Season's Greetings

LETTERS

The letters section contains many nice comments about the alumni directory many of you received in May. Yes, it was a difficult job gathering all the information about the graduates. Helen Bailey, Margaret Easley (now retired), my predecessor, Russ Harrison, David Clithero, Cindy Riddle, Ann Harrison and countless numbers of students who have worked in the Alumni Office through the years deserve the credit.

The credit goes to you, too, for responding to our inquiries about name changes, lost classmates, moves, marriages and children. That is the only way we can possibly keep track.

Thanks to those of you who have been patient with us about our errors. We knew before we published the book that there would be some mistakes. It was inevitable, but we knew that if we printed information, it would surely lead to corrections.

The Alumni/Development section contains a listing of directory updates which are errors that were called to our attention after publication. Thanks for letting us know.

One thing that we have had about a half-dozen inquiries about is the "miscellaneous" listing after some of the names. This listing appears for some alumni who graduated prior to World War II for whom we do not have a major listing. We are slowly getting this corrected with your help. I might add that there is NO problem with your official listing on your transcript with the Registrar's Office.

We just haven't had the time to systematically go back and research individually all the records of graduates prior to the formation of the Alumni Office. This is something that must be done carefully in order to maintain the security of all academic records. Maybe we can have it completed by the time the next directory is printed in 1989.

On another matter, between now and next May we hope to be out on the road more with some alumni meetings. Note the schedule we have printed and plan to see us when we are in your area. I think you would enjoy seeing old friends from Northeast.

Having just received the spring edition of the NEMOSCOPE, I am again lamenting the fact that I will be unable to attend the various alumni activities and receptions planned for this fall. I envy those who live close enough to take an active part in the life of our alma mater.

However, to compensate for all the reunions we have missed, a small group of NMSU alumni staged our own mini-reunion in May. Unable to travel the distance to Kirksville, we met instead at the Sheraton Hotel in Doha, Qatar. While the world was concentrating on attacks on shipping in the Arabian Gulf, five NMSU alumni were sitting on the shores of the Gulf thinking only of the student days in Kirksville.

Madhat Ahmed Abdulatif, Ahmed Khadir Mahmoud, Ali Al-Ansari, Fayez Rayyan and I spent the weekend looking at NMSU yearbooks and reminiscing about instructors, fellow students and lazy picnics at Thousand Hills State Park. The weekend proved all too short for the many memories we shared from our days at NMSU (1966-1972).

While in Doha, we discussed plans to meet again during early 1985, possibly in Manama, Bahrain. Anyone in the area who might wish to attend may contact me at Aramco, Box 1076, Abqaiq, Saudi Arabia.

Recently I received the Alumni Directory. What an excellent publication! I especially like the listing by years and the listing by present address. I was amazed to find a dozen or more NMSU graduates living within 20 miles of my home. We will have to get together.

There is one shortcoming that I hope you will correct in future editions. After my name (and many others) you put "Miscellaneous" instead of my degree, which was a bachelor's in education. Why? I am proud of my B.S. in education. From 1920 to 1933, it was the only four-year degree given by the college.

On Page 13 of the Alumni Directory, you list the various degrees. But what is the meaning of "Miscellaneous"? It is not in this list. Otherwise, the publication is excellent and most useful.

EDITOR'S NOTE: For the explanation of the "Miscellaneous" listing, please read the Editor's Comments column in this issue.

Thank you for sending me a copy of the Alumni Directory. It is indeed an impressive publication.

I must tell you, however, that I was a bit chagrined to read the classification after my name as "Miscellaneous." To me, this is completely nondescript information. Nowhere in the Directory is this "Miscellaneous" explained. No doubt there are others listed with this category who are as unhappy about it as I am. I did earn a bachelor's degree in both business education and music.

I enjoy receiving issues of the NEMOSCOPE and appreciate being included on the mailing list. I am sure the Alumni Directory was published and mailed at great expense.

Your Alumni Directory came today. I felt I should inform you regarding one error. There probably were a good many in a directory of that size.

