for all four years of her undergraduate study. Her academic excellence earned her a graduate assistantship which helps defray expenses.

Besides her scholarship, Diane was attracted to NMSU for other reasons. "It's a friendly campus," she says. "It's pretty too. It's not all brick and concrete. It has more of a personal touch. Everyone's so friendly."

Parents' Orientation helps Mom and Dad to cope

Jim, a college freshman, calls his dad at 11:30 one night, his voice breaking over the phone. "Dad, I just failed my first big test. I'm sure there's no way I can pass this class."

If Jim were your college-age son, what would you do?

That situation is just one of the many parents discuss and are advised about during an informal orientation session called "One Flew Out of the Cuckoo's Nest."

The session was held daily Monday through Thursday during the summer for parents of students pre-enrolling at Northeast Missouri State University, (NMSU) Kirksville. Colleges always have had orientation for students, but, according to Kent Farnworth, director of admissions at NMSU, "Parents need orientation too."

The "Cuckoo" session is the culmination of a day of special sessions designed to inform parents of college-bound students and prepare them for helping their children to succeed in college.

Terry Smith, dean of students at NMSU, emphasizes the concept of family. Speaking to parents of future students, Smith says, "We need your support and you need ours."

"Family is the key word," says Smith. "We at NMSU recognize that you, the parents, can be very influential in helping your son or daughter succeed—if you know what to do. We want to work with parents as a family, to help your students succeed in college."

One of the most unique concepts in the country, the sessions group students by academic majors so that students and their families can meet others with similar interests. The sessions include a discussion by the head of the academic division in which the students are interested as well as programs on residence hall living, campus activities, and question-and-answer sessions with various campus administrators.

Parents ask questions on safety, drugs and alcohol on campus, health services offered, various classes, the Kirksville community, and other areas of interest to them.

The personal contact parents have with various administrators is an important part of the sessions. "Parents can take their questions right to the person in charge," Smith says. "We want to know you and want you to know us," he tells parents.

Dr. Charles McClain, NMSU president, agrees, noting that "NMSU is large enough to provide a diverse and quality education while still retaining the personal touch which is considered characteristic of small schools."

"Our approach to orientation is characteristic of the personal commitment we have to each student. We are concerned about his or her welfare and want to work with parents to help students achieve their full potential both academically and culturally," McClain says.

During the "Cuckoo" session, parents discuss probable situations in small groups and then share their ideas with other parents. Mary Meyer, admissions counselor at NMSU, explains that the session allows parents to prepare themselves to cope with various situations and allows them to share ideas and experiences with other parents.

"Parents appreciate that we want to help them be prepared to act when Jim flunks his test or Mary wants to quit school or any other of several situations which the parents of most college students experience," says Meyer.

"It's been very informative," said one parent of the session, "I appreciate the cordiality and friendliness everyone has shown us."

Another parent added, "I feel much better about having my daughter in school here than I did before today. I was impressed with the concern every speaker showed for the students."

Parents also receive a copy of "The College Adjustment Dictionary (For Parents Only)." This light, humorous booklet is designed to be an aid to detecting problems students may be having—and what to do about them.

Mike Terry, a former admissions counselor at NMSU and one of the authors of the booklet, explains, "Many times students aren't able to tell their parents what the real problem is. The booklet simply points out what a son or daughter might be trying to say to his or her parents."

"College is a genuine adjustment," Smith says. "Our goal is to make that adjustment easier for everyone by equipping parents to deal with problems common to freshman college students."

If your son or daughter made that troubling phone call, would you know what to do?

Smith is confident that, working together, parents of NMSU students will.

Interested parents may obtain a free copy of the College Adjustment Dictionary (For Parents Only) by writing: Director of Admissions, NMSU, Kirksville, MO 63501.

Homecoming Sept. 30 & Oct. 1

After 10 years, shows still runnin' good

The Ice House Theatre in Hannibal.

Alfred H. Srnka, one of the original founders of the Ice House Theatre, served the company as managing director for the summer of 1977.

Ten years ago Al Srnka, now an assistant professor of speech at Northeast Missouri State University, portrayed the role of a Russian ballet master during the opening season of the Hannibal Ice House Theatre. This summer the theatre celebrated its tenth anniversary season and Srnka now serves as a co-director.

"We've had a great many changes in the past ten years," says Srnka. "We started with a repertoire system which means that each night we would give a different performance" he says. "Now we use the stock system which means we perform a play for one week."

In honor of the anniversary, one week, August 2-7, was devoted to the re-creation of a play which was performed during the theatre's first season in 1967.

"You Can't Take It With You" is a classic American comedy of the 30s. It's an important American comedy of family life," Srnka says. He explains, "It's an entirely different production now. The script and characters, of course, are the same, but, the production itself is in no way the same."

No, it's not the same production. Take, for instance, the role of Kolenkhov, which was originally performed at the Ice house by Srnka. "He plays it a little looser than I did," says Srnka, referring to Jeff Tamblin who played the role this summer. "I was more of a traditional ballet master."

Over the past ten years, another tradition has been broken. "We put on two more plays per season now than we did in the original season" says James Severns, professor of dramatics at NMSU, who co-directs the Ice House with Srnka. "We now perform foreign as well as American plays."

