Northeast Missouri State University

March 2, 1992

Northeast's 125th: William D. Dobson

William Davis Dobson, the fourth president of the State Normal School, was born in 1848 in Greenville, Tenn., where he spent most of his childhood helping on the family farm. Like most country boys, he attended elementary education at the district school. Dobson was studying at the Academy of Tusculum College in Greenville when the Civil War broke out, so he was forced to discontinue his education until the war was over. He then re-entered college to receive his bachelor's degree with honors in 1870.

Following that, Dobson studied law for two years at Greenville and was admitted to the bar in 1852. Dobson originally came to Missouri in the fall of that year to practice law, but instead he began his life as an educator.

Dobson began his teaching career in Lindley, Mo., where he served for one year. He then became the first assistant in the Trenton public Schools, where he stayed for two years until he was elected to the chair of mathematics in the State Normal School at Warrensburg. Dobson was then appointed superintendent of Trenton schools and held that position for five years. Throughout his career, Dobson also served as superintendent of Carrollton public schools and Moberly public schools. In May of 1885, Gov. Marmaduke appointed Dobson as county commissioner, which he served nearly six years.

In 1891, Dobson applied for the position of president at the State Normal School and was declared the newly elected president after the Board of Regents voted five to seven in favor of him. Dobson continued as president until 1899 when he was put in charge of the newly created Department of History and Civics. He resigned from this position after one year, when he began to study at the American School of Osteopathy.

Lyceum Presents Amabile Piano Quartet

The Amabile Piano Quartet will perform at 8 p.m., March 9 in Baldwin Auditorium as the last presentation of the 1991-92 Lyceum Series. Free tickets for students, faculty and staff will be available beginning March 6 in the Student Activities Board Office, SUB, and at the door.

The Quartet is composed of soloists Marian Hahn, pianist, and Kathleen Winkler, violinist, plus Kathleen Mattis, violist, and Lisa Lancaster, cellist. Their works have made them known on six continents.

The Quartet chose the name "Amabile" because it is a musical term suggesting that a performer play not so much in an agreeable manner, as to play with a love for music. Recent reviews in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch suggest that is exactly how they play.

The Amabile Piano Quartet will feature works by Faure and Mozart in their present concert, which is funded by the Missouri Arts Council.

The group has toured throughout the United States and is sponsored in part by the Mid-America Arts Alliance and Arts Midwest.

NMSU, Bounce® and Cheer® are bringing the Harlem Globetrotters to Kirksville on March 29 at 2 p.m. in Pershing Arena. Tickets will soon be available in the NMSU Business Office (open Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.), Hy-Vee, Welch's Cash Saver and Easter Foods. Tickets are $10 for adults, $8 for NMSU students and youths under 12. For more information, call 785-4235.

Notables

The NMSU Debate Team finished first in categories of debate, oratory and interpretation at the Missouri Association of Forensics Activities State Tournament, held Feb. 21-23 at Southeast Missouri State University.

Three art students won prizes in the annual Undergraduate Art Competition, which is on view at the Columbia Art League Gallery in Columbia, Mo., through March 11. Dawn Layton, junior studio art major, won honorable mention for ceramic sculpture; Jeanne Scott Champaign, senior art history major, won honorable mention in ceramics; and Dave Carter, senior studio art major, won second prize in both ceramics and painting. The show was open to undergraduate students in BFA programs within the state of Missouri, and eight institutions were represented.

Marlow Ediger, professor of education, has had the following manuscripts published: "Geography in the Social Studies," in the Geography Journal; "Philosophy of Education and the Mathematics Curriculum," in Instructional Psychology; and "The Cooperative School," in Catalyst for Change. Ediger has also been appointed as a member of the examining board for evaluation of Ph.D. theses for Annamalai University in Tamil Nadu, India.

John Hart, assistant professor of language and literature and director of forensics, has co-edited the fourth edition of the Advanced Debate textbook.

Amarilis Hidalgo-DeJesus, assistant professor of Spanish, had her article, "Los pequesos seres: La consolidación de la novela moderna venezolana," published in the journal Revista de estudios colombianos y latinoamericanos 11 (1991).

Michael Kelrick, assistant professor of biology, was awarded a grant by The Nature Conservancy for a research project titled "Persistence of Introduced Sub-Populations of Missouri Bladderpod (Lesquerella filiformis)."

DeAnn K. Malone, sophomore business administration-finance major, of the NMSU College Republicans, was elected state chairperson of the Missouri College Republicans on Feb. 15.