However, if I am listed in the school files as having graduated in 1930, I would like to have that corrected. I graduated in August 1938 and majored in business education. I believe this would put me in the Class of '38.

Mildred Diekroeger Schlanker ('38)

What a great time I had when the Alumni Directory came! I "wasted" hours looking through it, figuring out its organization (great!) and feeling sorry about the "lost" alumni.

Maybe someday I'll write to all I'd like to touch by mail. Some college friends we still greet at Christmas time, but most have been lost--until now.

I feel so glad that this publication has been realized. Congratulations on such a difficult task!

We (my wife, Laura, and I) have attended and graduated from other institutions since leaving our alma mater and we have seen other alumni publications. Yours is by far the most complete and the best organized we have seen.

Congratulations to you and your staff.

I recently received my copy of the NMSU Alumni Directory and am writing to express my appreciation to all those involved in its production for a job well done.

It is obvious from reviewing the finished product that a great amount of time and work was spent in gathering data for the publication as well as arranging the format.

Thanks again for the production of an excellent publication.

AROUND THE QUAD

NMSSU's Board of Regent's has chosen the recipient of the William O'Donnell Lee Distinguished Chair of Asian Studies. At its August meeting, the board named Michael L. Lewis, assistant professor of social science, as the recipient.

Lewis began teaching at the University last spring. He earned his doctorate from Stanford, and has a master's in Asian Studies. Lewis has also studied extensively in Japan, including a 15-month period when he was research fellow at the University of Tokyo.

The first endowed faculty chair at the University was established last May. It is being funded through a gift from Dr. Jeanne Stephens Lee, the widow of William O'Donnell, a former president of the Board of Regents.

After 17 years as the University's director of financial aids, Wayne Newman stepped down from his post in August. Newman will be staying on at the University, though. He will be heading NMSU's Extension Office and Upward Bound Program.

Newman received his bachelor's degree from Northeast in 1958, and earned his master's degree from the University in 1967. He served as the assistant to the dean of instruction at NMSU for two years before becoming financial aids director in 1967.

The 1983-84 academic year proved to be quite a memorable one for the Index. NMSU's student newspaper celebrated its 75th anniversary last March. The Index was also judged an All-

American paper by the Associated Collegiate Press for the third consecutive year. ACP awarded the paper five stars of merit, its highest honor, for the fall semester. The Index received four stars of merit for the spring semester.

Measuring has been made easier by Ben Wood ('65) and his invention, the "nanoruler." The instrument was developed by Wood for his company, Eastman Kodak, and will be used to measure things under a microscope. With increased technology, Wood saw a need for more accurate measurement which no one else pursued. Wood began investigating existing standards and with the help of his assistant director and the National Bureau of Standards he created what is now in the books as the world's smallest ruler.

University academics continue to be recognized, both on campus and off campus. Richard Boyer ('54), currently a history professor at the University of Toledo, has been named a 1984 Outstanding Teacher at the school. He received citations and $1,000. Boyer has been a UT faculty member since 1964, where he has served on several academic committees and has authored three books on English history.

IN PURSUIT OF DEGREES WITH INTEGRITY. A VALUE-ADDED APPROACH TO UNDERGRADUATE ASSESSMENT

Prepared by Northeast Missouri State University
Published by American Association of State Colleges and Universities