In addition to production changes, the theatre has weathered many physical changes. "Tons of old ice making equipment have been hauled away to make extra room for what is now the dressing room area and the green room where performers gather before a production," says Severns.

Srnka notes that, "seating capacity and storage space have increased, workshop space and dressing rooms have been enlarged, and two new air conditioning units, a new roof, and a south wall have been installed."

However, says Severns, "the exterior of the building and the lobby is much the same as it was."

Other changes involve the college students who use the theatre as a laboratory setting while working with the professional staff and technicians of the Ice House.

"The student company has increased its size by two and one half times," Srnka says. "We now attract students from 8-10 states. When we started, only Missouri students were involved."

As participants of the Ice House Theatre Workshop, the students gain a wealth of experience.

"The students get the opportunity to do everything here. They get experience in all areas of the theatre. They do everything from props, costumes, lights, scenery, to box office," Srnka says. "The Theatre is a very good training ground for anyone going into professional theatre or for anyone who plans to teach theatre."

It is also good for the University. "I believe we are the only school in the state with this special arrangement" says Severns. "It's a relatively distinctive arrangement for us and overall it's a good program for the drama department and the University."

Further changes involve the Ice House audience. Srnka says, "Our audience potential has increased greatly, it's better than doubled from when we started ten years ago." The theatre is a good outlet for the people of Hannibal and the tourists. We're getting a good national reputation—we serve a definite function in the community."

It's hard to predict what the future will hold for Hannibal's Ice House Theatre, which is jointly sponsored by NMSU, the Hannibal Foundation, and the Hannibal Chamber of Commerce with assistance from the Missouri Council on the Arts. One can, however, set goals.

"We are aiming for a larger audience" says Srnka. "We'd like to reach out and touch more people."

"We are also reaching for a bigger and better company with more professionals and updated facilities."

Whatever the next ten years may bring, one thing is certain. Future audiences as well as those who visited during this summer's tenth anniversary season will find that though many changes have been made, quality entertainment is still available at Hannibal's Ice House Theatre.

General John J. Pershing begins career as teacher

"I'm going back to Kirksville...I don't know what I'll finally do—probably be a lawyer, but just now I'm going to stick to the school."

When John Joseph Pershing uttered those words in 1879 he had no idea of the brilliant military career that lay before him. Nor could he dream of the immense responsibility, the great personal tragedy, or the fame that one day would be his.

Pershing was destined to command the American Expeditionary Forces (A.E.F.) in World War I and to achieve a rank specially created for him by Congress. That rank, General of the Armies, has been held only by Pershing and George Washington.

Despite his fame, Pershing had a humble, midwestern beginning.

Pershing was born in Laclade, Missouri, just 45 miles southwest of Kirksville in 1860. Pershing's early life was typical of the hardworking rural community in which he was raised.

During the panic of 1873, Pershing ran the family farm while his father went out on the road as a salesman. As he grew older, Pershing was to try his hand at other professions, including teaching. Not being much older than his students in many cases, the future military disciplinarian sometimes had to resort to fists and face gun-packing parents to keep order in some of the rowdy frontier classrooms.

With money saved from his teaching, Pershing sought to improve his skills and enrolled in the spring of 1879 in the North Missouri Normal School at Kirksville, now NMSU.

Pershing's joy in education and his hard work paid academic dividends. His scholastic average at the Normal School was 91 per cent. His department averaged 99 per cent.

In between semesters Pershing taught in area schools. His love for education and the Normal School led him to return to Kirksville in the fall of 1880, along with his brother Jim, whom he had convinced to come to school.

Pershing's diligence for education persisted and on June 17, 1880, he received a Bachelor of Elementary Didactics, or teaching, and was given a certificate to teach anywhere in the state.

Still desiring to further his education, Pershing returned to Kirksville in the fall of 1881 with the intention of becoming a lawyer. By chance he read an advertisement announcing a competitive examination for West Point. Pershing had never considered a military career, but his quest for knowledge coupled with the possibility of a free law education convinced him to take the exam.

Following his graduation from West Point, his active service began with the Sixth Cavalry, in the southwest against renegade Apaches, and then, in 1891, in the Sioux Campaign on the Dakota-Nebraska border.

Later in 1891, he became professor of Military Science at the University of Nebraska where he studied law later to be admitted to the Nebraska bar.

Following Nebraska, Pershing served with the 10th Cavalry and then, in 1897, was assigned to West Point. When the Spanish-American War broke out Pershing was assigned to the 10th and was in the action at the battle of San Juan Hill, along with Col. Teddy Roosevelt.

After the war Pershing became chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs, the department assigned to govern the Philippines. Pershing spent most of the next 13 years there and won acclaim in his campaign to subdue and pacify the Moros.

Pershing's success in the Philippines prompted President Teddy Roosevelt to jump Pershing over 862 senior officers, promoting him from Captain to Brigadier General. The promotion created quite a furor because Pershing had recently married Frances Warren, daughter of Senator Frances E. Warren of Wyoming. The promotion was sustained; however, and Pershing's life with his new wife flourished.

