For Alumni and Friends of Northeast Missouri State College

President's Comment:

Recently the curtain dropped on the fifth year of the second century of this institution's history. Even though Northeast is the oldest of Missouri's State Colleges, it is still only a youngster in comparison to the older landmarks in man's history. But even so, these halls have stored a lot of memories in 105 years.

I have now passed out of the sophomore stage and into my junior year, having come to Northeast as president in February, 1970. Deliberately, I have tried to absorb many of the traditions and values this College has developed through these past 105 years. A walk around the campus on a beautiful June evening is just short of breathtaking. This experience causes one to realize the extraordinary beauty of the campus. More importantly, one can, in a small way, relate to the hundreds — yes, thousands — of you who have had your lives influenced and shaped by all that happens at a college. You are, in a sense, the link of continuity in the rush of changes that surround us.

I get excited when I think of the future, and I get a sense of humility when I ponder the greats who have inhabited these grounds. Despite all the articles which decry the disrepair of higher education, we are in an enviable position today as contrasted with the beginning years. What a wonderful memory we have to recall the first president of this College, Joseph Baldwin, convincing the people of this area of Missouri of the importance of further education. The people responded with enthusiasm because they realized the tremendous possibilities which could come about as a result of the civilizing influence of a university in their midst. Those were days when higher education was not common, and it was not taken for granted. Out of these inauspicious beginnings an auspicious idea was taking hold, and it took roots and grew as a dynamic force. These brief flashbacks into our past tend to give us a new vision and a new dream for tomorrow and a happy feeling inside to realize that we now have an opportunity to work with the minds and lives of those who will carry our world through the first quarter of the Twenty-First Century.

I am writing this on Sunday evening, and tomorrow is registration. As I walked to the campus down Normal Street, I saw cars being unloaded on Florence, Mulanix, High and Marion Streets. Most of us can relive with these 1972 summer students the feeling of getting settled-in the night before registration. No doubt you get the feeling that things haven't changed much. You would be both right and wrong. There is an air of sameness that pervades the campus as well as an air of difference. Now it is to the difference that I speak briefly.

The Commission on Institutional Goals and Priorities for the 1970's meets again on June 17 to hear preliminary reports from the various task forces. You will recall this group of 100 has been charged with the task of recommending priorities for the Seventies. This is exciting!

Giant steps have been taken to loosen the rigidity in the educational process, and already many high school seniors have been awarded 20 - 30 hours each of college credit as a result of high marks on the College Level Examination Program (CLEP) exams. This program, coupled with the concept of the Open University, will not only benefit the younger student but also those who may have deferred starting to college for one reason or another. This is electrifying to consider! The list of new journeys seems interminable, and I look forward to discussing several of these in greater depth with you in future issues of the Nemoscope.

Again, thank you for letting us serve you and this great College, which has been built by the hands of many greats and which has been attended by students of like quality. And so, as I enter the second semester of my junior year as your president, I express again my appreciation for your many kind words of support and encouragement. Let us continue together.

Featured on the cover is NMSC's new head football coach Randy Lukehart. An article on the new mentor and his plans for the upcoming season appears on pages 2-5.

Building to Hold A Tradition

Two abrupt rings from the telephone interrupted the interview. The coach smiled instantly when he learned the caller was from the Illinois high school where he started teaching football.

"You must've been in grade school when I was at Rochelle," exclaimed Randy Lukehart, the new Northeast Missouri State mentor.

"How big are you?" he inquired. "I can't promise anything. All of our scholarship aid has been allocated, but we're interested in knowing more about you."

The coach concluded the conversation by asking the young prospect to have his taskmaster send a game film showing the boy in action.

"Someone already recruited by us might decide not to come here, and who knows, the Rochelle lad could be a real 'sleeper'," explained the personable, 41-year old taskmaster after hanging up the phone.

The interview resumed, and Lukehart reviewed his career up to April 25 when he was appointed by the College Board of Regents to replace Russ Sloan as Bulldog gridiron boss.

Missouri-born, but transplanted to Arizona, he played football at Kingman High School in the Southwestern state. "My father was employed by a construction company, and I didn't return to Missouri until shortly before the Korean Conflict broke out in 1950."

He served a four-year stint in the Navy, during which time he married the former Rita Finley. They have three children, Debbie, 18, Randy, 15, and Pamela, 10.

The coach-to-be enrolled at the University of Missouri-Columbia in the summer of 1956 after being employed one year in the Security Protection Department of the General Motors Plant in Kansas City.

"I lost my job, but I wasn't fired," he said with a wry grin. "The plant lost its contract, and they had to bump me."

"I gave football a whirl at the University as a walk-on freshman, but they felt at 170 pounds I didn't possess the necessary speed."

After receiving a B.S. degree in Education from the Columbia campus, he was tapped by Rochelle as an assistant. He remained in that capacity until moving up as head mentor in 1966. Although Rochelle posted a sub-par 2-7 record that autumn, many people were impressed with Lukehart's credentials.

South Shelby High School in Missouri, anxious to upgrade a gridiron program which had fallen on bad times (only five triumphs in three seasons), lured the energetic skipper away from the northern Illinois community.

His first South Shelby season, producing a 6-3 mark, was an indication of things to come. During the next four years, his aggregations compiled a 41-4-1 log. The 1970 edition grabbed the Class A state championship, beating favored Harrisonville, and that moment had to be his "most satisfying" as a head coach, he thought.

His last South Shelby club was one game shy of repeating as champs, losing to Monett in the 1971 finals.

Why then, did he decide to leave what some might claim as the relatively moderate pace of high school ball for the hectic routine and pressure of the collegiate level?

"College coaching has been my ultimate goal since I was mid-way through high school," he recalled. "My greatest challenge is to write a successful record at this level."

Lukehart listed two objectives as Bulldog skipper: Continue the winning football tradition that has prevailed at the College and attract outstanding youngsters who will represent the team and institution in an outstanding manner.

"Football offers a young man a wonderful opportunity to earn an education and make a successful life," he pointed out.

The soft-spoken taskmaster admitted a period of transition was difficult for a new mentor. "Especially, if he has to budget his time between his old and new responsibilities, as has been the case with me," Lukehart exclaimed. He was referring to his situation of commuting between South Shelby and Kirksville until his previous commitments had been completed.

However, he quickly stressed returning experience could make the transition easier. The skipper rattled off such names as offensive end Tom Geredine, Kansas City and linebacker Craig O'Sadnick, West Brooklyn, Illinois, both honorable mention All-Americans . . . defensive tackle Dave Waterkotte, St. Louis, defensive backs Nate Darrell, Leavenworth, Kansas and Mike Dahlberg, Lombard, Illinois, defensive Al Fulton, Kankakee, Illinois, offensive back Lenvill Elliott, Richmond, . . . and so on.

