Jody Powell to Speak

Former White House Press Secretary Jody Powell will speak on "White House Flackery," an account of White House press work, at 8 p.m., March 31, in Baldwin Auditorium. The lecture is sponsored by the Lyceum Series and the Division of Language and Literature communications program.

Powell, now a nationally syndicated columnist and network news commentator, has been involved in national politics for more than a decade.

Powell serves as a regular panelist on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley" and as a columnist for the Los Angeles Times Syndicate. He also appears as a guest panelist with the MacLaughlin Group where, in his own words, he "tries to introduce an occasional note of reason and moderation."

In 1985, Powell authored "The Other Side of the Story," a critical look at the way the press covers the White House. He is presently working on another book dealing with the American Civil War.

Since January 1985, Powell has also occupied the O'Neill Chair in American Politics at Boston College where he lectures on the modern American presidency and its relationship to the news media.

Powell was born Sept. 30, 1943, on a farm near the small town of Vienna, Ga. He graduated from the public schools there, attended the United States Air Force Academy and graduated from Georgia State University in Atlanta with a degree in political science.

While in his third year of graduate school at Emory University in Atlanta, Powell joined the gubernatorial campaign of then state Sen. Jimmy Carter. Following Carter's upset victory, he asked Powell to become his state house press secretary.

In 1973, Powell was one of the small circle of aides and advisers who began formulating the political plan that took Carter to the White House. In 1975 and '76, he was among the four campaign strategists responsible for the successful implementation of those plans.

Free tickets are available to students, faculty and staff.

Alexander W. Astin, professor and author of higher education studies; and former Secretary of Education Terrel H. Bell.

Newman, president of the Education Commission of the States since 1985 and a man with a diverse background in education administration and higher education, carries on the tradition of past lecturers.

He developed the Newman reports while serving on two task forces established by secretaries of Health, Education and Welfare, from 1969-73. In 1983, he became a presidential fellow at the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching; in 1985, he published the report, "Higher Education and the American Resurgence." He was president of the University of Rhode Island and director of university relations at Stanford University.

Newman is a trustee of Barnard College and the Academy of Independent Scholars. He is a past chairman of the board of trustees of the American Association for Higher Education and on several advisory boards—from the American Association of University Women to the Commission on Minorities in Higher Education.

He holds a doctorate in history from Stanford University, a master's in business from Columbia University, a bachelor's in engineering and in naval science and economics from Brown University.

International Club needs Americans

The International Club might attract more members if they changed the organization's name, according to senior Fanson Kidwaro, president of the club. Kidwaro is from Vihiga, Kenya.

Kidwaro said many American students think that "international" specifically refers to foreign students. However, he encourages Americans to join.

"The International Club is like a small United Nations, where every country is supposed to be represented, including the United States," said senior Sandra Hernandez from El Salvador.

The goal of the International Club is to develop mutual cultural understanding between international and American students. Within the club, members raise awareness through social and academic activities. More than 12 countries are represented in the club; however, only seven countries are considered active.

Although the club membership number is low compared with

Iota Nu Sweeps Delta Sigma Pi National Awards

Iota Nu: Most Outstanding Chapter

They won it in 1981, and in 1986, when Northeast's Iota Nu chapter of Delta Sigma Pi again accepted the national honor of the Most Outstanding Chapter Award, they were the first chapter in the fraternity's history to win the award twice.

The 1986 chapter won the regionals and won over the 16 other regional winners in the country. The chapter had to score at least 100,000 points on the fraternity's chapter-efficiency scale. Criteria for the scale range from the chapter's quality of professional programs to its community involvement and the leadership skills of its members.

Application for the honor included a bound book outlining the organization's activities for the 1985-86 school year, letters of recommendation and testimonials explaining why the members felt they deserved the honor.

Susan Plassmeyer, Delta Sigma Pi's National Collegian of the Year, outlined some of the successes of the 1985-86 year for Iota Nu: "First, we are very proud of the (work we did with) Lambda Omicron Chapter recently installed at Western Illinois University . . . —providing them with big brothers, advice and organizational support. . . . Second, "Brotherhood Hours" were added to each semester's calendar. For an hour before a party each semester, the chapter gathered to share some fun and to learn more about each other and the fraternity. . . . Finally, as a maturing chapter we have realized our responsibilities—both to the national fraternity and also to the campus community," she wrote.