During the next ten years the couple led a happy life in the Philippines. They were blessed with four children, Warren, Helen, Ann, and Mary Margret.

That happiness was shattered, though, shortly after their return to the U.S. Frances and the four children were at the Presidio in San Francisco when a fire broke out while the General was away.

Only little Warren was saved, because he was sleeping in a different part of the house. The others died, apparently of suffocation, in their sleep.

At the time Pershing was commander of the Eighth Brigade on the Mexican border, and later led the Mexican campaign against the bandit gang of Pancho Villa. The sudden death of Major General Fredrick Funston in 1917 moved Pershing up to command the Southern Department in his stead.

When the U.S. became involved in World War I, President Wilson called on Pershing to lead the American Expeditionary Forces. In May 1917, Secretary of War Baker said to Pershing, "I shall give you only two orders, one to go and one to return," as he handed Pershing his papers which made the one time Missouri farm boy the absolute Monarch of a military kingdom which he himself must create.

Armed with not much more than a title, Pershing set sail for Europe with a hastily assembled General Staff. In an official report to the Secretary of War Pershing noted "Prior to our entrance into the war the regiments of our small army were very much scattered and we had no organized units even approximating a division, that could be sent overseas prepared to take the field."

What was even more astounding was Pershing's discovery that there were no plans prepared to meet the situation. The General and his staff studied the factual and strategic plans of the Allies and then prepared a table of organization for the A.E.F. In addition to the combat forces, all support units had to be organized, communications had to be planned, transportation requirements had to be determined, and the kinds of weapons and munitions needed had to be agreed upon and ordered.

Equally important, Pershing became immediately aware of two obstacles, which in his opinion, would prevent the Allies from winning the war. The first was that France and Britain were fighting a losing battle against the Germans by their insistence in keeping to trench warfare.

Pershing felt that a war of movement had to be conducted to break the German supply lines, before new units from Russia could be moved into the front. He believed that if this could be done, Germany would surrender.

The second obstacle was the allied effort to get the U.S. to use its soldiers in their units as replacements for French and British losses. From the very beginning right up to Armistices, Pershing insisted that the Americans would fight as an American Army, under the American flag, and because of his indomitable will, they did.

History proved Pershing right on both counts. Once he felt his troops were ready, the American Army moved out of the trenches in the Argonne and defeated the best Germany had to offer.

Pershing's success won him high acclaim and in 1919 Congress passed a special law to create the rank of General of the Armies. Only Pershing and Pershing's strict military image melted when he could spend some time with his son, Warren.

George Washington have held that rank, the highest rank ever granted, superior to the ranks held by Sherman, Grant, Patton, Marshall, McArthur, Bradley, and Eisenhower.

Following the war, Pershing became one of the chief architects of the nation's defense planning. The National Defense act of 1920 represented what the General believed would be a workable method whereby, when needed a small standing army could expand to include civilian soldiers. Officers and noncoms could train the National Guard, Reserve Officers Training Corps, and others. Through staff and technical schools personnel could keep abreast of the newest changes and developments.

When World War II began, Pershing's foresight proved itself. From small trained cadres, America was able to build a military machine that again was able to defeat the enemy.

Despite his fame, Pershing never lost touch with the midwest from which he sprang. Returning to Laclède shortly after the war, Pershing insisted on walking through the throng that had gathered for his return. Pershing moved through the crowd, recognizing old friends he hadn't seen for years.

Nor did Pershing forget the Normal school that he had loved so dearly. In 1938 Pershing sent a picture autographed: "To the Northeast Missouri State Teachers College with many pleasant memories of my experiences while there as a student back in the late 70s and early 80s, and with a feeling of gratitude and much cordial good wishes for the future. Sincerely John J. Pershing."

Teacher, Indian fighter, Rough Rider, lawyer, General of the Armies. Pershing had never planned a military career. Yet, his love for education prompted him to rise to the highest flights of his profession. It was that same love for education that moved him to decide, "I'm going back to Kirksville . . ."

Pershing, one of only two men to achieve the rank of General of the Armies, became the first Chief of Staff to address the nation by radio, on a coast-to-coast hookup.

About the cover artist

Self-portrait of the artist

The cover is a painting of General John J. Pershing by Gerald Walker. Gerald, 25, is a senior majoring in art at Northeast Missouri State University.

The painting was created as part of a class assignment. It shows Pershing drilling cadets at West Point, Gerald says: "I chose a dramatic viewpoint to emphasize the romanticism of Pershing's career. The color scheme has its basis in his uniform."

Although the West Point uniforms are grey, Gerald combines the grey with blue for more visual impact.

As to his career ambition, Gerald says, "I would like to paint for a living if that is possible in this day and age."

Laclede stands up for General Pershing

"When the last bugle sounds, I want to stand up with my soldiers."

That was John J. Pershing's last wish.

Today, however, Pershing's soldiers, other veterans, friends, and his hometown of Laclede are standing up for him.

Citizens of Laclede and the surrounding communities have formed the Pershing Memorial Museum Development Fund. They have set out to raise $3 million to build a fitting and lasting memorial to the man some consider to be the greatest American general of all time.

