For Alumni and Friends of Northeast Missouri State College

President's Comment:

Editor's Note:

The following is part of the keynote address delivered by President Charles J. McClain, February 12, 1972 at the opening session of the NMSC Commission on Institutional Goals and Priorities for the 1970's. The 100-member commission is composed of alumni, Board members, administrators, faculty, students, legislators and friends of the College. The Commission has enlisted the assistance of the Academy of Educational Development, a New York-based team of experts in educational institutional planning. Charged with examining all facets of the College's life and establishing institutional goals and priorities for the 1970's, the Commission mounts a great challenge.

Northeast Missouri State College, along with other colleges, has experienced some unsettling moments. Periods of self-examination and close introspection are not at all new in higher education. In fact, a quick review of our records and those of other colleges reveals that those rocky times were chronicled. The rations, at best, in the era before 1945, were lean; and such was a way of life in the academic community. Affluence took over and most of us became acquainted with it, at least in a quasi-participatory manner, and we found that we liked it.

Now we are in a new age as legislators, deans, students, division heads, faculty, alumni, presidents and businessmen address themselves to the task of helping Northeast Missouri State College decide again its mission, project its priorities, conceptualize a revitalized curriculum and then support the implementation of it. It might be a trying time, but I say it is an equally exciting time! This is not the end--maybe the end of an era--but the beginning of a great new day. This day will be recorded in the history of this College as a most important one. I have no doubt about it. The sharpened list of priorities that develops from the efforts of this group will be the bricks out of which we build the new Jerusalem. Excellence should characterize the finished product of this Commission.

I expect to know at the end of this study:

- What curricular areas should be pared down or eliminated?
- What guidelines should be used to make these determinations?

- What curriculums should be expanded?
- What structural and/or reorganizational changes--academic and administrative--should be effected to provide better education in the sense that the goal of education is to better equip students to work, to play, and to love?
- What changes must be wrought in the organization to bring modernity to the teaching-learning process?

In short, if change is not to be mindless, this group must help us determine where we are by pulling together and organizing a good data base.

You must establish some guidelines to do what has to be done to go forward.

You must make specific suggestions as to options and/or alternatives to implement the changes conceptualized.

You are busy people. You were chosen because of your expertise and industry and initiative. The collective thoughts and judgments of this group should be better than the deeds and actions of one man.

I have my ideas of what's reasonable and what's defensible. You have yours. I don't plan to try to superimpose my ideas on this college community. Having said that, I am determined to be an energetic prodder to do some things that should be done.

- We must identify our areas for clusters of excellence.
- We must personalize the educative process and do more than give instruction.
- We must make painful decisions to eliminate some programs and support others.
- We must eliminate unnecessary support costs that can't be justified.
- In short, we must be good stewards for the powerful task which we have been assigned.

I welcome the challenge of planning for a new and fresh decade. I know you do too, or you wouldn't be here. Again, I state it's a trying time, but more importantly, it's an exciting time!

Urban Centers Returning to Mounted Patrols

Law Enforcement Offers Unique Patrol Program

Equestrian study most often reserved for the exclusive private colleges, will begin soon at Northeast Missouri State College, but in a form that is out of the ordinary. College officials announced recently that the Tennessee Walking Horse Breeders' Association is the primary benefactor of a Tennessee Walking Horse to be used as part of the College's Law Enforcement Education study.

"Hal's Prince", the present name of the horse, arrived on the Kirksville campus March 12 and will soon begin to work with students in the College's honor guard program in learning the principles of operating a mounted patrol.

The director of the NMSC Safety and Security force, Col. Leslie Greiner, is enthusiastic about potential of the program.

"The horse patrol went out of vogue in the cities with the invention of the automobile because of its speed. But it is only now that police departments are realizing that horses have many advantages that cars don't have, especially in dealing with crowd situations," Greiner said.

Greiner, who also is Commander of 135th Artillery Group of the Missouri National Guard, which covers the Northern half of the state was joined in his praise of the new program by Clyde Burch, the director of the Law Enforcement program at NMSC.