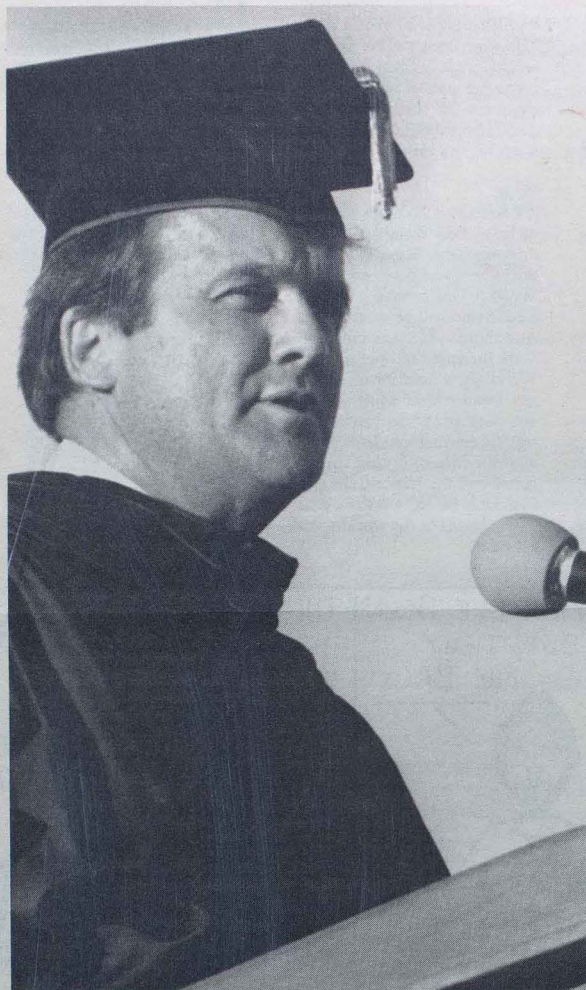

How well do colleges and universities educate students? Can campuses measure their effectiveness?

The value-added approach to excellence in higher education—an assessment method pioneered by Northeast Missouri State University—measures the effectiveness of learning by testing entering freshmen, sophomores, and seniors to gauge students' progress. The value-added concept measures achievements in math, English, social and natural sciences. Seniors are tested, prior to graduation, to evaluate academic accomplishments in their major fields.

In Pursuit of Degrees with Integrity: A Value-Added Approach to Undergraduate Assessment is available from AASCU Publications, Suite 700, One Dupont Circle, Washington, DC 20036-1193; $6.50 members/$8.95 nonmembers pre-paid per copy, includes postage and handling.

ALUMNI NEWS

KELLY ADDRESSES GRADUATES

Edward Kelly, superintendent of the Little Rock, Ark., School District and an NMSU alumnus, addressed more than 300 graduates during summer commencement exercises at Stokes Stadium Aug. 10.

A total of 408 students received degrees from NMSU in August, including 168 bachelor's degrees and 240 master's and education specialist degrees.

In his address, Kelly accented the importance of education in keeping up in a world of ever-changing technology and innovation. Kelly stressed the need for the education of the individual in society, saying that the value of individuals in this country has historically been determined by the character and mind of the individual rather than his/her social or economic status.

"We must teach and we must learn the value of the individual. We must teach that every individual is of value. By better educating our people to a better understanding of the value of the individual and by having the leadership we are capable of having, we can determine our future," Kelly said.

Kelly received his bachelor's degree from Northeast in 1964 and his master's in secondary school administration in 1968. In 1973, Kelly was awarded his doctorate in secondary school administration by St. Louis University.

Between 1964 and 1968, Kelly taught at Centralia High School and Parkway Central Senior High in St. Louis. He was the assistant principal at Parkway Central until 1971, then moved to a vice principal position at Harlem High School in Rockford, Ill., where he became principal in 1974. In 1975, Kelly became superintendent of the Harlem Consolidated School District, a position he maintained until moving to Little Rock.

Currently, Kelly's district is involved in a suit to consolidate the Little Rock School District with the North Little Rock School District and the Pulaski County School District, in an effort to maintain racial balance in the schools.

The Little Rock district won the federal suit locally last spring; however, the ruling was appealed to the circuit court which will probably arrive at a decision in the near future.

"We feel that based on evidence presented and the first judgment, we will win our case. We feel consolidation of some kind is the only possible solution. The reason why we have filed the suit is to obtain unitary status. Racial integration is only a part of the issue," Kelly said.

Kelly appeared on the CBS news program, "60 Minutes," last year in a segment concerning the suit.

TEL-ALUMNI GOAL NEARLY REACHED

TEL-ALUMNI-The 1984 Tel-Alumni Campaign concluded November 15 with $82,017 in total pledges from alumni and friends of Northeast Missouri State University.