"Lest We Forget" is the keynote of the drive to build a national memorial which will not only honor the General of the Armies and his World War I companions, but also will preserve for future generations the story of their contributions to the freedoms enjoyed today.

Designed to include a history of General Pershing's life, equally important will be exhibits and dioramas three-dimensional miniature scenes depicting the World War I.

With monuments having been built to MacArthur, Eisenhower, Patton, and others, the citizens of Laclede feel that the time has come to properly honor the commander of the American Expeditionary Forces in World War I.

With such dignitaries as Governor Joseph Teasdale, August Busch Jr., Senator Barry Goldwater, Lowell Thomas, and General Omar Bradley lending their support, the campaign is gaining headway.

NMSU President Charles McClain has pledged his support saying, "I am eager to cooperate in anyway possible, the time has indeed come to recognize the outstanding achievements of Pershing. As Pershing's alma mater, we at NMSU feel a special sense of pride and distinction in the achievements of Pershing and applaud Laclede's effort to honor their native son."

Headquartered in Laclede, the campaign already has raised over $60,000 locally. Special bronze, silver, and gold commemorative medallions are offered to contributors of $10, $100, and $1000 respectively.

How football kicked off at NMSU

Editor's Note: Much of the data used in this article appeared in the "Centennial History of the Northeast Missouri State Teachers College" by Dr. Walter H. Ryle.

By William Cable
Students, who watched the men kicking and throwing a leather, egg-shaped ball to each other, might have mistaken the activity for a rugby match.

It was the fall of 1899 at the First Normal School (now called Northeast Missouri State University). The game of football, which had caught the fancy of young men on campus, was still in its infancy. Princeton and Rutgers had inaugurated the sport in 1869.

Football had experienced an uneventful debut briefly in 1882 at the Normal School, according to the Kirksville Democrat.

However, during the crisp, autumn months before the turn of the century, a revived interest was thriving. Soon participants chose sides, and learned the rudiments of the game.

But it was the following year before the first official contest was played. On Nov. 2, 1900, the Normal School demolished Oaklawn College, 76-0. Oaklawn was located at Novelty in Knox County, near the home of a Kirksville performer, R.E. Griggs.

The first squad compiled a 3-2-1 overall record, losing to the American School of Osteopathy and Kirksville High School, and playing the University of Missouri "B" team to a 0-0 deadlock. The Osteopathic eleven scheduled a rugged slate of games that included the University of Illinois, University of Missouri and University of Texas.

At that time, it was common for some schools to hire players who were not bona-fide students, and who would perform for several schools under false names. President John R. Kirk strongly opposed this practice, and the Normal School did not schedule these opponents.

The Kirksville College charted its first undefeated campaign in 1903, toppling Central College, Westminster College and William Jewell College. This was the first year that strictly colleges were scheduled by school officials. All games were played in Kirksville.

Although not considered an official coach, Todd Kirk, son of President Kirk, guided the 1903 aggregation. Kirk, a standout for Illinois and Missouri as a student, continued in this role through 1906 without pay.

It was also the same year a large athletic field was laid out in the northwest corner of the campus, and named Kirk Field by the student body for President Kirk.

Several high-water marks were established in 1904. For the first time, the Osteopaths were defeated and an out-of-state foe, as well as another Missouri Normal School (Warrensburg), were on the calendar. The Kirksville team beat Amity College, 11-5, and Warrensburg, 12-6.

O.C. Bell was employed as athletic director and the first paid coach before the 1907 campaign. His best team, and the strongest in the history of the school up to that time, was the undefeated 1908 club (7-0) that did not surrender a point all season.

Nicknamed "Bell's machine" by President Kirk, the 1908 squad was composed of several athletes, who later carved out distinguished professional careers. One of them, H.L. "Curly" McWilliams, was to etch his mark on Northeast football as a successful coach between 1914-25.

But before McWilliams returned to his alma mater, football fell on hard times at the Normal School. After the 1908 season, Kirksville teams won only five of their next 18 games, and President Kirk decided to discontinue the sport in 1912 and 1913.

Kirk reinstated football in 1914, and for the next two decades, the Bulldogs were to dominate the old and new MIAA Conference with 15 championships and co-championships.

McWilliams teams captured two undisputed championships and three others shared the title of the old MIAA. His 1924 aggregation claimed the first crown of the new league, organized that school year.

Three McWilliams' squads—1916, 1920 and 1922—sporting undefeated seasons. But the 1916 edition was considered the strongest by Bulldog followers of that era.

Led by Leo Petree, Alva Motter and David Neal, the team captured Northeast's first MIAA championship. In later years, McWilliams reportedly said the 1916 Bulldogs should be ranked among the greatest of all teams produced by the school.

McWilliams left Kirksville at the end of the 1925 campaign to enter private business in Florida where he still resides today.

His successor was Don Faurot, who assumed his responsibilities as coach and athletic director at the age of 23. Faurot had been an outstanding back for Gwynn Henry at the University of Missouri in the early 1920s.

In the next nine seasons, Faurot compiled the best percentage (.797) of any Bulldog coach before or since that period. His teams won 63 best nationally among college division aggregations of all time.