Burch noted the return of the mounted patrols in such cities as Washington, New York and Boston. Most recently Philadelphia reactivated its horse-mounted policemen in the downtown business district after an absence of 21 years.

Philadelphia Mayor Frank L. Rizzo said the mounted police are an efficient deterrent to street crime.

Burch, a former Assistant Attorney General, serving under Thomas Eagleton, now United States Senator from Missouri, reinforced Rizzo's conclusion.

"We have been consulting with the St. Louis Police Force's horse patrol and they tell us since they began working in the Forest Park area, the crime rate there has plummeted 52 per cent," Burch said.

Burch reinforced the fact that Hal's Prince will be used primarily to train law enforcement majors and other than perhaps helping at football games in directing traffic on campus he is needed in only simulated law enforcement situations.

The enthusiasm for potential of the new program goes all the way to the top of the College administration. The Board of Regents has approved the new program.

College President Charles McClain has added his support of the training in horse patrol specifically as well as Law Enforcement Education generally. The President pointed out that although Law Enforcement Education is only two years old at NMSC, it is the fastest growing program at the College with almost 200 majors.

McClain also thanked the Tennessee Walking Horse Breeders' Association: "We have had this project in mind for several months but until the Association initiated the major share of the funds for Hal's Prince, we didn't think we could have the program."

Hal's Prince is a five-year-old Tennessee Walker from the Don Bolinger Stables in California, Mo. He was foaled in Kentucky and has been shown there as well as in Tennessee and Missouri. Bolinger says Tennessee Walker is known for its ability to "walk" many miles each day without tiring. Hal's Prince will be housed, at least temporarily, on campus in the College's Red Barn.

REVOLT

No one believed it could happen here, but it did - the student revolt at Northeast Missouri State College. What makes that revolt unique is that it took place at a very conservative college in a conservative community and in a conservative state of Missouri where the people are as stubborn as their mules.

I remember the day when Northeast Missouri State was a small country college. It had about 500 students of both sexes. Most of them came from the farming communities in northeastern Missouri, central western Illinois, and southeastern Iowa. They were good, wholesome kids with definite goals in their lives - to get an education to be teachers. They were too busy with their studies to cause trouble on or off the campus.

Not many of them came with automobiles, and there were no parking problems. About the only parking problem the boys had was to get their girl friends to agree to it. Nor were there many exciting events. About the most exciting events in any school year were the ball games and the spring party raids.

It is inconceivable that such a cozy, peaceful college would have any trouble with its students, but it had as did hundreds of other institutions of learning. Although the student revolts at Northeast Missouri State were not as violent or as widely known as those which took place at Harvard, Columbia, Cornell, Berkeley, San Francisco State, Santa Barbara or Kent State, they may be equally important, if not more, in understanding the nature of student revolts which shook up various universities and colleges across the land.

As usual, there are some differences of opinion, but practically all observers of campus unrest agree that permissiveness was one of the main causes of student revolts on this as well as on other campuses.

The air of permissiveness has been building up in America for more than a half of a century. The homes have failed to discipline the kids. The schools have done no better. The churches have failed to teach their constituents to behave like Christians. The whole nation was too obsessed with freedom to impose discipline on anyone. As a result, almost every Tom, Dick and Harry feel free to break the law and defy the authorities with impunity.

When the college students rebel against the authorities, academic or otherwise, they have done nothing particularly unusual in such a permissive society where breaking the law and defying the authority are condoned as heroic acts of freedom-loving people. Had our young people observed blindly all the rules and regulations of such a society, something must be wrong with them.

Another point of agreement among most observers of student unrest is the size of the institution and the quality of the students and faculty.

When the college was small, it operated like a big family. Everybody knew everyone else, and all greeted each other with warm, friendly smiles. But when the college became a large university, the cozy, friendly atmosphere of the institution faded away, and everybody became a stranger to everyone else. In such a situation, friction and misunderstanding are bound to rise, and they did.

The bigness of the college alone could not have created trouble at Northeast Missouri or anywhere else. But a great many students were not of good college material. They had neither the ability nor the desire to pursue a higher education; they were bored and restless and were well disposed to trouble-making.