Tel-Alumni was established in 1980 to assist the University in its endeavor to raise funds for the Development (Endowment) Fund. Scholarships, research grants, endowed chairs and a variety of other projects are financed through the NMSU Development Fund.

The fifth annual phonathon spanned four weeks, with student and faculty volunteers calling Sunday through Thursday of each seven-day set. The month was divided into four parts with University academic divisions calling during the first week, fraternities and sororities in week two, service and departmental groups filled the third week and finally, All-Star Week which concluded the phonathon as the top nine organizations and the top 30 individuals called.

Callers participating in Tel-Alumni competed for nightly awards and grand prizes for groups and individuals. All prizes were contributed by Kirksville-area businesses led by the Kirksville College of Osteopathic Medicine who presented a $770 scholarship to the highest individual caller.

Prior to the initial call made during the phonathon, approximately $35,000 in gifts had been received. Gifts and pledges totalled $117,017, which surpassed the $104,650 raised during last year's campaign.

Total pledges raised by each division and the winning individual and groups were:

Divisions:

Business	$9,583
Fine Arts	$3,367
Language & Literature	$3,241
Home Economics	$3,211

Individuals:

Chuck Scalise	$3,935
Marianne Hemming	$2,885
Kenny Ratliff	$1,790
John Schlepffhorst	$1,310
Mary Ann Shramek	$1,298
Rob Hultz	$1,195

Organizations:

Student Activities Board	$6,425
Delta Sigma Pi	$4,158
Sigma Phi Epsilon Pledge Class	$3,875
Residence Hall Association	$2,988

UNIVERSITY OFFERS DONATION PROGRAM

Suppose you had the opportunity to maximize your income, minimize your tax liability, ensure financial security for your family and make a sizable gift to the Endowment Fund of Northeast Missouri State University. Impossible? Not really. It can be done very simply through a program called planned giving.

As the name implies, this area of philanthropy is very complex, yet it is by far the most rewarding. It will not replace the Tel-Alumni campaign, but this method of giving was established to assist those with higher than average tax burdens who would like to make a large contribution to Northeast.

Planned giving can be defined as the giving of an asset, other than cash, to a charitable organization. Appreciated securities, real estate, life insurance and personal property are often used as gifts and are presented to charities through direct transfers, bequests, gift annuities, lead trusts and remainder trusts.

The reduction of income taxes is an obvious spinoff from this form of charity, but more importantly, capital gains and estate taxes can be avoided. Depending on the donor, a life income may be created or an estate may be preserved completely, to be passed on to heirs.

To better appreciate planned giving, an example of such a gift follows.

Consider the case of a 65-year old widow with a $350,000 home and $500,000 in other assets. She has $300,000 in stock yielding only four percent, but she is reluctant to sell that long-term holding and incur a sizable capital-gains tax. A charitable gift of that stock to NMSU through a remainder trust would increase the woman's retirement income and her children's inheritance, while also benefiting Northeast Missouri State University.

The trust would sell the woman's stock, tax-free, and reinvest in securities generating greater income. The trust agreement would provide for the woman to receive an income of possibly 10 percent for the rest of her life. She would also get an immediate tax deduction of $95,000 (from the IRS tables). She could use a portion of her improved cash flow to buy life insurance that would more than replace the value of the stock in her estate. When she dies, the charity will get the assets in the trust.

Planned giving can be effective regardless of a person's age or wealth. As a matter of fact, the majority of NMSU alumni can be assisted through this area of philanthropy and at the same time enhance Northeast.

DUROW HEADS NATIONAL FRATERNITY

William C. Durow ('70) has assumed the position of executive director for Alpha Kappa Lambda national fraternity. Durow, originally from Center Point, Iowa, heads the fraternity from its headquarters in Indianapolis.

As director of a relatively small national fraternity, 21 chapters and four colonies (several fraternities consist of 80 or more chapters and colonies), Durow finds himself wearing several hats. Besides coordinating the efforts of the national organization, he serves as a chapter consultant, visits campuses for possible chapter expansion and sits on the board of the newly created Educational Foundation.