Lukehart referred to the keen desire demonstrated by last year's small, but quick aggregation, adding that these same qualities were evident in recent spring drills.

Implementing a new offensive system has been an immediate concern. The Wing-T attack used by Lukehart will be nothing new to Bulldog fans. It was Maurice "Red" Wade's delight and his opponents' agony for 16 years while he directed the Purple and White to six MIAA titles and 99 triumphs.

"The fellows adapted very quickly to the new formations this spring," Lukehart continued. "The Wing-T requires excellent timing, but the offense is suited to our personnel."

What about next year's defense? "Basically, we'll use the same one successfully employed by the 1971 team . . . a five-man front," he replies. "We're too small to play anything else. Most members of last season's defensive unit will return, so experience will be an asset. Spectators will see lots of stunting. This tends to bother the offense."

What was his overall assessment of spring drills, which had to be reduced from the allotted 20 days to only eight? "Well-pleased, although time was cut short. We accomplished a great deal and I found out we'll have to replace several key men."

Gone are quarterback Bob Gibson, offensive tackles Greg Erson and John Forbes, fullback Pete Robertson, defensive tackle Jim Gephart, linebacker Ken Powers and defensive halfback Randy Dawson, most of whom earned some type of all-conference recognition.

Geoff Engen, heir apparent to Gibson at the signal-calling slot, picked up the new offense "very well", according to Lukehart.

The mentor plucked Russ Kirby, head coach at Palmyra the past six campaigns, to serve as his defensive coordinator. Bruce Craddock, a former Bulldog lineman, is a hold-over from last year's staff. He will continue to work with the offensive forward wall.

The quiet-spoken pilot indicated a strong belief in a 12-month program for his performers, including a summer schedule to maintain top condition.

"When the boys report for pre-season drills in August, they'll run through a physical training test," he explained. "If a player is in good condition, there should be no concern about injury or about doing the job expected of him."

"Probably the most significant lesson I learned from Matt Hanhila, my old high school coach, was the importance of meeting challenges head-on, establishing worthwhile goals and working hard to accomplish them."

Grappling with arduous challenges has been a preoccupation of recent Bulldog squads. After all, NMSC was picked to finish third or fourth in the MIAA Conference the past three seasons and each time, they walked off with the big prize.

"These fellows are tremendous to work with, but I could tell that, watching them from the stands last fall methodically wear down their foes."

Now, he is looking forward to his big challenge of perpetuating a rich tradition, spanning 64 years of football warfare that has produced 315 victories.

"Any success that I achieve in life I owe to the Northeast Missouri State College and the Kirksville newspaper," says Larry Moore, anchorman for Metromedia Television News in Kansas City. Moore, a 1967 centennial graduate of NMSC, was named anchorman for KMBC Channel 9 news in January, 1972.

Success is the story for the twenty-nine year old Moore, thought to be the youngest anchorman on the air for a major metropolitan television station. "We are attempting to bring a new concept in prime time news broadcasting with a human touch, yet in a professional manner," Moore said. The young news team composed of Moore, Kansas City Chief's Quarterback Len Dawson as sports director and weatherman Fred Broski seem to be appealing to the Kansas City viewers as the latest ratings show a 400,000 member audience for the evening and late evening news broadcasts.

An interest in journalism, along with excellence in the field, struck Larry at an early point in his educational experiences. He was a staff member of the Edina High School paper, The Lion's Roar, and served as a co-editor of the paper during his senior year in 1959-60. The paper was judged to be one of the seven best in the state during that year's high school newspaper contests.

Moore, a native of Baring, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Moore. He credits his parents with the incentive for his outstanding educational accomplishments, including the valedictorian honors at Edina High School in 1960, leading to a scholarship from NMSC.

His interest in journalism continued at the College as a member of the Index staff prior to joining the reporting staff of the Kirksville Daily Express. He later became a city editor of that paper while completing his degree work at NMSC.

Moore's early accomplishments in journalism and academics continued through college as he was a cum laude graduate with the May division of the 1967 centennial class. His full time work, along with his studies, has given Larry a definite philosophy about new possibilities of internships for students in all fields of study.

"College training needs to become less book oriented and more field oriented. Why not place a teacher-to-be as a teacher's aide in the classroom situation during his freshman year, or the pre-journalism, law, or business student on a part-time basis in the actual surroundings of his chosen field. The whole concept requires a close college-community relationship and this is good," says Moore.

Beginning work on a Masters degree in journalism at the University of Missouri in June of 1967, Larry was employed as a part-time newscaster for KFRU radio station in Columbia. His radio career was short lived as he joined the staff of KOMU-TV in Columbia in September of 1967, serving as sports director of the station and host of the weekly Dan Devine football show. He was later promoted to co-anchorman of the noon news.

Wedding bells rang in June of 1968 as Larry was married to Ruth Ann Winter, a 1968 NMSC graduate receiving the Bachelor of Science in Education degree with a major in English. The Moores have a two year old son, Jeffrey Robert, who greets all visitors to their Raytown home with, "I am Jeff Moore — TV 9 News."

Mrs. Moore taught at the Raytown South Junior High School during the 1968-69 school year prior to her present role as housewife and mother. "The schedule of a television newscaster is quite different to the normal hours, but we have all adjusted to our crazy schedule," she points out.

A typical day for the anchorman begins at 2:30 p.m. with a story conference between Moore, the news editor and the news director. The conference determines what news is to be aired, coverage, and what should be included in the 6:00 o'clock production. All of the program is in readiness by 5:00 o'clock and does not change unless a major news story breaks during the hour. The evening news concentrates on local metropolitan news with only national news headlines, while the late evening news concentrates more on national happenings with a review of local news and up-dates on local stories breaking between 6:00 and 10:00. "That which happens day in and day out is not necessarily news, but rather the norm. The education activities of students is the norm, but when those students turn to destruction of school property, it is no longer normal. Likewise, if a college student gives his life to save the life of a friend, that, too, is no longer the norm. Thus, we have examples of both good and bad news," Moore said.

The usual clowning and joking of the three man news team comes to a halt following the make-up session about thirty minutes prior to air time. After grease and powder are on and tie and hair in proper place the serious business begins.

TV 9 news on the air and a close-up of Moore on camera.

On the elaborate set with a hidden telephone at his side the true professionalism of Moore is visible to the visitor in the studio and the thousands of viewers.

As the first commercial break interrupts the news the phone rings with the director issuing the call for a "speed up", "a 30 second cut of the next story", or "praise or criticism". Whatever the phone message Moore and his team make the necessary adjustments for the perfection of the remainder of the broadcast.

One of Moore's most exciting experiences occurred in January covering a shootout in the Raytown area. Moore was at the television station when he got a call that police were having a shootout with a gunman near where he lived. He rushed to the scene to find the neighborhood filled with police who were exchanging shots with a fugitive in a nearby house.