Some students of this type came from the mid-western cities like Chicago and St. Louis, and others came from the eastern cities in New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. Most of them had already been exposed to some radical ideas and activities and easily became the ring leaders of the campus rebels.

The students alone, however, could not have staged a major revolt against the administration because they did not have the guts to do it. What they lacked was supplied by the professors who gave them enough encouragement to rebel.

Among the most conspicuous were two young sociology instructors. They challenged and inspired the kids as few men could. In no time they gained a considerable following among the students. The secret of their popularity was to tell the students what all young people want to hear - the same old stuff which made Marx, Lenin, Mao and Castro the idols of millions of rebels throughout the world, namely that our capitalistic system is corrupt and decadent, oppressive and tyrannical, and that it is their duty and privilege to destroy this rotten system and build a more perfect society.

Inspired and encouraged by the sociology instructors and the radicals from the big cities, the once docile, timid country kids became defiant rebels. They would bow to no one and accept no compromise. They were determined to have their way by peaceful means, if possible, and by force if necessary.

The administration of the college itself was another cause of the student revolt at Northeast Missouri State as at other institutions of learning. Had the college had a strong administration which would tolerate no nonsense, it is doubtful if the students or faculty would have dared to make trouble. But Dr. Walter H. Ryle, who had presided over the college with a firm hand for more than thirty years, stepped down and a new president was installed. This change of administration gave everybody an opportunity to get in the act of complaining, reforming, or just raising the roof.

No one can maintain that these were the only causes of campus unrest at Northeast Missouri State or elsewhere, but few can deny that they were not, either.

The first wave of student revolt at Northeast Missouri State College hit the campus in the spring of 1969. The protesting students were largely blacks who were inspired and encouraged by the Civil Rights Movement in the south. So it may be regarded as a part of the Civil Rights Movement in the United States.

The black students constituted only a small minority of the student population and were treated like all other students with little or no discrimination.

But they had been faced with a considerable discrimination outside the campus. They could not get a haircut at local barber shops. They were refused service at local restaurants. They could not rent off-campus rooms or apartments available to other students. They had repeatedly asked the college authorities to help abate these discriminatory treatments, but the college could not or did not help much. So they decided to have a direct confrontation with the college administration.

One evening the black students invaded the administration building and blocked the hallway, demanding immediate action on their behalf. President F. Clark Elkins and his assistants entered the building through the back door and received the representatives of the black students at a room on the second floor. When confronted with the president they shouted and yelled condemnation and denunciation at him for his failure to alleviate their plight. The president remained calm and just listened. When their shouting subsided, he promised to do what he could, and warned them to clear the hallway, or all would be under arrest.

There were tense moments. Violence was a distinct possibility. But cool heads prevailed over hot heads, and led the protesters out of the hallway into the Baptist Student Union across the street. There they were served coffee and doughnuts and dispersed peacefully after the refreshment.

Since then Dr. Elkins resigned and Dr. Eli F. Mittler served as a temporary president. In a short time, Dr. Mittler established a good communication with the students and faculty and created a friendly atmosphere on the campus. But he too stepped down when a new president was found.

Dr. Charles J. McClain, the new president, is one of the twelve college presidents in the United States who serve as members of The Committee on Policies and Purposes of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities, representing nearly one-third of all college students in the country. He is an exceptionally brilliant young man with a keen sense of understanding of the nature of the problems facing our institutions of higher learning. With the installation of Dr. McClain as president, few people anticipated any more trouble at Northeast Missouri State. But more and bigger troubles were yet to come during the early years of the new administration.

It was in the spring of 1970 when the new administration was only several months old that the students staged another demonstration, not against Dr. McClain, but against President Nixon for continuing the war in Indo-China. So the new demonstration may be regarded as one phase of the anti-war demonstrations which swept the country from coast to coast.