During the Faurot era, the "Old Hickory Stick" series was started between the Bulldogs and the Teachers College at Maryville. A piece of hickory, about two and one-half feet long, was found on a farm in the Maryville district where Dr. Eugene Fair, president of the Teachers College in Kirksville, was born.

The two teams started playing for the "coveted prize" in 1931. Northeast leads in the traditional series, 24-14-4, but many of the gridiron struggles have produced thrilling, unpredictable finishes. For instance, the Bulldogs won the 1953 contest after time ran out by scoring a touchdown on the final play, which was allowed only because of a penalty assessed against the Bearcats.

A growing interest in the sport was probably instrumental in the construction of Stokes Stadium, named after J.S. Stokes, a former professor at the school. The field was used for the first time in the 1930 home opener under lights. Stokes Stadium was rebuilt in the summer of 1962 to accommodate about 5,000 spectators.

A reunion of Faurot players was held on homecoming weekend of 1974. It was the first time the taskmaster had visited with some of his old warriors since they left school 40 or more years before the occasion.

Faurot-piloted teams received national acclaim. The lanky coach, who today looks as trim as he did in 1923, says only a few schools on the university or small-college level could have handled the Bulldogs of that period.

He insists that athletes like Arnold Embree, Jack Robinson, Willie Barton and Guy Curtright or J.F. have played for any college at that time. Embree may have not been a household name among gridiron fans of that decade, but Faurot considers the Marceline product as the most talented all-around back he coached at Northeast or the University of Missouri. In a 26-6 lacking of Mizzou in 1933 at Columbia, Embree scored three times in the first quarter, once on a 42-yard spinner up the middle.

A week after the 1934 campaign came to an end, Faurot returned to his alma mater to serve as football coach and chairman of the athletic department. According to many observers, the big victory over Missouri a year before and a 1934 win at the expense of St. Louis University may have influenced officials in Columbia to pick Faurot as the man to pump new blood in the Tiger program.

Two months after Faurot's resignation, a younger brother, Fred, was appointed as football and track coach and an assistant for basketball at the Teachers College. "Fritz"

Faurot performed for his older brother in 1928-29, and then competed at Missouri.

Two of his football clubs were MIAA kingpins. The 1936 crew, with a 7-0 mark, was the last Northeast eleven to finish a season without a blemish on its slate. "Fritz" rolled up a 15-5-2 ledger in a three-year coaching career at Northeast. Many of his former players were on hand at the 1974 reunion in Kirksville.

"Fritz" resigned after the 1937 campaign, his only losing season at the helm and the first one for the Bulldogs in two decades.

During the following four years, the Teachers College wrote a sub-par 13-20 record. Football, halted during World War II, was not revived until 1945.

James Dougherty, former standout on Don Faurot teams, was named football coach in the fall immediately after the conclusion of the war. Although his duties were to start in 1946, Dougherty went to work in the waning weeks of 1945 because of the resignation of Vincent Gehring.

The native Northeast Missourian had the arduous job of reorganizing the pigskin program at the College. He guided the 1946-50 squads to a composite record of 18-19-8. A few weeks after the 1950 campaign, Dougherty was ordered back to active duty with the Navy in which he had served during World War II.

Perhaps his biggest contribution as headmaster was putting football on a solid footing again.

His successor, Maurice "Red" Wade, was tapped by Dougherty as an assistant in 1950. Wade, who played for Don Faurot during the previous decade at Missouri, logged the longest coaching career and most victories of any Northeast mentor. The Bulldogs were 99-41-2 for a percentage of .697 while Wade was in charge for 16 years.

Eight of his teams either notched undisputed MIAA crowns or shared the title with other league schools. Three squads also finished in the second spot.

By that time, college division performers were finally beginning to receive more All-American recognition. Five Wade proteges were named to first All-American lists, including Mel Loncaric, NAIA, 1954; Bob Haller, Williamson Rating, 1958; Dale "Paley" Mills, Williamson Rating, 1959 and Associated Press, 1960; Dave Grant, Williamson Rating, 1962; and Rich Rhodes, Associated Press, 1965.

Rhodes later died from wounds suffered as a member of the Army in Vietnam.

Mills set eight NCAA College Division records in a brilliant career from 1957-60. Some of these national marks did not fall until recent years. His career achievement of 4,502 rushing

The first football team chalked up a 3-2-1 record. Members of squad were:

McWilliams, an outstanding back on the 1908 team, later starred at the University of Missouri. He was appointed as athletic director and football, baseball and track coach just before the autumn of 1914.

During 11 seasons, his teams chalked up a record of 48-26-9 for a .578 percentage. His coaching tenure was the second longest of any Bulldog headmaster. Maurice "Red" Wade was in charge for 16 campaigns between 1951-66.

games, lost 13 and tied three while averaging 19.1 points and yielding only 5.3 points per outing.

It has been called by some Northeast followers as the "golden age" of football at the school. Faurot squads claimed six outright conference crowns, and shared the title once. The 1932, 1933 and 1934 teams charted spotless records. They were responsible for 26 of the 27 victories in the school's longest winning streak and the sixth formers and uniforms, but the results are much the same as they were when the game was less sophisticated. The record since 1900 speaks for itself. Teams wearing the purple and white colors have amassed an enviable mark of 339-190-34, the 13th best among all Division II and III schools.

ards still stands as a school standard.