Several spotlights were put on the house but the man, who was an expert shot, would shoot the lights out. Each time police would try to move closer to the house, the sharpshooter would fire a volley of shots and warn them to get back that he didn't want to hurt anyone.

Finally, with several policemen wounded in the legs and the neighborhood in complete chaos, police called for a large bulldozer and dozed off the front of the house while other police fired tear gas capsules into the house causing the fugitive to give up.

In discussing his profession Moore pointed out, "I frequently meet with young people and often receive inquiries from high school students. Many of them want advice on how to enter the television news profession. There is no clear-cut answer. I always tell them the competition is stiff, but that ability and determination to succeed eventually win out. It certainly helps to be affiliated with such a fine station."

KMBC-TV is Metromedia Television's creative and aggressive ABC-TV network affiliated station in Kansas City. While it receives much of its prime time programming from the network, it is as innovative and community-concerned as Metromedia Television's independent stations.

KMBC-TV boasts one of the finest news operations in the mid-west, having captured state-wide honors for news excellence in 1970, 1971 and 1972. It is the recipient of the Missouri Broadcasters Association excellence award and Missouri Radio and Television News Association's top award for best overall news coverage.

As with all Metromedia Television stations, KMBC-TV is noted as the Kansas City station most totally involved in community activities. Its staff has a fierce pride in its involvement in city activities and it is determined to be second to none in providing assistance and leadership in making Kansas City a better place in which to live and raise children.

"Probe," a hard-hitting series of investigative reports, frequently exposes wrong doings; corrects government errors; makes public officials and government agencies more responsive to the electorate. "Action Reporter" provides assistance to the individual who is having trouble sorting his way out of a bureaucratic maze.

Each June the station launches its annual TV 9 Carnival to raise funds for Children's Mercy Hospital. The campaign, which runs all summer, encourages viewers to hold "back-yard carnivals" to raise money for the hospital. During past years, this KMBC-TV project has annually raised between $5,000 and $18,000 for the youngster's medical center. To promote the drive, KMBC-TV produces thousands of Carnival Kits and mails them to children requesting them. In addition to raising funds, the TV 9 Carnival serves the purpose of making youngsters aware of other children who are less fortunate than themselves.

Relaxing over dinner following the 6:00 o'clock news broadcast, Moore responded to the query of why he had chosen television over radio or newspapers. "I suppose the glamour of television was a drawing factor. But more than that it is the challenge of a new and growing profession, one in which the answers are not found in books, but rather in the day to day realization of what television news is and tries to do."

"As for the future, when you are doing a job you have so long dreamed of doing, you really don't look at future possibilities. We are very happy living and working in Kansas City. Metromedia is a fine company to be associated with. Right now my goal is to do my part in helping to shape Channel 9 News into the best news operation in the middle west. But one can never ignore the opportunity for professional enhancement and advancement should such an opportunity present itself at some distant future date," Moore said.

So who knows: Someday in the future we may tune in the evening network news and hear, "And that's the way it is, Thursday, June 1, 1972, Larry Moore reporting."

STUDENT CLINIC

by Carol Speck

Being sick may not be any picnic, but sick students at NMSC never had it so good! Imagine being ill and entering a new world of color: a waiting room filled with sunshine and soft music; blue, orange and green leather upholstered seats in which to relax and wait for a nurse or doctor; end tables with recent magazines to browse through; and gold curtains and yellow carpeting. What is this phenomenon? It's the new Student Health Clinic at the College.

No longer do students with an illness have to trudge over to a small, dark and gloomy clinic located in the northwest corner of the first floor of Kirk building, the only health clinic students knew ever since 1919. No longer is there a noticeable lack of treatment rooms, with a nurse traipsing through your treatment room in order to get to the next one.

Now the Student Health Clinic is located in the east wing of the former Industrial Arts building and can boast more than 3,000 square feet of space, approximately two-thirds more space than could be found in the former clinic in Kirk building. The Clinic now houses a waiting room, six treatment rooms, two doctor's offices (one currently is used by the four nurses), a pharmacy and an area for students' medical records. In fall '72 the new Clinic is to expand its services to include some laboratory work — work that was sent out in the past — and is to hire a lab technician to manage the two-room laboratory and its functions.

Dr. John Biggerstaff has been the Clinic's physician and director since the spring of '52. According to the physician, the Clinic is workable, functional and "every bit as pretty as a new building".

The Clinic has come a long way from its conception in 1919 when John R. Kirk innovated teacher education by establishing the department of child hygiene and public health at the College; one of the functions of that department was to provide a trained nurse or physician for the physical examination of all students on campus. The department included a hygiene lab, offices for nurses and physicians and equipped classrooms and was located in what was then the science building on campus, presently known as Laughlin building.

Dr. A. G. Reed became chairman of the department, the first of its kind in Missouri; soon after the

An attractive coed in one of the six treatment rooms of the remodeled student health clinic.

Inter-Departmental and Social Hygiene Board of the Federal Government offered aid in establishing health education programs to colleges and universities meeting specified requirements. Northeast Missouri State College was one of 30 institutions of higher education across the nation to qualify. Thus, Dr. Reed and an assistant physician became the first doctors in a student-oriented health clinic, the basic service of which was to inoculate students against typhoid fever and small pox.

Currently, Dr. Biggerstaff said the most common ailment among students is the upper respiratory infection, "the sore throats and runny noses". Approximately 1500-2000 of the campus community — students, employes and faculty — receive flu immunizations each year. The physician yearly urges dormitory students to make use of the service and estimated that if 20 to 25 per cent of the student population receive the shots, epidemics can be prevented. The College has never been besieged by a flu epidemic even though the town of Kirksville and the nation were in the midst of an epidemic several winters, he said.

As far as illnesses go, "you name it and we've got it," said the physician. He indicated that cases of bone breakage, home sickness and mononeucleosis are frequent.

According to the College physician, NMSC was the first state school to begin offering flu shots and polio immunization because of a statewide epidemic; the College made it compulsory for dormitory residents to receive flu vaccinations at first. The practice of compulsory flu vaccinations is impractical now because of the ever increasing number of students, said Dr. Biggerstaff.

Now, the college community has a choice in the method of being administered flu shots: Persons may be vaccinated in the traditional manner by use of a needle injection or — for those with a pathological fear of the needle — by means of a gun injection. The air-compression gun injection, used during the '70-'71 and '71-'72 academic years, allows painless immunization, Dr. Biggerstaff indicated.

Student enrollment for the year 1919 totaled 1513, with 454 students attending the fall term of that academic year. The first clinic was able to accommodate students adequately and physicians occasionally made house calls, said Dr. Walter Ryle, president emeritus of the College and author of a forthcoming publication on the Centennial history of Northeast Missouri State Teachers College.