David Cratis Williams, assistant professor of speech communication, had his essay titled "Revolution from Within: Burke's Theory of Aesthetic Form" as Argument Technique" published in the Proceedings of the Second International Conference on Argumentation.

Laura Zimmer-Tamakoshi, assistant professor of anthropology, recently chaired two all-day sessions on "The Legitimacy of Violence in the Pacific," and "Women and Age-Stratification Systems" at the Annual Meetings of the Association for Social Anthropology in Oceania, held in New Orleans.

Northeast Remains Competitive

Students and faculty have identified a number of questions concerning future fees and programs. The following question-and-answer format provides some clarity to three of those issues.

Although projected tuition and fees for the 1992-93 academic year are not yet available from most universities, the FY92 (current academic year) charts indicate that Northeast Missouri State University remains one of the lowest-priced schools in the state. Northeast's tuition, room and board costs ($4,384) are approximately $1,000 less than the University of Missouri-Columbia's costs ($5,315.80-freshman/sophomore, $5,528.80-junior/senior).

What is the basis for the tuition increase?

During 1991, the state cut Northeast's budget by approximately $450 per student. The tuition increase of $425 per student for the 1992-93 academic year will for the most part cover the amount the state cut.

As a result of the closing of the Family Sciences and Industrial Science divisions in 1991 and the consolidation of the Nursing and Health and Exercise Science divisions and the Department of Communication Disorders, the University will experience cost savings next year and in subsequent years that will help minimize the tuition increase.

The additional money and cost savings will help restore operations dollars, partially restore the equipment budget and allow for a modest salary increase. The money also will allow the University to no longer draw on reserves as it did this year. In addition, increases in services in a few areas will now be possible.

What will next year's additional $10 counseling fee be used for?

In the Vision Document presented by Student Senate in spring of 1991, the availability of on-campus counseling was listed as an important concern to students. The document read "As the University has raised its academic standards, the stress on students has risen. This, combined with an ever more complex world and the stresses of growing up, make quality and easily accessible counseling imperative."

The University recognizes additional on-campus needs for counseling services. A $5 per semester counseling fee per student will allow Northeast's counseling services to expand by means of additional staff on campus. The fee also will allow the University to address the issue of stress proactively rather than reactively and implement more preventative counseling services.

As a result of the fee, every student will be entitled to a specific number of free sessions with an on-campus counselor. Also, a variety of workshops and educational programming will be conducted for the benefit of all students. This proactive educational model will include programs focusing on drug and alcohol issues and stress management, among others.

Currently, the University contracts with an off-campus provider, Professional Counseling Services, that offers mental health services to students. The student pays $5 per session, and Northeast pays the rest. That $5 co-payment will be eliminated.

What will happen to undergraduate research?

The University will maintain its high level of commitment to promote undergraduate research as it has always done in the past. Northeast's undergraduate research opportunities continue to enhance the University's reputation as one of the finest undergraduate universities in the country. In addition, an increased emphasis on providing academic credit, when appropriate, will be applied to undergraduate research.

The only change regarding some 800 undergraduate research projects at Northeast will be the elimination of approximately 100 stipends. Nearly 700 students currently participate in research without any compensation. This is the situation with many other learning experiences, such as study abroad, service-learning and most internships; none of these carry stipends.

NEMO News Provides Active Learning

NEMO News, one of three student-produced television shows at Northeast, has been gaining popularity since its restructuring two years ago. The other shows are NE-TV, a compilation of videos produced by students, and NEMO News Magazine, a half hour of feature stories and skits.

NEMO News was already here when Johnny Langley, associate professor of communication, arrived, but he said it took about a year before the quality of the news shows met his standards of broadcasting.

"We had to get good stories and a high quality product before we could go to the campus community with what we were doing," said Langley, advisor for all three shows. "We began broadcasting on Channel 2, which is the same channel that Kirksville High School broadcasts on. We had to make everything suitable to the high school/junior high level."

The show was not without some rough times. According to Langley, more than once, the show would never make the air because Channel 2 would forget to run the tape and the community billboard would run straight through the time set aside for NEMO News. The shows are now broadcast on Channel 24 twice a week, Wednesday at 9 p.m. and Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

As the advanced TV class developed, which produces NEMO News, they improved the quality of the show and gained a larger following.

"We moved from a sort of underground show to now where I get comments from everyone," Langley said. "Word of mouth seems to be our biggest boost right now. Someone tells their friend, they tell their roommate, and so on throughout campus."

The focus of the shows always has been, and will continue to be, on the students and campus of NMSU.