Durow comes to Alpha Kappa Lambda from the Grand Lodge of Iowa, where he served as director of Masonic Education and assistant librarian of the Iowa Masonic Library. The facility, located in Cedar Rapids, is the world's largest Masonic library. Durow feels the experience the Grand Lodge provided will greatly enhance his work with the fraternity.

Along with his previous work, Durow also feels that his NMSU undergraduate education was just as valuable. "NMSU provided such a good base for career advancement," he said. "I just loved it--it was a fantastically terrific school and I'm not just blowing a lot of hot air!"

Serving as executive director has been an ambition since his days as an undergraduate at NMSU. During this period, Durow served as a regional coordinator and met Bill West, who was then the the fraternity's executive. Through this introduction, Durow said he was inspired to pursue the Executive Directorship.

As far as major objectives, Durow said, "I'd like to expand the fraternity in terms of number of chapters and build up the Biennial Conclave." He also added, "I'm going to strive toward the redevelopment of the Five High Ideals of AKL. I want to bring back the identity of the fraternity." Durow is also concerned with the growth of the Educational Foundation. This organization will promote academic excellence through programs such as scholarships and leadership development through regional conferences.

NMSU REUNION CLASSES

NMSU Freshmen rank well above the national average

Raised admissions requirements are an important part of Northeast's Value-Added Program, ensuring the University a quality freshman class each year. Currently, Missouri residents must rank in the upper 60 percent of their graduating class and score in the upper 60 percent on a nationally recognized standardized test such as the ACT. Out-of-state students are required to rank in the upper half of their graduating class and score at or above the 50th percentile on the ACT.

Although these high standards are what is required for incoming students, Northeast's freshman class exceeds these requirements.

The typical class rank of an entering Northeast freshman is at approximately the 72nd percentile. This typical freshman has a high school grade point average of 3.1 on a 4.0 scale and ranks well above the national average on the ACT and SAT tests.

Overall, 79 percent of the 1983 entering freshman class at Northeast ranked in the top 50 percent of their high school graduating classes. Twenty percent of this freshman class was in the top 10 percent in high school. Also, with more and more students applying to Northeast, the admission committee denied one out of five students who planned to attend NMSU during 1983-84.

The result of studies from 1981-83 comparing all of Missouri's regional state universities shows Northeast's beginning freshmen have a higher average class rank than all the universities studied.

The figures for the 1984-85 freshman class are in and Katie Steele, associate director of admissions, predicts this year's class will top last year's.

Students entering Northeast this fall represent 25 states and some 17 international countries, with 69 counties represented in Missouri, 51 in Iowa and 35 in Illinois.

Based on freshmen who have pre-enrolled for the fall semester, 25 percent of the entering freshmen are in the top 10 percent of their high school classes. Sixty-seven percent of the students rank in the top third of their class, and 90 percent rank in the top half of their graduating class.

Ten percent of the entering freshmen have an ACT composite score in the 95th percentile or above; 37 percent in the 75th percentile or above; and 72 percent at or above the 50th percentile.

Although a significant number of incoming freshmen have not yet declared a major, those who have declared majors have made 12 of the 140 major options most popular. Business administration tops the popularity list, followed by accounting, biology/pre-medicine, computer science, industrial technology, education, communications, nursing, agriculture, criminal justice, political science/pre-law and psychology.

With the quality of Northeast's freshman class, the University knows that a greater and greater number of this year's and next year's freshmen will endure the rigors of the curriculum, achieve their diplomas and go on to be successful graduates.

At stake for NMSU is a potential statewide role

Public higher education in Missouri currently is the topic of a hot debate which is expected to last at least until the conclusion of the legislative session next summer. The debate was prompted by a recently released report by the staff of the Coordinating Board for Higher Education, that suggests sweeping changes in mission for several public higher education institutions.

The Coordinating Board for Higher Education was established in 1974 to coordinate degree programs and missions of the various institutions in the state. To date, these are the most sweeping changes ever suggested.

NMSU would be designated to become Missouri's primary four-year liberal arts and sciences institution.