For the '71-'72 academic year, fall enrollment reached 6,273, and 5,894 students enrolled for the spring semester. During the '70-'71 academic year total treatments given to students soared to 22,466; of that total student users of the Clinic amounted to 10,514 in the fall semester, 9,500 in spring and 2,452 in summer. Dr. Biggerstaff said that the former clinic in Kirk building, in use until Jan. 3, 1972, was inadequate for the numbers of students using medical services.

The new Student Health Clinic is equipped with six treatment rooms and provisions could be made to add "two more treatment rooms that lead off the hallway that exists," said the doctor. He commented that six rooms are "barely adequate". Before the move to the new facilities, the staff was forced to utilize both a doctor's office and drug room as treating rooms. "And it looked like Grand Central Station. We had no way to provide security for our medications because the room was open; it had three doors and in order to have any passage or traffic through there, you had to go through the doctor's office, through the drug room and through the treating room," said Dr. Biggerstaff.

April 24, 1923 Kirk building opened and the clinic moved to its new headquarters, specifically designed for that purpose. Upon occasion in the past, two physicians served simultaneously at the clinic, one of the two serving as director. In '28 there were two doctors; C. R. Greene was chairman of the department and head doctor, and Alfred Miller served as his assistant. According to Dr. Ryle, employing two physicians became financially impossible for the College beginning about 1935-'40 because of the depression. When there was only one doctor, a nurse was employed.

According to Dr. Ryle, Dr. Biggerstaff became the first head physician of the clinic who hadn't served as head of the department of health at the College. When that physician came to the College in '52, there was only one nurse to aid him.

In comparison, there now are four nurses employed by the College and other personnel include a secretary and stenographer. Dr. Biggerstaff is on campus from 8 a.m. until noon on Monday through Friday. Nurses continue operation of the Clinic from 1 until 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 9 until noon on Saturday. "We added the 9 to 12 Saturday morning hours on our own volition because we felt that Friday until Monday was too long a time in between," said Dr. Biggerstaff, who indicated that the hours were added about five years ago.

"All our nurses are student wives, and that's done deliberately for two reasons: One is that we want the students to get through school; and secondly, I

I think that nurses of that age are far more understanding, and they have better empathy with students of this age group," said the physician. He indicated that nurses who are student wives seem to be patient and sympathetic with students. "The nurses we get — I think — are tops . . . you can't imagine the pressure they have day in and day out, and they take it and smile." The director went on to say that the College has "never lacked for very highly qualified nurses. There is always a turnover of nurses, but the advantages of student wives for nurses far outweigh the drawbacks."

The physician commented that he would like to add another doctor to the staff but that two problems seem to be prohibitive at this time: "the budget and, secondly, the availability of doctors".

Salaries for personnel of the Student Health Clinic are paid by the state of Missouri. Pete Nicoletti, head of the Business office at the College, said, "We pay for all of this (operation of the Student Health Clinic) out of local funds." He said that local funds include student fees and that the only revenue the Clinic receives from the state general fund is for salaries.

In the early days of the Kirk building clinic, operating costs came "largely from student fees," said Dr. Ryle. Equipment was built up and improved through the years. The President Emeritus recalled that at one time there had been plans to build a new clinic, a building to itself, between Adair house and Fair apartments. Approximately eight years ago, Dr. Ryle asked Dr. Biggerstaff to draw a model plan and submitted the plan and request for funds to the state legislature, which at that time considered health to be a private affair and insisted that the state was not responsible for a student's health, said Dr. Ryle. Dr. Biggerstaff said the planned clinic was not considered necessary or feasible and no funds were granted.

Dr. Ryle continued by saying that a few years ago, the College asked the state legislature for money to build a new Industrial Education building; when that building was completed and the old Industrial Arts building was vacated, the idea emerged to convert the east wing of the old building into a health clinic. "I think President McClain and the College acted with a great deal of wisdom," said Dr. Ryle.

Renovation of the old Industrial Arts building was announced in July of '71. At that time Henry M. Boucher, dean of student affairs, and James R. Ritter, associate dean of student affairs, informed Dr. Biggerstaff that funds were available to renovate the east wing. "I was asked to provide floor plans and to list the additional equipment and personnel needed." The doctor said it was President McClain and the Board of Regents who made the renovation procedure possible.

Original hopes were that the new Clinic would open in September '71 when the fall semester began. Renovation was not completed until October, but the staff was unable to move in to the new clinic because equipment for the pharmacy was several months late in arriving. The end of the year 1971 also saw the end of the clinic in Kirk building. During Christmas vacation the move was made and the new Student Health Clinic opened as the new year unfolded and students returned in January.

Now the Clinic is a hectic place. Monday, Wednesday and Friday are the heavy days, but Tuesday and Thursday are occasionally heavy, said the physician. More students visit the facility during the morning hours. In a typical day student visits can range from 75 to 175.

According to Dr. Biggerstaff, "If we had built it from scratch, it couldn't have been any better."

Student comments on the new clinic have been favorable. Kendra Phillips, junior history major from Centerville, Iowa, said, "You feel more comfortable there; you're not herded in like a flock of sheep. I like it."

"The facilities are much better for waiting," said Dale Woodling, junior history education major from Meadville. "And I think that the service that they can provide has been speeded up, and the equipment is better."

Craig Wilson, sophomore political science major from St. Louis, commented on the added space in the clinic. "The waiting area is much bigger to accommodate more people, and I think that the workers are capable."

Marsha Perry, elementary education major from Kirksville, has seen the Student Health Clinic from both sides — as a work-study helper who files and pulls folders and as a student. Comparing the former clinic and the new one, she said, "This one is much better; it's more efficiently organized and we have more room to work. There is more privacy for students in treatment rooms. Students like the music and find the clinic more cheerful. All in all, everyone I talked to has thought it is a great improvement over the other one."

The modern flavor and vitality of the Student Health Clinic continue to appeal to students. Surely, no one enjoys being sick — particularly a student who has studies to keep up with, partying to be done and a schedule to follow — but if you have to be sick, what better place is there to go than the Student Health Clinic? NMSC students never had it so good!

There are three things that colleges have come to count on every spring: coeds in hot pants, graduation; and for the past few years, some sort of dissention from segments of the student body.

This spring NMSC was almost typical. The coeds were out in full force in their hot pants; it was the largest graduating class ever, but in place of student dissention, there was a good old political battle for control of the Student Senate. The victor was Kem Cavanah, NMSC's new Student Senate President.

Cavanah catapulted himself into the midst of campus politics last November when he took what was thought to be an unpopular stand against a Senate move to send six students to the Model United Nations in New York City.

Cavanah successfully overcame early opposition when he virtually single handedly gathered enough signatures to force the issue to a vote of the student body. He objected to the Senate spending some $1,500 of its $8,000 budget to send only six students on the trip.