The 1961 edition has been the only Bulldog squad to ever compete in a post-season bowl game. After clinching the school's 16th MIAA pennant, officials of the Mineral Water Bowl invited the Bulldogs to meet undefeated Parsons College of Fairfield, Ia., in a Nov. 25th encounter at Excelsior Springs.

Wade's men subdued the Wildcats, 22-8, in a steady rain and blustery wind that kept 1,000 onlookers shivering throughout the struggle. Two Northeast linemen, Fred Lyles and Grant, were cited by sportswriters covering the game. Lyles was chosen as the outstanding forward wall performer and Grant as the best tackler.

Wade resigned a few weeks after the close of the 1966 season to devote his time as an instructor in physical education.

Marv Braden, a product of the southwest Missouri State University gridiron, was slucked for the head coaching job in the spring of 1967, and remained in that capacity for two years. Braden directed his young teams to a cumulative 9-9 record. He left Kirksville in early 1969 to take the coaching position at U.S. International University, California Western campus in San Diego.

One of Braden's assistants at Northeast was Russ Sloan, a former Missouri end in the late 1950s. He took over the reins in March of 1969, and led the Bulldogs to a pair of MIAA co-championships and an undisputed flag. Sloan's squads posted an overall mark of 22-5-1. His last team in 1971 was only the third one at the Kirksville school to ever capture nine triumphs in a single campaign.

To the surprise of Bulldog fans and adversaries, Sloan announced his resignation in late March of 1972 to enter the race for U.S. Representative from Missouri's Sixth Congressional District.

Randy Lukehart was named to replace him two months later. The new skipper had enjoyed huge success as architect of a South Shelby High School program that fashioned a 47-7-1 mark in five campaigns, including a Missouri Class A title and a second-place finish in the state playoffs.

During Lukehart's tenure, the Bulldogs wrote a 12-18-3 ledger, and finished fourth once and fifth twice in the conference standings. At the end of the 1974 calendar of games, he quit his post to go into business in Kirksville.

In January 1975, Ron Taylor, who quarterbacked Mizzou to an 18-2-1 standard and a 1961 Orange Bowl victory over a highly regarded Navy eleven, was appointed as the new coach by the University Board of Regents.

Although he was forced to begin recruiting efforts at a late date, Taylor signed several promising products for 1975. When first assuming his new responsibilities, he listed three goals for the Bulldogs: A winning record, capturing the conference crown and receiving a bid to the NCAA Division II playoffs.

NMSU posted a 12-7-1 ledger in Taylor's first two years at the controls, and shared the 1976 MIAA title with Southeast Missouri State.

Stokes Stadium, pictured as it appears today, was rebuilt in 1962. The original stadium was used for the first time at the start of the 1930 season.

Students unlimited in magazine publishing

Four former NMSU students are preparing to publish the second issue of their own magazine, STUDENT UNLIMITED.

Steve Bryant, former ECHO editor and INDEX layout artist, is the editor of STUDENT UNLIMITED. Bryant is a native of Millersburg, Mo. Claretta Craven, 1977 NMSU graduate, is an associate editor of STUDENT UNLIMITED. Craven, of Montgomery City, was editor of the '77 ECHO. Deborah Strehle, who served as INDEX editor for the '76 fall semester and currently attends Kansas State University, is also an associate editor. Steven Stout, former ECHO photography editor, is advertising sales director. Stout is from Hannibal, Mo.

STUDENT UNLIMITED is a new publication for college students that will be circulated quarterly on over 70 campuses throughout Missouri and Kansas. The first issue will be distributed on September 1.

STUDENT UNLIMITED is designed to inform, entertain, and record events for college students," Strehle said.

"Our publication is for the socially active, up-to-date student, Stout added. "Articles and topics include all aspects of college life that are available to the student aside from classroom experience. STUDENT UNLIMITED will also serve as a communicator among the colleges and universities in this region."

One article that will appear in the September issue of STUDENT UNLIMITED is a 'how-to-article' on frisbees by psychiatrist Stencil E. Johnson, the world's recognized authority on frisbees.

All of the stories in STUDENT UNLIMITED are submitted by free-lance writers and photographers. "We have articles written by people from all across the nation," Craven said.

"We believe STUDENT UNLIMITED will provide an opportunity for many young writers and photographers to gain professional experience by having their work published," Strehle said.

One of the major tasks in publishing STUDENT UNLIMITED is getting advertising. "Our big problem is getting in touch with the right people," Stout said. "Right now we're too small for national advertising and too large for local advertising."

Although none of the staff have had any previous formal training in magazine layout and publishing, Bryant is optimistic. "I don't think my lack of formal education hinders me," he said. "We're green-horns, but we're learning through experience. If we get through the December issue, we've got it made."

"Working on STUDENT UNLIMITED is a test of my abilities," said Craven. "I'm learning how to put a magazine together from scratch."

The 64-page September of STUDENT UNLIMITED will be distributed through college bookstores for $1 a copy.

Television intern views station from inside

How do you get a job in television production if you have never worked in television production?