Prior to winning the honor, Iota Nu donated a plaque to the national fraternity commemorating all the Outstanding Chapter winners in Delta Sigma Pi's history.

Iota Nu's Adviser Wins Regional Award

Liz Mossop, academic adviser in the Division of Business and Accountancy, was named the 1986 Midwest Regional Adviser of the Year by Delta Sigma Pi.

Mossop, who graduated from the University with a bachelor's degree in business administration in 1984, joined Iota Nu, Northeast's Delta Sigma Pi chapter, in 1982. She became the adviser in '84.

Members of Northeast's chapter nominated Mossop for the honor.

"Liz has been an example of the perfect adviser—always willing to lend advice and support—but never doing the work for us," students wrote in the nomination letter.

The Midwest region includes Kansas, Oklahoma and Missouri. The organization bases its selection on what services the adviser provides to chapters according to the nomination letters sent by chapter members.

Iota Nu members cite Mossop for her advice "both personal and chapter-related," for her volunteer work on Iota Nu fundraisers "from selling raffle tickets to pushing soda and hot dogs," and for her ability to communicate well with the University administration.

"In summary, Liz knows how to let us run the chapter and when to step in with a helping hand. Her involvement is very much appreciated by the chapter, and she is always reminding us how much she, in turn, appreciates us," the chapter members wrote.

Iota Nu gives an annual award named after their adviser, The Liz B. Mossop Award, to the member most vocal with constructive comments.

"The nature of the award reflects the fact that Liz's comments aren't always easy to hear—because she lectures us when we need it—but they are always well meant and usually uncomfortably true," the document said.

Alumna receives Collegian of the Year Award

Susan Plassmeyer, a 1986 NMSU graduate, was selected the 1986 National Collegian of the Year by the national Delta Sigma Pi business fraternity. In 1985, alumna Karen (Kettler) Gratzka, won the national honor. The two NMSU winners mark the first time in the national fraternity's history that two students from the same university have won during consecutive years.

Plassmeyer, who now works at the First National Bank of Chicago, graduated from the University with a double major in business administration and economics, maintaining a perfect 4.0 GPA.

She was a Pershing Scholar, a member of the Board of Regents and SAB, and she was named to Who's Who Among American Colleges and Universities. She was active in the Iota Nu chapter of Delta Sigma Pi where she served as president, vice president for professional activities and alumni relations chairman.

As collegian of the year, Plassmeyer will serve for two years on the board of directors and the National Executive Committee of Delta Sigma Pi. Each chapter nominated a member for the award. From regional nominees, a screening committee chose a finalist. The organization's national executive committee and the executive director chose Plassmeyer as the national winner.

Established in 1971, the award is based on scholarship, extracurricular activities, fraternity service, demonstration of responsibility to self and others and representation of conduct according to business ethics and integrity.

Plassmeyer is pursuing a master's degree from the graduate school of business at the University of Chicago.

International (cont. from page 4) other campus organizations, when the group sponsors an event, all 12 countries pull together.

The club plans two annual activities during the academic year. The fall semester includes International Night and an international dinner is planned in the spring semester.

International Night features international students presenting a part of their own culture, through song, dance and the display of traditional clothing, among other things.

Club members regard the annual dinner as a tradition. March 22 marked the 36th Annual International Dinner.

The International Club began around 1949. Paulo Depaula, one of the club's first members, does not feel that the organization and its activities have changed much since the first time he was a student at NMSU. After receiving a bachelor's degree in communications in 1953, Depaula returned to his home country, Brazil. In the past two years, while working on a graduate degree at his alma mater, Depaula has reacquainted himself with the International Club.

"Through the years the dinner has become an international tradition. It is an important date for bringing together the foreign students and the community," Depaula said.

Ann McEndarfer, temporary part-time instructor in Language and Literature, said that both the International Night and the dinner attract the student body as well as the Kirksville community.

"By getting involved in activities, international students are given a sense of responsibility and belonging. They feel good about themselves by doing something from their country and sharing their culture with others," Kidwaro said.