Students supported him and turned down the Model U.N. in a landslide vote and suddenly Cavanah had established himself as a strong figure in student politics.

A 20-year-old senior political science major from Marceline, Cavanah is the third member of his immediate family to attend Northeast.

His father, "Cotton", attended NMSC in the mid '30s and was a crack blocking back and four-year letterman for Don Faurot's football teams. Kem's oldest brother, Shane, was a starting quarterback for two years at NMSC, playing in the mid '60s under "Red" Wade. Shane also ran for president of the Student Senate, but lost.

Kem came to NMSC on a football and music scholarship and chose music as his major. Like many freshmen, he had some early adjustments to make to college. He found that football was not quite what he thought it would be and in addition to having some injuries, he decided to hang up his spikes.

Cavanah himself said he was "the small-town hero," and after dropping football, felt as though he had lost face and decided to drop out of college.

"I went home and came back the next day because my mom and dad made it more hell at home than it ever was at school."

He changed his major to political science and since those few weeks of rough going has settled down and is maintaining a better than 3.5 grade-point average. He also is in ROTC and will be spending the next few weeks at his first summer camp at Fort Riley, Kansas.

Cavanah's ROTC background along with his short blond hair that, with the exception of his modest sideburns, is reminiscent of the "Princeton" style haircut of the early '60s, has prompted many students to label him "conservative".

When asked about this conservative label, Cavanah called himself a "liberal conservative".

"I'm liberal in that I feel students should be given more authority and more civil liberties as far as inter-dorm visitation and a student court where students judge other students who violate certain College regulations, but I'm conservative as far as I feel the administration should run this College," he explained.

Although he knows many students think he is a conservative he feels he can relate to the large liberal student population. "If people don't turn off just because my hair is short, I think I can," he said. "I've even tried to loosen up by wearing flowers on my britches," Cavanah chuckles as he jestures to his bell bottom jean cuffs that are lined with purple, yellow, white, red, and blue flowers.

This conservative image almost kept him from running for Student Senate president, he wasn't sure if he could get enough votes. But he later decided to go ahead and announced his candidacy in early April.

"I didn't like the way things were being run this year. The Model U.N. issue, I suppose, was the first thing that got me 'teed off.' The Senate was working against the administration and they're not going to get anything accomplished without working with them," Cavanah said.

"At first I didn't want to run, but there are so many people complaining and not doing anything about it and since I had been one of the biggest complainers this year I could either put up or shut up. I decided to put up," he said.

"I voted for everyone of those people who are on the Student Senate," he explained, "and since I had voted for them and become very dissatisfied I thought I should do something about it."

He feels last year's senate was swept in on the "Stone and Heyen affair" as a protest against the administration. Steve Stone and Robert Heyen were two sociology instructors whose dismissals led to considerable apprehension by many students about the future of the sociology program at NMSC. Since that time the issue has been resolved as the administration hired three new professors to take Stone's and Heyen's places.

He feels that election resulted in a lack of rapport between the Senate and the administration, one of the chief things he wants to accomplish this year.

"There is so much power on this campus. The Board of Regents grants this power to the president and the administration divides it out to the faculty and the students. You can beat on docs and call people names but until the administration gives you this power you have no power," Cavanah said.

"When you're at odds with the administration, you're not going to accomplish anything. We're going to have to work more with them (the administration) and show them that we can be responsible students and have an efficient student government without overstepping our bounds. I firmly believe the College should be run by the administration."

Another shortcoming Cavanah sees with student government is the apathetic attitude of many members of the student body towards the senate.

A member of the famed NMSC jazz band, Cavanah gets some pointers

"When circulating petitions last November, I came across one transfer student who didn't even know we had a senate."

"When circulating petitions last November, I came across one transfer student who didn't even know we had a senate," Cavanah said. "You would be surprised at the number of students who just didn't care and didn't sign (the petition) or didn't care and did sign," he said.

At times Cavanah sounds almost like he is running for president of the United States when he states: "We're going to have to take the student government closer to the students. Right now I feel like it (the senate) is kind of like an isolated elite."

"Students have a lot of ideas and complaints, but so far the Student Senate has been unable to tap these complaints," he says. "If the students don't come to you, you have to go to the students, if you want good government."

Cavanah plans to live in Missouri Hall next year. Here he feels he will have more contact with students and be able to understand and articulate their concerns better. Cavanah also supported and got passed in a vote of the students an amendment for the Senate Constitution that provides for precinct voting in the dorms. Previously the only place students voted was in the Student Union.

Another of Cavanah's goals for next year is to start a student lobby in Jefferson City, a cooperative venture by the students from the five state colleges. Cavanah feels since the state college educates as many students as the University of Missouri they "should get their share."

"We can't even get a swimming pool up here, yet they can build a multi-million-dollar Warren E. Hearnes field house down there (University of Missouri-Columbia)," Cavanah says.

He continues by pointing out that NMSC alone educates more physical education majors than the University of Missouri and that swimming needs to be incorporated in the NMSC physical education curriculum.

Cavanah is hopeful that students will become increasingly aware of the activities of the legislature so that now the 18-year-old vote is a reality, students will put political pressure on the legislature to be sympathetic with the needs of higher education.

"With the advent of the 18-year-old vote I think we can play a greater part in achieving things for higher education and for our individual schools," Cavanah says.

"I sometimes think Northeast gets forgotten (by the legislature). We live in an unpopulated area and many of our students are from out of state. Yet why should the students of Northeast receive less just because they don't live in Kansas City, St. Louis, or Columbia?" Cavanah asks.

He is aware of the lack of potential students for the College and says the school as well as Kirksville itself will have to become more attractive to prospective students in order to have a stable enrollment.

Cavanah is serving on the "Commission for Institutional Goals and Priorities for the '70s", a group of 100 students, faculty, administrators and friends of the College which is studying many of these problems.

Cavanah's particular commission task force is conducting an investigation to determine the amount of money that students spend in Kirksville each year. Cavanah thinks if people can see in dollars and cents the amount of money that the College students mean to Kirksville as well as the College, more people will be willing to take part in recruiting.

He is hopeful of involving students in the recruiting effort next year. Cavanah suggests that student entertainment groups are one method of helping recruit.

"We've got to get people here who care about the campus, so they won't walk on the grass and literally make a path," Cavanah said. "What we need is to instill self pride in this school. You know, we have plenty of complainers. We've got lots of people who know what's wrong, but very few people have any positive ideas or want to correct the problems that are here," Cavanah concluded.

Cavanah himself is involved in the Jazz Ensemble which has played at many events including several high schools and has been instrumental in attracting several music students to NMSC. Although he is no longer a music major, his baritone sax is one of the mainstays of the group.