Emmett R. Vaughn Jr., a senior in mass communication at Northeast Missouri State University, asked himself this question. He found an answer through Northeast's internship program. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Emmett T. Vaughn Sr., 4456 San Francisco Avenue in St. Louis.

Through Northeast's internship program, Emmett, 20, will be able to learn television production at the local Kirksville television station, KTVO-TV. He began work as of May 31 on the 12-week internship for college credit. As a television producer intern, he goes to work each day as a regular staff member.

At the television station, Emmett says he is using his artistic training when he does graphics work for the studio. The mass communication major came to Northeast on an art scholarship as a freshman.

His artist's background also has been put to use in television production itself—set design, lighting techniques and camera work all require an esthetic eye. Emmett says he finds all this experience invaluable to his future career in television.

"Because I do so many things, I probably could step into any of a number of jobs," he says.

He has learned the latest information about the technical aspects of television production as well as the artistic, Emmett says.

Since KTVO Channel 3, a Post Corporation station, recently moved to Kirksville, the studio and equipment at the television station is the latest in broadcasting, Emmett says.

In addition to artistic experience, Emmett has become familiar with audio mixing, talent directing and producing. He also says he hopes to do some more announcing and sports writing.

"Because of the good supervision I've had and the opportunity to work with new equipment, I feel I could go almost anywhere in television production."

Emmett Vaughn Jr. (left) directs "Town and Country Forum," a noon community-oriented program of KTVO-TV in Kirksville.

Insurance executive expresses empathy to graduates

Robert P. Ewing, president of Banker's Life and Casualty Company of Chicago, gives the 1977 summer commencement address, "Walk in Their Shoes."

The President of Banker's Life and Casualty Company of Chicago urged the summer graduating class of Northeast Missouri State University to make empathy a personal attitude. Robert P. Ewing spoke Friday, Aug. 12, on the Kirksville campus.

The insurance company president told the graduates to learn from and about people of all different backgrounds disregarding race, creed, sex or age. He also said the handicapped should be hired.

About 400 students were graduated with bachelor, master and specialist degrees conferred by University President Charles J. McClain.

Mrs. Donna Lee Elliott, New Cambria, was honored as top graduate with a 3.91 grade point average on a 4.00 scale. As part of the ceremonies, Mrs. Elliott, an English education major, laid a wreath at the foot of a statue of Joseph Baldwin, the University's founder. She is the wife of Charles Elliott and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Elam of New Cambria.

Ewing, a 1948 graduate, told the 1977 summer graduates that today's social problems will be met by a change in approach of business. A realization that businesses "have to work with people and help people."

Referring to the problem of discrimination in hiring practices, he pointed to his own company's recruiting policies as an example of corporate social responsibility.

He said his company looks for people who want the satisfaction of doing a good job.

A major part of his company's employee relationship and recruiting programs is teaching managers and other employees to empathize, "to walk in another person's shoes."

The following baccalaureate students were graduated with honors:

SUMMA CUM LAUDE (3.75-4.00 grade point average on a 4.00 scale)—Donna Elliott, Brookfield; Richard Herndon, Kearney; Gary Steffes, New Cambria; Christine McPike, Durham; Scott Smith, Lee's Summit; Jayne Wells, Cantril, Ia.; James Link, Moberly; Francine Schwada, Washington, Ia.; Dean Sharp, Holliday.

MAGNA CUM LAUDE (3.50-3.74 grade point average on a 4.00 scale)—Paul Parkinson, Kirksville; Elke Kwapinski, Brashear; Joyce Currie, Foley; Karry Sprague, Leavenworth, Ks.; Virginia Ragan, Hannibal; Thomas Wynn, Florissant; Lynn McCarthy, Florissant.

CUM LAUDE (3.25-3.49 grade point average on a 4.00 scale)—Doris Richardson, Unionville; Maxine Chidester, Blakesburg, Ia.; John Manns, Festus; Monica Naumann, Jennings; Evelyn Wiggins, Moberly; Wanda Adams, Bucklin; Rodney Clay, Green Castle; Lawrence Keating, Florissant; John Mason, Shelbyville; and Melissa Stine, Florissant.

Also recognized were the new members of the emeritus faculty: Miss Elizabeth Wilson, instructor emeritus in home economics; Dr. David March, professor emeritus of history; Dr. Elizabeth Frazier, professor emeritus of reading; and Mrs. Florene Kibler, assistant director emeritus of libraries and reference librarian emeritus.

Kelley Rogers

Alumnus appointed to Board of Control

Kelley Rogers, Superintendent of Schools, Macon, has been appointed to the Board of Control of the Missouri State High School Activities Association. Mr. Rogers was appointed by the Board to fill the unexpired term of B.L. Minor, Monroe City. Mr. Minor retired from public schools on July 1, 1977.

In accepting the appointment Rogers said, "I feel it is a privilege to have the opportunity to help maintain the high standards that have been created through the efforts of the Association. I have a sincere interest in the Activities Association and its role in helping provide a well-rounded education for the young people of Missouri."