"If it doesn't relate to the students, it doesn't go on," Langley said.

The stories on NEMO News tend to be light-hearted and fun to watch said Langley. Producer Chris Geisert said he thinks one of the changes that has helped the show's popularity has been the trend to film on location instead of in the studio.

"It makes the whole show more exciting and allows us to have fun as well as sneak in those facts that you need to know," said Geisert, a senior communication major.

Langley is excited about this year's NEMO News Magazine.

"This semester we have some really excellent anchors and that really helps to move the show along," Langley said.

The magazine also has a different look than the news program. It tries to be wittier than the news program, since it focuses exclusively on features and skits. There is more dialog between the anchors and participants and the topics tend to be more off beat than a hard news show.

"We try to keep it something close to Saturday Night Live," Langley said. "We have to keep that creative tone."

NE-TV, the student-produced video show, is gaining in popularity too.

"We now have enough great videos that I can show great NE-TV's all semester long," Langley said. "The videos are getting more and more provocative and controversial."

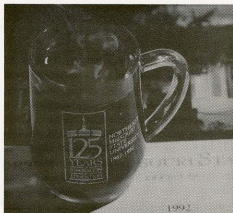

Langley and Geisert both agree that one way to improve all three shows would be to get better equipment.

"We're pushing the limit as it is," Langley said. "Given the equipment we've got, we put out a great product. With some serious equipment, we could be a real factor and it would allow for more creativity."

"For now, we're just trying to maintain the level of quality that we've achieved thus far," Geisert said.

Student-produced TV fits in perfectly with the new trend of active learning at NMSU said Langley.

"You just don't get more active than advanced TV because you have to know, or learn, something about what you're reporting on," Langley said. "You can really take the ball and run with it. It's like Active Learning 101."

The Limited Edition Commemorative 125th NMSU Mugs are now available for $8 at the Campus Bookstore and Patty's University Bookstore. Also available for the 125th anniversary is the limited edition NMSU 1992 calendar in the Campus Bookstore and Patty's University Bookstore for $3.

New Agriculture Course Offered

The Science Division and the agriculture science faculty will offer AGSC 100 Agriculture on an experimental basis in fall 1992 and spring 1993. Students successfully completing AGSC 100 will receive four credit hours toward fulfillment of the laboratory science requirements of the liberal arts and sciences core curriculum. Advisors need not fill out substitution forms, a blanket substitution has been arranged for all enrolled students.

AGSC 100 offers the study of agricultural systems and the interactions of these systems with social and environmental systems. As a general education science course it will emphasize science and the problems and benefits of its application through technology in both lecture and laboratory.

The class will help students bring the curriculum's elements into unity. Detailed course objectives and a syllabus may be obtained from Duane Ford, Barnet Hall 162.

Science Olympiad to be Held

The Science Division of NMSU will host the district Science Olympiad on March 7 in the Kirk Gym. Approximately 300 high school students from Northeast Missouri area schools will be participating in the event, which begins at 7:45 a.m. and concludes at 3 p.m. with an awards ceremony. All events are open to the public.

Nineteen schools will be represented at the Science Olympiad with 15-member teams competing at different levels, one for sixth through ninth grades and one for ninth through 12th grades.

The Olympiad will have 22 different events for the students to participate in. The teams will be testing their knowledge of chemicals and minerals, making cars from mouse traps and racing them, devising containers for egg drops, orienteering with the NMSU ROTC and competing in paper airplane contests among other events at the Science Olympiad.

Tel-Alumni 1992 reached its $120,000 goal and set a new record by raising $122,048 with the help of student, faculty and staff volunteers. The fund-raiser ended Feb. 20. The money raised will provide for endowed scholarships, student loan programs, instructional materials and equipment, faculty awards/development and cultural events.

Notes

Endowed Scholarship applications must be turned in to the Alumni/Development Office, McClain Hall 106 no later than 5 p.m. March 6. *Endowed Scholarship Program Addition: The ABC/Charles J. The Accounting Club is sponsoring Voluntary Income Tax Assistance (VITA) this year. VITA provides free income tax return preparation for students and the general public who have simple federal and state tax returns. Interested parties need to bring their 1991 tax information, including federal and state tax form booklets, and scholarship and grant information. VITA is scheduled for March 7 and 28 from 9 a.m.-3 p.m. in Violette Hall 120. No appointments are necessary.

Fifteen scholarships are available for the 1992-93 school year for students in their junior or senior year who are interested in beginning or continuing Chinese language studies at the Mandarin Training Center at Taiwan Normal University in Taipei. For application information, contact Julie Minn at 665-5978 or 785-7230. Deadline is March 30.