In addition to the recommendation for Northeast, the CBHE suggests that the University of Missouri-St. Louis merge; that the University of Missouri-Columbia concentrate on research and graduate programs; that Northwest Missouri State University in Maryville and Missouri Western State College in St. Joseph develop non-duplicative ways to serve northwest Missouri; that Southwest Missouri State at Springfield and Southeast Missouri State at Cape Girardeau report back to the CBHE with long-range plans to serve their areas; and that Central Missouri State at Warrensburg eliminate 40 percent of its degree programs and concentrate on industrial technology.

Regarding Northeast, the report noted: "The academic ability of the entering student at Northeast is the highest of the regional universities. While other four-year institutions have lost enrollment or remained static over the past five years, Northeast's enrollment has increased."

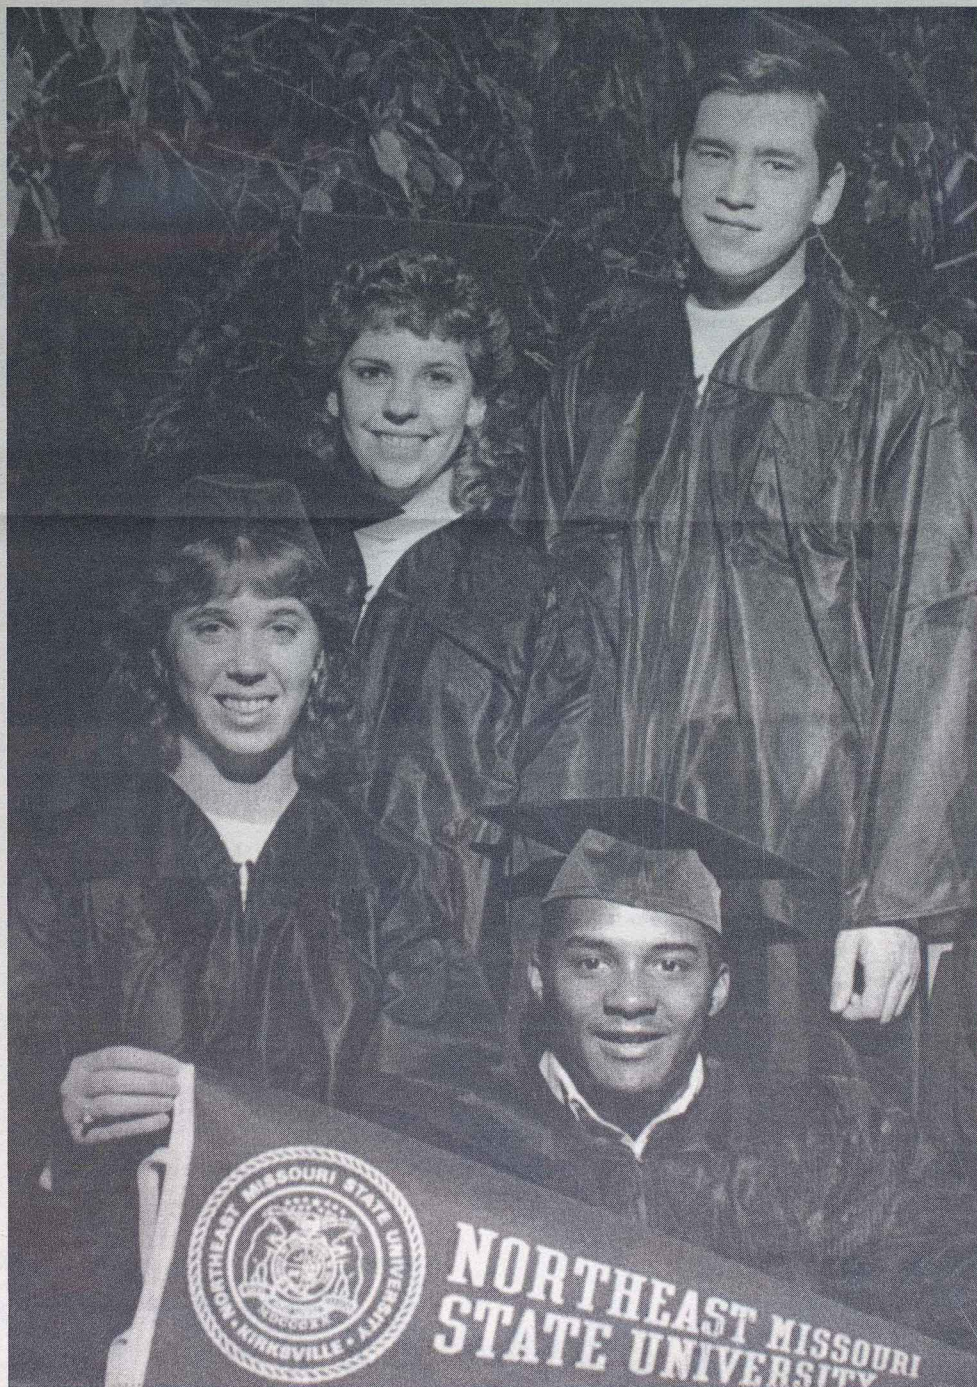

Northeast currently has a rather array of programs for an institution of its size. The major emphasis of the institution has been placed on strong interdisciplinary cooperation in program offerings by means of Northeast's somewhat unusual division structure. Coupled with this structural emphasis has been an award-winning effort to ensure that students improve performance in a number of areas of knowledge."

The specific recommendations are "Statutory changes that establish Northeast Missouri State University as the public liberal arts institution for the state; corresponding statutory changes so that its governing board reflects the statewide mission, with one member from each of Missouri's congressional districts." (The current board of regents members must reside in one of the 25 counties in northeast Missouri.)

The second recommendation calls on the new governing board "to address admission requirements, closure of two-year programs, and other program decisions appropriate to a liberal arts mission."

President McClain, in conversations with staff members, noted that the "liberal arts mission" is to be interpreted broadly to include areas such as education, business, accounting, mass communications, etc.; areas where NMSU has had a traditionally strong undergraduate program.

The plan now goes before the CBHE and legislative committees.

"I had to prove myself.