Rogers is a native of Brashear, graduating from high school there in 1951. He attended Northeast Missouri State University and the University of Missouri, receiving the B.S.E. degree in 1961 and the M.A. degree in 1962 from NMSU. He is married to the former Gloria McCloskey of Edina, a 1957 graduate of NMSU. The Rogers have two children, Traci, a senior in high school, and Trent, a sixth grader. Mr. Rogers served in the Korean War.

The schools, each year in the Spring, elect members to the Board of Control. Different areas are voted upon in different years. In the Spring of 1978 the Northeast District, represented by Mr. Rogers, will be voting.

Two former Regents appointed as Missouri judges

Two former members of the Board of Regents at Northeast Missouri State University have been named as judges in the Missouri state judicial system.

Albert Rendlen, a Regent from 1973-75, has been appointed as a Missouri Supreme Court Judge. In 1974, Rendlen was appointed judge of the Missouri Court of Appeals, St. Louis District.

Another former Board of Regents member, James R. Reinhard replaced Rendlen as judge of the Missouri Court of Appeals. Reinhard formerly was a judge in Hannibal where he served as the only circuit judge for Marion, Monroe and Rails Counties.

Reinhard was a Regent from 1965 through 1972 when he was appointed circuit judge. He served as board president from 1967 through 1972.

He began his association with Northeast when he attended the University as a student from 1947-50.

Reinhard completed his education with a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Missouri-Columbia in 1951 and the bachelor of law degree in 1953.

He married Shari Lu Horton, a graduate of Northeast with a B.S. in Education.

Reinhard served in the Army in 1953-55. He was elected prosecuting attorney of Sullivan County in 1954 while still in the Army. He was reelected in 1956 but resigned in July 1957 to move to Monroe County where he entered private law practice. He was a member of the law firm of Reinhard and Lawson at Paris, Mo. from 1963-73.

In 1958 he was elected prosecuting attorney of Monroe County to be reelected in 1960 and 1962. He declined reelection in 1964.

Northeast's other judge is Rendlen who received his A.B. degree in 1942 from the University of Illinois in Urbana. He then studied at Stanford University, University of California-Berkeley, and University of Michigan-Ann Arbor where he received his J.D. degree in 1948.

He was admitted to the Missouri Bar the same year. He was engaged in private practice with the firm of Rendlen and Rendlen in Hannibal from 1948-74.

In addition to serving as a member of the Board of Regents for Northeast, Rendlen has been state chairman for the Republican party, president of the Tenth Judicial Circuit of the Bar Association, legal officer in the U.S. Coast Guard, and member of Phi Delta Phi legal fraternity.

Older graduate pursues "Roots"

Miss Ottie Greiner

Miss Ottie Greiner (B.S.D. 1902, B.S.E. 1920) still is using her skills learned as a school teacher and librarian in Kirksville.

"My hobby is genealogical work. That's what I enjoy," she says.

She traces the family history of her friends and relatives or "just anybody." In her own background, she has looked into the past of 11 relatives.

The 96-year-old Miss Greiner says she began her hobby in 1907.

"I didn't wait until 'Roots' came out."

To pursue her interest, she says, "I have to visit the library and the courthouse. When I go out, I take a cane. I had to put my pride aside."

During her career, Miss Greiner was a teacher for 49 years retiring in 1949. She taught most of those years in the Kirksville R-III School System, also serving as principal of Benton School for 22 years.

Following her retirement from teaching, she says she enjoyed work as a librarian at the Sojourners Public Library for 10 years. Miss Greiner also was the church librarian remaining on the library committee presently for the First Christian Church.

"Some people when they retire seem to have nothing to do," she says, "but I seem to employ my time very well."

Whatever became of "The Four Roses"?

The invitation of Robert Ewing ('48) as summer commencement speaker prompted us to thumb through old copies of the INDEX and ECHO to find out a little more about what life was like on campus in the late 40s.

We discovered Ewing was a member of a well known quartet, "The Four Roses". Although the group through its tenure was composed of several members, we contacted Kenneth Gleason, Henry Bamman and Bill Dawkins, members when Ewing sang bass.

Many people have fond memories of the crooning veterans who initiated the sounds of the "Four Freshmen".

Gleason who is now associate professor of music at Concord College in Athens, West Virginia, remembers, "the group sang for anything from beer busts to funerals."

Since all were members of the Sigma Tau Gamma Fraternity and the fraternity's emblem was the white rose, the quartet thus became known as the "Four Roses" which on more than one occasion caused the members some problems.

Bill Dawkins, now an art teacher at Keokuk Community College, recalled that having the same name as a well known liquor caused particular consternation among some of the members of the Baptist Church.

"Whenever the group was invited to sing there, we were introduced simply as 'the quartet from the state teachers college,'" Dawkins teaches.

Ewing, now president of Banker's Life and Casualty Company of Chicago, said some Kirksville residents avowed the quartet attempted to live up to its name and therefore was "better at consumption than singing."

Bamman who is now professor of education at California State College in Sacramento said the quartet's gay 90s numbers were the best, "Bird in a Gilded Cage", "Dream", and "Daisy Bell" to name a few.

Bamman said the one member of the group to achieve fame out of the whole effort was a little junior high school boy who joined them from time to time. His name, Rusty Draper of country-western fame.