The radicals at Northeast Missouri State, like their peers at other colleges and universities, believed that President Nixon should have withdrawn all our troops from Southeast Asia immediately and unconditionally. The incursion into Cambodia early in May, 1970, made them believe that President Nixon was escalating the war instead of de-escalating it. Their apprehensions were deepened by the news media, all of which attacked and denounced the president's action mercilessly. Few reporters and commentators took the trouble of explaining to their readers or listeners that Cambodia was not a neutral country, but was a Communist sanctuary from which they had organized and staged their attacks on our forces in South Vietnam for years. Even such a commentator as Paul Harvey, who was widely listened to in Northeast Missouri, attacked and denounced the president's action in the strongest and the most inflammable language that anyone ever heard him use.

While the anti-war sentiment of the students was already very tense, the Kent State affair broke out. The same news media, which inflamed the students over the Cambodian incursion, now poured more oil to the fire that was burning in the hearts of the students, radicals and conservatives alike.

Without informing the public that SDS had been working for such a confrontation for two years or that the radicals had been burning and looting both the city and the university for several days and nights before that tragic incident, all the news media did at that time was a merciless attack on the National Guard and President Nixon for the murder of the innocent students.

This distorted news about Kent State and Cambodian incursion together with the skillful agitation by the campus radicals and several local preachers, the students at Northeast Missouri State became very angry and unpredictable.

A large gathering of students held all-day and all-night protest meetings in front of the Student Union and continued to attack and denounce the National Guard, President Nixon, and the whole United States for shooting down the innocent students and invading helpless, peace-loving Cambodia. Fortunately, the activists spent most of their energy in this and other protest meetings and did not or could not resort to more violent forms of protest.

The truth about Kent State and the Cambodian incursion had sobering effect on our emotionally charged students. Most of them seemed to settle down and study as usual for their final examinations and commencement exercises. But still more troubles were yet to come, and within a year.

The Board of Regents refused to renew the contract of the two sociology instructors and let them go without giving them tenure. The Board did so on the ground that the sociology department needed professors with Ph.D. degrees, but that neither of them had such a degree, nor were they working for one.

The students refused to accept that explanation and demanded the truth, the whole truth, nothing but the truth. What they were demanding was nothing less than a frank admission that the two instructors were fired because of their radical views and activities. This neither the president nor the Board of Regents would do. So the students who were taking sociology started a movement to force the administration to bow to their demands.

They ran in the College Index, the student newspaper, a series of articles attacking and denouncing the administration. Through an underground newspaper known as Rip-Off Press, they printed and circulated vicious charges against the president and the Board of Regents in a dirty, vulgar language which would make most obscene publications sound like classical literature. They also made some bomb threats and other threats of sabotage and violence.

Undoubtedly, some of these rash actions were taken only by a small minority of the radicals without the knowledge or consent of the majority of the protesters. But what a small minority group did had a very harmful effect on the whole protest movement for the same reason that one rotten apple spoils the whole barrel.

Against all these unsavory attacks on the administration, the new president did absolutely nothing. Some smart kids thought he was a "chicken" and was too afraid to do anything against them. But what they did not realize was that by refusing to move against them, the president deprived them of their chief source of ammunition that he was a fascist and his administration repressive.

Without any interference by the college authorities, the students continued to press for the acceptance of their demands. They demanded, among other things, a frank admission that the two instructors were fired because of their radical views, and in violation of their academic freedom, and therefore, they be reinstated. They also demanded a student representation in the Board of Regents, which is the ultimate governing body of the college. There the new president showed his backbone. He told them frankly that their demands were not negotiable. When they threatened a strike against the College, he told them bluntly to go out and test their strength. So the die was cast.

But before the curtain was raised for the final act, the American Association of University Professors and The Civil Liberty's Union were invited to act on the behalf of the students and the two instructors. Neither organization could do much for them either in the name of academic freedom or civil-rights. So there was nothing else for the students to do but strike.

It was just before the 1971 Easter vacation when the question of strike was put to vote. Out of a total student population of 6,500, 1,350 voted in favor of the strike, and 1,656 voted against it. So the move to strike against the administration fizzled out. But what surprised most people was the unforgettable fact that a small group of radicals constituting only a fraction of the student population could move the whole college so close to a strike.