Despite the demands that Student Senate will make on his time next fall, Cavanah hopes to remain in the Jazz Ensemble as well as continue playing in the Marching Band.

He also is active in the Young Republicans and will be on tour this summer for a few weeks with Republican gubernatorial hopeful Christopher "Kit" Bond. Cavanah was one of 20 Young Republicans in the State chosen to go on the tour.

After three years at NMSC, Cavanah sees many positive things happening and ironically, considering the views of what often is considered to be the typical student, Cavanah sees the positive things happening with the administration.

"I think they (the administrators) are doing their very best in making the needed and wanted changes at this school and I just hope I can help them and they can help me and we work together on this," Cavanah says.

"There are young people with new ideas and new faces around here, I think it's all for the better. The new administration has been in on a lot of positive things. Dean Ritter (associate dean of student affairs) has established an excellent rapport with the students."

About President McClain Cavanah says: "He has an excellent image with a number of students. Sometimes it gets damaged because he's the man at the top and people have to have someone to scream at." But Cavanah is realistic enough to know that next year he will be the "man at the top" and if students don't like the way he is doing things they will surely "scream" at him. He is looking forward to working with the administration in establishing mutual goals that will be of benefit to the entire college community.

Whether Cavanah can count on the student body supporting a Senate president that tries to work closely with the college administration remains to be seen.

However, there are three things that a new Student Senate president can count on each fall: football; homecoming; and a watchful administration.

Jazz Quintet Places First in Regionals

The Jazz Quintet at Northeast Missouri State College, Kirksville, placed first in the combo division at the Central States Jazz Festival held in Kansas City. The NMSC Jazz ensemble was third in the Big Band competition.

The quintet then went on to participate in the National Competition against the winners of the nine other divisions May 28-30 in Washington, D.C. at the John F. Kennedy Center for Performing Arts.

Members of the Jazz quintet are: Jack Lightfoot, trumpeter, Shelbina, Missouri; Larry Pohlman, soprano sax, Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Dave Scott, piano, Kirksville; John Schwarz, bass, Kirksville; and Steve Duple, drums, Kansas City.

Lightfoot and Scott also were named the outstanding performers on their respective instruments for the entire competition.

Northeast Furnishes Osteopathic Students

Northeast Missouri State College furnished more osteopathic students in 1971 than any other college or university in the country according to the office of education of the American Osteopathic Association.

This is the first year that NMSC has achieved this distinction. Wayne State and Temple Universities furnished the largest number in 1970 with Northeast in third place. In 1971 figures show that NMSC supplied 26 students entering an osteopathic college with Temple University of Pennsylvania supplying 23 and Wayne University of Michigan furnishing 21. The University of Missouri ranked fourth with 17.

According to the educational supplement published by the Association, the combined degree at Northeast attracts many students to Kirksville.

Gantt Receives First Ford Foundation Grant

Lloyd Jim Gantt, Jr., 1972 spring graduate at NMSC, has been awarded the Ford Foundation Doctoral Fellowship. The award is based on application and interview with a faculty selection committee of the Ford Foundation and results of the applicant's Graduate Record Examination.

Gantt, a history major from La-Grange, Missouri is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd J. Gantt.

The fellowship is contingent upon the fellow's acceptance by, and enrollment in, the graduate school of an accredited university in the United States which offers a Ph.D. program in his field.

Each fellowship supports full-time graduate study for one year and may be renewed annually for as many as four additional years. The stipend is also intended to cover living costs.

Gantt is the only student from NMSC ever to receive the Ford Foundation Grant. He plans to continue work on his Ph.D. in history at Temple University in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

College Initiates Sixth-Year Plan

A new sixth year program in Educational Administration to begin this summer has been announced by NMSC.

The program, which will lead to certification by the State Department of Education, has been jointly developed with the University of Missouri. Classes, with one exception, will be taught by the faculty of Northeast. A seminar in School Administration will be conducted by University personnel.

Enrollment for the sixth year program may be accomplished during regular registration on June 5 or July 10. Additional information is available from Vice President Eli F. Mittler.

(Doris) Cundiff 1945, also of Kirksville; Evonne Mills 1946 of Chilli-cothe and Justine Brock of Corpus Christi, Texas. Three brothers, fourteen grandchildren and several nieces and nephews also survive. Mrs. Gardner, during her earlier years taught in Marshall, Texas, and in rural schools in the Kirksville area. She was an active member of the First Baptist Church and church circles and was a member of DAR, DAC, Nebulae, Order of the Eastern Star, AAUW, and the League of Women Voters. Funeral services were held in Kirksville, with burial in Highland Park Cemetery.

Dr. Virginia Hoffman, Professor of Health and Physical Education at NMSC, died March 21, 1972, in Rochester, Minnesota, after an illness of several months. A memorial service was held at the First Baptist Church in Kirksville. Dr. Hoffman was a member of the NMSC Alumni Association.

Gladys L. Deaver 1954 of St. Charles, Mo., died suddenly at her home April 14, 1972. Mrs. Deaver, age 63, was an elementary teacher. She is survived by her husband, Wilbur Deaver; her mother, Mrs. Ida McGahan of Paris; a daughter, Mrs. Norman (Lois) Stiegemeier of St. Charles; a sister, Mrs. Harold (Anna M.) McCuskey B.S.E. 1953 & M.A. 1955 of Kirksville and by one grandson. Funeral services for Mrs. Deaver were held at the St. Charles Christian Church with burial in the Paris (Mo.) Cemetery.

Virgil Buzard 1910 of La Plata, died March 23, 1972, in a Kirksville hospital, where he had been a patient since Feb. 19. He had been in failing health for some time. The son of Thomas Jefferson and Etta May Jones Buzard, he was born April 21, 1891 in Gallatin. On June 12, 1919, he married Leonore Parke who preceded him in death on June 10, 1961. On July 15, 1966, he married Ruth Turner Tansil 1912 who survives. Also surviving are two sons, Richard Buzard of Abilene, Tex., and the Rev. Clifford Buzard of Wilmette, Ill.; five grandchildren and one sister, Mrs. A. E. Stotts of Memphis, Tenn. Mr. Buzard attended Kirksville public schools and after graduating from the College became associated with the Taylor Paper Company and was employed with them in Memphis, Tenn. and Tulsa, Okla. until his retirement in May of 1966. Mr. Buzard was a veteran of World War I, serving with the Engineer Corps in France. He was a member of the American Legion, La Plata Post 282, and the La Plata Community Presbyterian Church, where he served as elder and member of the church board. Funeral services were held in the La Plata Presbyterian Church and burial was in Tulsa, Okla.