Student Ambassador applications are now available in the Admission Office, McClain Hall 205. Ambassadors serve as volunteer campus tour guides and assist the Admission Office in various capacities related to representing the Northeast student body to prospective students. Applications are due March 6 at 5 p.m.

Two $250 scholarships are available to students majoring in journalism or communications from the mid-Missouri chapter of the Public Relations Society of America (PRSA). The scholarships will be based on merit, academic achievement and involvement in community and campus activities. Applications are available in the Public Relations Office, McClain Hall 106 and are due March 27. The scholarships will be awarded at the PRSA career day luncheon on April 2. For more information on the luncheon, contact Kenneth Seeneay at 314-751-4919.

"A Little Anthropology and a Dash of Sociology, Four Scholarly Papers" will be presented at 7 p.m. March 3 in Ophelia Parrish 214. The papers to be presented are: "Kenneth Burke and Talcott Parsons: A Dramatic Account of Friendship and Its Character," by Keith Doubt, assistant professor of sociology; "Old Men and Rape," by Laura Zimmer-Tamokoshi, assistant professor of anthropology; "Targeting the Layer Cake: A New Shape for an Old Heuristic Device," by Robert Graber, associate professor of anthropology; and "On the Study of the Naishan Dune, or Kiowa Apache: A Critical Analysis of Method and Theory," by Michael Davis, associate professor of anthropology. Programs will be available in the Social Science Division Office, McClain Hall 214 and at the door.

General banquet tickets are available in limited numbers for the Presidents' Leadership Banquet scheduled for March 2 at 6:30 p.m. in the SUB Georgian Room. The 1992 awards will be presented during the evening by President Warren. Tickets are available in the Campus Activities and Organizations Center, for $6.

By dialing 627-HELP, students, faculty and staff can be put in touch with a female or male (your choice) sexual assault officer who is specially trained in the issues surrounding sexual assault. If you or someone you know has been assaulted, please obtain information about crisis support, right to anonymity, medical treatment, NMSU-supported counseling services, and options on police reporting and the University's procedure for disciplinary review/action. Anyone with an interest or need is encouraged to call for information about the above topics or other areas related to sexual assault.

The Fifth Annual NMSU Undergraduate Research Symposium will be held April 7. The symposium is open to any undergraduate who is interested in presenting his or her research. Abstracts and titles are due March 11. For more information, contact David Leszczynski in Barnett Hall 156 at 785-4411.

25 volunteer farm families living within 15 miles of Kirksville, Mo. are being sought by Duane Merlin Ford, assistant professor of agriculture, to participate in a new class to be offered next year. The class, AGSC 100 Agriculture, is designed in part to teach non-agriculture majors about agriculture and about the people who live on or near the land. Farm families volunteers will be asked (1) to attend an organizational meeting in early August; (2) to meet with approximately four students at least twice during the fall semester, once to show the volunteer's farm and the second time to show the volunteer's rural community and perhaps to take the students to a community function (social gathering, extension meeting, town meeting, etc.); and (3) to attend a get-together in early December for all students and farm family volunteers to discuss what has been learned. Students enrolled in AGSC 100 will be from various backgrounds, some with extensive experience of farm and rural communities and some with no such experience. The goals of this activity are to have students learn firsthand about the culture of Northeast Missouri farm families and rural communities and to help students connect the knowledge they gain in the classroom with the problems, successes and general activities on farms and rural communities. Anyone interested in participating should send a note or call Duane Ford, 162 Barnett Hall, NMSU, Kirksville, Mo., 63501, 816-785-4280. Notes should indicate where the volunteer's farm is located and provide a few details about it and the volunteer's family and community. Unfortunately, if there are more volunteers than are needed, some will have to be turned down.

The third annual NAIA Center Court Fair will be held from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on March 17 and 18 at Kemper Arena in Kansas City, Mo. The career fair is held in conjunction with the 55th Annual ARA Services and the NAIA National Men's Basketball Championship Tournament. NAIA students and other regional college students who hold day-session tickets to either of the two days of opening round play may attend the Career Fair to discuss employment opportunities and job-hunting skills with 22 national and local employers from the Kansas City area.

Nite Spike IV, an all night co-ed volleyball tournament will be from 8 p.m. April 4 to 8 a.m. April 5 in Pershing Arena. Each entrant will receive a T-shirt and door prizes will be awarded all night. The event is sponsored by the Blanton-Nason Hall Senate.