After the storm had subsided, President McClain took steps to prevent similar disturbances in the future. He reorganized his administration to improve communication with the students and faculty; he conducted many mini-seminars at various dormitories to give the students an opportunity to air their views frankly and rationally; he authorized the installment of a "Hot Line" for instant communication in urgent matters which might rise on the campus; he invited the student leaders to participate in discussions for determining academic goals and priorities; he replaced the old campus security guards who were regarded by many radicals as a symbol of repression with the student honor guards, wearing attractive uniforms. Above all, he engaged three new sociology professors, two with Ph.D. degrees and one candidate for the same degree. These new professors transformed the "street" sociology into a "classroom" sociology with emphasis on studying the subject rather than using it as a blue print for social revolution.

Whether it is because of these innovations or because of other factors like the winding down the Vietnam War, or because the dissenters lost all their steam and were just pooped out, or because they became wiser by their experiences from violent demonstrations, or because of the absence of the two sociology instructors, the campus at Northeast Missouri State College regained its calmness and tranquility reminiscent of the pre-revolutionary days.

No one can be sure if there will be more disturbances on this as well as on other campuses. But few people think that our colleges and universities will remain peaceful centers of learning and research without ceasing to be the spawning grounds for revolutionary activists. Whatever happens, most students and faculty and townspeople in Northeast Missouri feel that so long as Dr. McClain is president, he can handle any situation which may rise.

Science Div. Receives $52,992 Grant

The institute will concentrate on the theme of population ecology this summer. The session will run from June 12 to Aug. 4 under the direction of Dr. Rosebery and the assistance of Dr. Max Bell, science professor. Five NMSC faculty members will be selected to staff the institute, Dr. Rosebery said.

'13 Alumna Donates $1000 Gift to NMSC

A gift of $1,000 has been received by the Northeast Missouri State College from a 1913 graduate, Mrs. Gladys Millay Bailey of New York, New York.

"I have had a warm place in my heart for the College since my days as a student and will never forget the wonderful influence of the faculty while I was a student there," Mrs. Bailey said. "I especially remember Mr. A. P. Settle, who was a teacher of literature, and Mr. Gephart of the music faculty. The College had a wonderful faculty then and I am confident the same is true today."

President Charles J. McClain said, in announcing the gift, "Naturally, I was excited to receive the news of Mrs. Bailey's generous gift to her alma mater. I was warmed by such a wonderfully loyal act. Mrs. Bailey can be assured that education at Northeast Missouri State College will be strengthened as a result of her unselfish gift."

Mrs. Bailey is a native of Sullivan County and first attended the Kirksville Normal School, taking an elementary course equivalent to high school work from 1906 through 1908. In 1908 she received a teaching certificate and served as a teacher in the Winigan School, Alexander School and Lone Star prior to returning to the Normal School in 1911 to complete the Bachelor of Pedagogy degree in 1913.

In 1913 she became a member of the faculty of Bosworth High School in Carroll County where she taught for two years prior to her marriage to Dr. S. L. Bailey, an osteopathic physician. The Baileys moved to New York in 1923, where Dr. Bailey was in practice until his death in 1942. Mrs. Bailey has continued her residence in New York and served as a legal secretary until her retirement in 1957. Since that time she has continued to be active in civic and cultural affairs.

A "Hotline" is being used to "cool it" at Northeast Missouri State College.

The recording device is hooked up to an outside phone line, operating 24 hours a day. The idea is to help improve communications between all segments of the college community.

Anyone with a question or complaint may call in and have his question recorded. The public relations staff monitors the recordings each day, and seeks answers from appropriate sources.

Questions of personal nature are answered by mail, and questions of general interest are answered in the campus newspaper, the "Index".

Track Coach Pleased With Team's Success

Going into the MIAA Indoor Meet on March 18 at Columbia, the NMSC track team was proving Kenneth Gardner's cautious optimism was well-founded.

He was generally pleased with results of a steady diet of January and February competition which saw the Purple and White participate in the Robert Karnes Invitational, a seven-team encounter at Illinois, two triangulars and two duals.