Helen Pickell Moler 1931 died March 14, 1972, in a Kirksville hospital where she had been a patient since January 25. The daughter of Judge Ralph M. and Daisy Gordon Pickell, she was born in Kirksville on Nov. 27, 1909. On Jan. 13, 1941 she was married to Charles B. Moler, who preceeded her in death on March 16, 1963. Surviving are three sisters, Grace Pickell 1924 of 211 E. Jefferson, Kirksville; Marian Hunt 1931, 214 S. High, Kirksville; and Dorothy Berryman 1928 of 906 E. Illinois, Kirksville. Two nieces also survive, Helen Jo Larson of Bloomington, Ill. and Cecelia Tabler Shoemaker B.S.E. 1951 & M.A. 1957 of 2415 Maroney, Las Vegas, Nevada. Mrs. Moler was employed with the Federal Government for 30 years until her retirement in 1970. She was a member of the American Business Womens Association in Moberly and the First Baptist Church and DAR in Kirksville. Funeral services were held in Kirksville, with burial in Maple Hills cemetery.

Ruth Stone Owens 1916, age 76, of Houston, Texas, died April 5, 1972, in a Houston hospital after an illness of several months. Born in Paris, Mo., she was the daughter of Edwin K. and Mattie Blanton Stone and spent much of her life in Paris until moving to Houston with her sister, Mrs. Bennie Poage 1914 in 1959. Mrs. Owens taught in Paris a short time, then went to St. Louis, where she was a medical technician. She was married to William D. Owens in 1928. He was killed in a car-train accident in 1935 in Murphysboro, Tenn., where they were living. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Owens returned to Paris, where she and her sister, Mrs. Poage, operated a book store. She was a member of the Paris Baptist Church. Surviving, in addition to Mrs. Poage is another sister, Mrs. F. M. Powell of Thomasville, N.C. Mrs. Owens was also a news correspondent for news media outside of Paris for a time and was the author of a book "I Remember Mama and Papa", which dealt with her memories of her parents. Funeral services were held in Houston. Following cremation interment was in Walnut Grove Cemetery, Paris.

Funeral services and Masonic rites for Perry Wilson Porter, 87, of Unionville, were held April 5, 1972 in Unionville. Mr. Porter, who died April 1 in Putnam County Memorial Hospital, was a former student at NMSC and a member of the Alumni Association. He was preceded in death by his wife, the former Fay E. Jarman, and by a son, Perry W. Porter, Jr. 1949, lost in action during the Korean War. He is survived by two daughters, Frances Elizabeth Hallberg of Falls Church, Va. and Mildred Louise Kensingler of Oakland, Calif. Three sisters and four grandchildren also survive. Mr. Porter was a life-long resident of Putnam County where he taught in rural schools during his earlier life. He moved to Unionville in 1909 where he taught in the elementary school and later became principal of that school. For several years Mr. Porter owned and operated a Chevrolet agency in Unionville and later entered the insurance business. He was also a tax consultant and county surveyor. In 1959-60 he was District Governor of Rotary International and had been a Mason for more than 50 years. Mr. Porter was also active in the Eastern Star and Moila Shrine.

SPORTS

Thinclads Capture MIAA Conference, Third Place in NCAA College Division

"It was some kind of performance . . . beyond my wildest dreams!"

That was the reaction of NMSC's Kenneth Gardner to his team's third-place finish last weekend in the NCAA College Division Meet at Ashland, Ohio.

Only two other NMSC athletic squads have earned a higher roost in a national outing. The 1964 cross-country runners and the 1969 tennis aggregation were runnersup in NCAA competition.

And while pace-setter Eastern Michigan doubled the score on the Bulldogs 93-46 and second-place Norfolk State was three points ahead of NMSC, a casual observer, listening to the happy mentor, might have suspected Gardner's men were the new title-holders.

"Before the meet, I felt we'd do extremely well to score 40 points," Gardner continued. "It was the toughest NCAA meet with more entries, 611, and schools, 115, than ever before. I can't find the appropriate words to praise the fellows."

He was referring to his nine-man contingent, one-third the size of Eastern Michigan's aggregation, which was represented by one performer in each event. The Hurons will switch to university division status next year.

Gardner said both Eastern Michigan and Norfolk were well-stocked with talented cindermen, but he quickly emphasized his group was the only one with three individual winners.

NMSC Finishes Second in Conference Baseball Action

The conquest of Parsons was the first for a Purple and White edition in seven attempts.

However, that feat didn't remove the bitter taste of 6-5 and 9-6 losses last Saturday to Missouri (Rolla). Those defeats shattered NMSC's dream of notching its first league title, plus a possible NCAA College Division Midwest Regional playoff berth.

The Miners, instead, were crowned MIAA champions, and will compete in the regional. Nugent's men had taken a first-place ledger of 7-2 into the twin-bill, and needed just a split to fly the pennant.

No Purple and White aggregation had ever ranked higher than fourth in the circuit since 1966.

NMSC concluded the 1972 calendar with a .254 average at the plate, compared to a lusty .301 figure last spring. However, the Purple and White charted a fielding average of .952, compared to .926 a year ago.

"Before last weekend's contests, our pitching and defense had generally carried us while our overall hitting had been disappointing," the Bulldog boss reflected. "But our attack was our strong suit at Rolla. Dave Wehrmeister (LaGrange, Ill.) and Mike Dahlberg didn't have their usual sharpness on the mound. Furthermore, we made key miscues in the field."

The Bulldogs failed to protect four-run advantages over the potent Miner offense in both contests.

Going into the encounters, Wehrmeister was second among NCAA College Division strikeout artists (15.2 per nine innings) and fourth in earned-run average (0.37).

Individually, outfielder Scott Day (Wheeling, Ill.), catcher Dan Smith (Dexter) and outfielder Craig Bouchard (Hinsdale, Ill.) joined Wehrmeister and three others who hold the standard for most three-baggers, two. Wehrmeister, who posted .304 as a part-time infielder-outfielder, belted a pair of triples again in 1972.

Several freshmen displayed promise in their first year of competition. Bouchard (Hinsdale, Ill.) sky-rocketed his batting pace from .222 in mid-April to .315 to lead the "stickmen" in 1972. Although the speedy plebe was Jones, competing in his first college division encounter, established a new NCAA record with a :45.8 clocking, one of 13 marks shattered during the three-day meet.

Allbritton notched victories in the pole vault and 100 meters on his way to 6,999 points in the decathlon. He had never won the grueling 10 event spectacle in nine previous attempts at various meets and relays.

Geredine was measured at 50'4³/₄" in the triple jump, and ranked sixth in the long jump with a 23'10¹/₂" effort. He was defending long jump ace.

Allbritton, top NMSC pointmaker with 22 markers, finished in a three-way tie for second among high jumpers with a 6'8" reading and was third among pole vaulters with a 16'4¹/₄" height. The versatile senior, who almost cleared the bar at 16'8", rewrote hindered in the early weeks by a sprained ankle, he topped NMSC base stealers with five thefts.