Gardner's cindermen won four events at the Karnes outing on Jan. 14, but they were crushed by Drake

Sims Needs Big Man For '72-'73 Campaign

A big pivotman could make a world of difference in the outcome of Northeast Missouri State's 1972-'73 basketball campaign.

This was the appraisal of Coach Willard Sims after his Bulldogs posted a 13-11 overall record and a fifth-place finish in the MIAA race this past season.

"We were at least one big man away from a championship-type club even though we had lots of youth on our roster," maintained the first-year mentor.

Forward Greg Scott (East St. Louis, Ill.), who led NMSC point getters with a 15.6 pace, was the only senior on the 1971-72 edition. Sims' problems were similar to those of any mentor with a new personnel learning the systems of a new skipper.

"But I was pretty well satisfied with our year, as a whole," the taskmaster continued. "Injuries played a major role this winter, and if we'd been fortunate enough to avoid them, we might've won three to five more games."

Sims' troops experienced an assortment of nagging injuries, but the key one was the loss of junior forward Lou Gregory (East St. Louis, the following weekend, 99-40.

SPORTS

Then, on Jan. 29, they began to hit their stride, finishing third in the Illinois meet behind the host school and Drake. However, they were ahead of such track powers as Murray (Ky.) State, Middle Tennessee, Lincoln (Mo.) and Kentucky State, defending NCAA College Division champion.

The Bulldogs deadlocked Northern Iowa, 70-70, on Feb. 5, the first time they had finished in a tie with a dual opponent, at least since Ill.) for the final three weeks of the schedule. The muscular, 6'3", 202 pounder was beginning to come into his own before sustaining a depression fracture of the frontal sinus bone above his eyes that required corrective surgery.

Gregory was the top Purple and White rebounder with a 10.9 average and was hitting at an 11.6 clip before his mishap on Feb. 7 against the Lincoln Blue Tigers, eventual conference titlists.

At the conclusion of the 1971-72 calendar, Sims was starting Scott, plus one freshman, two sophomores and a junior. Nap Evans (St. Louis), the third-year man, was manning Gregory's spot. Evans, a Meramec Community College transfer, climaxed the campaign with an 8.0 average.

One of the second-year performers, guard Joe Boyer (Festus), was runnerup in scoring with a 14.3 pace. The other sophomore in the lineup was Mark Seip (Tuscola, Ill.), a 6'7" pivotman, who played his freshman ball at Southern Illinois (Carbondale). He logged a 9.8 chart for the Bulldogs.

Sims said Seip, who possesses good outcourt touch, would work

Gardner started coaching the sport 20 years ago.

During the remainder of February, NMSC claimed second in a triangular with Iowa and Northern Iowa and nipped Western Illinois and Lincoln in a three-team outing at Macomb, Ill. Iowa edged the Bulldogs, 66-63, and Gardner's men nosed out Western, 67 1/2 to 66 1/2.

All-American Tom Geredine (Kansas City) was fifth in the long jump and triple jump at the Mason-out with weights during the off-season to improve his strength. He may also be wearing contact lens when the Purple and White open their next campaign, because of problems "seeing low, hard passes from teammates at times," according to his pilot.

Freshman Jim Blaydes (East St. Louis, Ill.) got his chance for regular duty in the Feb. 7th Lincoln contest. He ended the year with a 4.5 scoring clip, demonstrating he should be a mainstay next season.

Sims stressed the work of his bench. "We would've been in bad shape without reliable reserves to take up the slack for our injured starters," he noted.

Junior backliners Jim Magruder (Oakland, Ill.) and Mike Church (Jerseyville, Ill.), sophomore forward G. V. Saffarrans (Palmyra), sophomore guard Tom Pausche (Lisle, Ill.) and an aggressive freshman center, Ted Petchell (Lake Ozark), made vital contributions.

Sims said junior Bob Lewis (Salisbury), who lost his backline assignment because of a mid-year slump, should be "back in the groove" next season. The (Palmer, Ia.) Junior College product recorded an 8.6 figure.

Dixon Games on Feb. 12 in Louisville, Ky. He was scheduled to compete in the same events at the NCAA University Division Indoor on March 10-11 in Detroit, along with sprinter Larry Jones (Lemoore, Calif.), who planned to enter the 440-yard dash.