Smith was the home-run king with three roundtrippers and showed a .298 reading at bat. Outfielder Terry Hayes (Glencoe) saw his average slip late in the campaign, but he still finished with a .290 pace.

Day, who logged a .396 reading as a yearling, dipped to .306 this campaign, performing in the outfield and at first base. But he paced the Bulldogs in total hits with 22.

Shortstop Mike Hurn (Cedar Rapids, Ia.) and Wehrmeister, who came to the plate only 46 times, tied for the runs-batted-in crown with 11 each.

Hurn, the steady-performing senior captain, hit .271. He must be replaced.

Otherwise, the remainder of the infield — third baseman Craig Martin (Waterloo, Ia.), second baseman Terry Hollander (St. Charles) and Day — will return in 1973.

However, the skipper indicated the probability of Day moving back to the outfield where he played full time until a shoulder injury reduced his throwing prowess for a while this season.

his old school standard of 16'3³/₄". He was the 1969 NCAA pole-vault kingpin as a freshman.

Jones anchored the Purple and White's fifth-place mile-relay quartet, which surprised prognosticators by clipping off a 3:11.2 time. Other baton carriers were junior Wayne Ventling, Webster City, Iowa, freshman Bob Gonzales, Jennings, and senior Rob Nelson, Tenafly, New Jersey.

That feat may have been as fast as they'll ever cover the mile," Gardner chuckled.

NMSC's other point was earned by sophomore high jumper Dennis Littrell, Wheeling, who matched Allbritton's height, but finished sixth because of the number of misses.

Littrell, Gonzales, Ventling and Nelson joined Geredine, Allbritton and Jones as NCAA All-Americans. All-britton has now been an All-American recipient four times, Geredine, three, and Jones, twice. Jones was first in the 1972 NCAA University Division Indoor 440-yard dash.

Seven of NMSC's national individual titles have been claimed by trackmen. Allbritton, Geredine and Jones have copped two a piece. Fred Banks took honors in the 1967 College Division 440-yard dash.

Two other Bulldogs at Ashland did not survive the semi-finals. Sophomore Linley Lipper, Kahoka, failed to qualify for the finals of the 1500 meters, and junior Al Fulton, Kankakee, Illinois, was eliminated in the high hurdle semi-finals.

Dave Wehrmeister Selected Most Valuable Player

Sophomore pitcher Dave Wehrmeister (LaGrange, Ill.), holder of six Northeast Missouri State baseball records, has been selected unanimously by MIAA coaches as the Most Valuable Player in the conference.

The announcement was made after a weekend meeting of the league mentors in Rolla to pick the All-MIAA mythical team.

Wehrmeister was the lone Bulldog performer on the first unit, and only three others from NMSC's second-place squad received recognition.

Senior infielder Mike Hurn (Cedar Rapids, Ia.) landed on the second team, freshman catcher Danny Smith (Dexter) was a utility-man choice, and sophomore first baseman-outfielder Scott Day (Wheeling, Ill.) was on the honorable mention list.

The 6'4", 195-pound Wehrmeister, second last week among NCAA College Division strikeout artists (15.1 per nine innings) and fourth in earned run average (0.80), was tabbed for honorable-mention honors in 1971 by the loop taskmasters.

He erased four of the six school marks this spring, including lowest ERA, most strikeouts in one campaign (94) and one game (20), and most innings hurled (56). He tied his own record for most wins in one season (5), established last year. Wehrmeister also hurled a no-hitter this season, the first for NMSC since baseball was revived in 1966.

Wehrmeister is also among seven Purple and White batsmen, holding the standard for triples in one season (2). He sported a .304 hitting average in 1972, as a part-time infielder-outfielder, and drove in 11 runs to share the RBI crown with Hurn.

The spectacled Hurn logged a .271 offensive figure, blasting a grand slam homer in one tilt, his third roundtripper in two years as a Bulldog. A steady man with the glove at shortstop, he charted a .906 fielding average. The team captain will be the only regular lost to NMSC next year, aside from the mound staff.

Bulldogs Share Conference Tennis Championship

Northeast Missouri State's tennis players plucked only one half of the big MIAA Conference "plum", but Fontaine Piper, who plans to take a contingent to the NCAA College Division National championships next month, was generous with his praise of the Bulldogs.

"I was extremely pleased with the way the fellows battled back to tie Northwest Missouri State for the league title last weekend at Springfield," the NMSC coach exclaimed. "They looked good enough to make a respectable showing in the national, June 5-9, at Kalamazoo College. They deserve to go." NMSC and Northwest deadlocked, 39-39, in the MIAA struggle.

Piper indicated he would not know his participants at Kalamazoo, Mich. until he checked entry regulations. "If we aren't limited to the number of singles and doubles entries and if any performer can compete in both singles and doubles, we'll be in a good position possibly to score some points," he explained.

NMSC finished a strong second in the 1969 NCAA tournament, but the Purple and White dropped to 11th in 1970 and a tie for 19th last season.

The Bulldog skipper particularly praised his No. 2 doubles combination-Ric Flach (Kirkwood) and Gary Randall (University City)—and his No. 3 duo—Fred Melone (Mt. Prospect, Ill.) and Dave Meyer (Florissant)—for their "valiant effort" in the MIAA encounter. Until Flach and Randall defeated Northwest Missouri's David Imonitie and Per-Mats Carlsson, 2-6, 6-4, 6-3, and Melone and Meyer subdued NWMS's Ed Douglas and Larry Wank, 6-4, 6-3, the Bulldogs were lagging behind, 39-33.

Piper said while he was glad at the beginning of the two-day outing Flach, his No. 2 singles choice, had received a first-round bye, he changed his mind.

"If Ric had drawn a first-round foe and beaten him, we would've won," he analyzed. "As it turned out, Flach lost a second-round match, and we received no points, of course. However, we did gain some revenge for the runnerup finish to the Bearcats in our own Invitational last month."

NWMS edged NMSC 30-26, in the battle for that trophy.

Bulldog singles aces last weekend were Steve Vann (Winfield, Kan.) at No. 1, Meyer at No. 5 and Don Martin (Mt. Prospect, Ill.).

They have been Piper's biggest winners. Meyer has written a 25-5 log so far, and Vann sports a 20-7 ledger. Martin has posted a 19-10 record. Randall has chalked up a 16-11 slate, Mike Terry (Quincy, Ill.) 15-13, and Flach, 14-13.

NMSC will carry a 12-6 dual mark into the NCAA tournament. The racquet men will work out on their own until the weekend of June 3 when they will return to the campus to prepare for the excursion to Michigan.

NMSC is anxious to attract the sons or daughters of alumni and friends of the college as prospective students. If you have a college age youngster or know of any outstanding high school students who are interested in college, send us their names.