One of the highlights of early track activity was Linley Lipper's (Kahoka) record-breaking two-mile run against Iowa and Northern Iowa. He was clocked at 9:17.4, four-tenths of a second better than Ron Werling's 1964 mark.

The NMSC headmaster also pointed to a rugged portion of the schedule, beginning Jan. 24, which kept the Bulldogs away from the friendly confines of the Pershing Arena for about a month. During that stretch, they notched only one triumph in six outings.

"Home encounter in the middle of that period of time might've given us a necessary shot in the arm," Sims added.

What was his biggest disappointment this year? "Probably our field-goal shooting (.417) and an inconsistent defense," he replied. "I thought our accuracy from the floor should've been better than that figure. When we'd play tenacious defense, we'd usually come out on the long end."

The Bulldogs allowed only 71.8 points in winning efforts and 86.9 in losing causes.

"We should be a more cohesive unit next winter, now that our newcomers and returnees have played together," Sims concluded. "So if we can recruit that guy with size to help take pressure off our forwards, we'll make our presence felt in 1972-73."

Wrestlers Place Fourth In Conference Matches

Northeast Missouri State's wrestling program will be in a continued state of rebuilding next season.

This was how Coach Bruce Craddock sized up the situation, as he turned his attention to recruiting new grapplers.

"We'll need to replace people next year at 118, 134, 142, 177, 190 and heavyweight," commented the mentor, whose 1971-72 edition climaxed a frustrating campaign with a fourth-place finish in the MIAA championships last weekend. The Bulldogs turned in a 7-10 dual slate.

"We're losing some pretty solid performers," he moaned. Seniors wrapping up their careers this winter included 142-pound Matt Stallings (St. Louis), 167-pound Dan Klein (Harlan, Ia.), 150-pound Bob Bilder (Mt. Carmel, Pa.), 134-pound Daron Greene (St. Louis), and 150-pound Al Williams (Russellville).

And Craddock might have to add the name of Gene Proctor (Ottumwa, Ia.) to that list. The junior heavyweight is not sure whether he will use his final year of eligibility.

Klein amassed the most NMSC triumphs in an 18-8-1 campaign this year, finishing second in his weight class at the conference

Mini-Dogs Win Third Straight MIAA Crown

What does a team do for an encore after winning at least a portion of the MIAA football title the past three seasons? Well, Northeast Missouri State's Bulldogs will take aim at another title in 1972, and they just might be in better shape to contend for the crown than the past three years.

That is, if the quarterbacking remains sound, and the Purple and White can avoid numerous key injuries and scholastic fatalities, according to Coach Russ Sloan.

His 1971 forces notched an outright MIAA pennant after the previous two clubs grabbed a share of the flag. This year's edition was undefeated in the league, the first time a conference team has accomplished this feat since 1968. NMSC also recorded nine victories, only the third time for this gridiron achievement in the history of the school.

"We'll lose only six of our 22 starters, and our depth situation looks a little better for next season," remarked Sloan. "However, we'll be small again, and will have to rely on quickness and keen desire."

The 1971 crown-wearers averaged a mere 183 pounds per man defensively and 191 offensively.

Sloan's six senior regulars represented first-class quality. They were signal caller Bob Gibson (Lexington), fullback Pete Robertson (East St. Louis, Ill.), offensive tackle Greg Erson (St. Louis), defensive tackle Jim Gephardt (Washington, Mo.) linebacker Ken Powers (Chicago), and defensive "wildcard" Randy Dawson (Hickman Mills). Defensive halfback Joel Cockley (Mansfield, O.), another fourth-year warrior played a valuable reserve role.

"We'll miss these men, because they gave us strong performances and leadership throughout the campaign," Sloan said.

Gibson did a superb job of coming up with the big play and directing NMSC's triple option which was about half "Wishbone" at times, according to Sloan. The English Education student had impressive classroom credentials, a 3.13 academic average.

Russ Sloan, NMSC's Head Football Coach has resigned effective April 30, 1972. Sloan has filed as a Republican candidate for Congress from Missouri's Sixth District tournament. Stallings, runnerup at 142, chalked up a 16-6 ledger, rolling up 10 consecutive victories in one stretch. He also rewrote the school record for most points in one bout, registering 22 during the Southwest Missouri State College Invitational in December. Stallings and Klein served as Bulldog co-captains.

Senior co-captain Dan Klein of Harlan, Ia. holds a distinct advantage over his Western Illinois opponent in this 167-pound bout during the past wrestling season.

The pilot called offensive tackle Greg Erson, who only tipped the scales at 200 pounds, one of the fundamentally soundest linemen he had ever coached. The senior tri-captain switched from a guard slot this season.

Robertson, a powerful runner, was runnerup in the MIAA rushing average category with a 4.8 clip.

Gephardt, another tri-captain, adjusted quickly to the transition from middle guard. He is another strong academician, carrying a 3.04 average and a choice for "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities".

Powers, a gritty competitor, overcame a series of injuries to become one of the better MIAA linebackers. After ailments plagued him throughout the 1970 season, the tri-captain was hit again by the injury jinx this year, starting with a broken thumb. Sloan said he also sustained a broken wrist at the end of the campaign.

Dawson, the team punter, had to work hard to become a fine "wild-card" for the Bulldogs. Cockley, who lacked previous experience, possessed a good attitude, and helped NMSC in spot duty.

"We were quite fortunate in not having many crippling type injuries, but we might not be so lucky next year," the taskmaster cautioned. "Our kids worked hard and kept in good shape all fall. And I'd be remiss if I didn't emphasize the great teaching job done by my staff, Chuck Shelton (defensive coordinator) and Bruce Craddock (offensive line coach)."

Sloan also lauded four student assistants, Paul Read, Van Hitt, Jeff Koroknay and Don Cummings.

Quarterbacking chores next fall are expected to fall on the shoulders of Geoff Engen (Wichita, Kan.), a 6'2", 190 pounder who transferred from Mesa (Colo.) Junior College this past autumn. The Kansas junior engineered the Purple and White to a 17-6 title clinching victory over Lincoln University on Nov. 13, substituting for Gibson.

"Geoff must dedicate himself to self-improvement during the off-season and spring drills, but he has one distinct advantage over Gibson," Sloan commented. "He has logged more playing time as a senior college signal caller than Gibson had charted this time last year. Engen did a fine job at the throttle against Lincoln."

Returning first team defensive personnel from the 1971 squad will include ends Al Fulton (Kankakee, Ill.) and Steve Franklin (Higginsville), tackle Dave Waterkotte (St. Louis) middle guard Warren Whitis (Cincinnati, O.), linebacker Craig O'Sadnick (West Brooklyn, Ill.) and deep backs Mike Dahlberg (Lombard, Ill.), Nate Derrell (Leavenworth, Kan.) and Kevin Miller (Mehlville).

Offensively, Sloan can count on ends Tom Geredine (Kansas City) and Mike Scott (Kansas City), tackle John Forbes (St. Louis) guards Randy Ball (Columbia) and Dennis Baldwin (Maryland Heights), center Dale Gildehaus (Washington, Mo.), tailback Lenvil Elliott (Richmond) and slotback Larry Jones (Lemoore, Calif.).

Two lettermen, sidelined by injuries this year, should be fit by the time another campaign rolls around. Slotback Marv Robinson (Monroe City) was expected to be one of the MIAA's best offensive threats before he was shelved by a knee injury in the third game.

Tackle Bart Crawford (Pittsfield, Ill.), an offensive starter on the 1971 co-championship squad, did not play this fall because of a bad knee. He still has another year of eligibility, if he chooses to use it.

One ball carrier, who might figure prominently in Sloan's 1972 plans, is Darrell Darrow, forced to sit out this season because of the transfer rule. Lineman Ted Gallion should help considerably on offense or defense, according to Sloan. He performed for the NMSC skipper at Carthage High School.

"Yes, we have a chance for a pretty good club next season, but we'll have to work awfully hard to achieve it," he warned. "We can't rest on past laurels."