'People didn't know me and I never talked to anyone. . .

. . .I was out there trying to make the team."

And make the team is precisely what Ray Armstead did. He went to the trials considering himself the "darkhorse" to prove he could make it, and he emerged from the Olympic Games a bright and shining gold medalist. Ray Armstead had made a name for himself.

Armstead was born and raised in St. Louis, one of eight children in a close-knit family. He graduated from Northwest High School and is currently finishing his bachelor's degree in commercial art at Northeast.

Armstead didn't begin running competitively until his senior year in high school and only then because he wanted to have something to do to keep him busy after school following basketball season.

"I used to race in the street. I always beat a lot of people. The Olympic gold didn't really come into mind until maybe a year before last, but I could tell myself I wanted to run in them, but I couldn't tell anyone else because it would have been a big letdown for them if they found out I really wanted to but didn't make it."

Who did know Armstead wanted to make the team? His family; girlfriend, NMSU senior Stacy Selvey; and a few close friends and coaches.

The Darkhorse

"There was a point when I went to the Kansas Relays and they had a list of who was going to make the Olympic team. They included Ray Armstead, and I told my roommates that day 'You watch, I'm going to make the team' and they didn't believe me, and I did. I think that whatever I plan for, I'm going to do," Armstead said.

The road to that Olympic gold medal has not been easy for Armstead, coming from a small Midwestern university with a poor Red Dog track that hasn't felt the spikes of opposing track teams for several years. But Armstead demanded and received the attention of NMSU's two track coaches, John Cochrane and Ed Schneider. Schneider trained Armstead during the indoor and outdoor track seasons, and Cochrane trained him during the off-season.

"I got hurt before the Games and I laid out that whole year, and I trained the whole time with Coach Cochrane. During May, in that time before the Games and before the trials, I trained with Coach Cochrane; he gave me my workouts."

Armstead said coaching played a big role in his success. Schneider footed his own bill to accompany the athlete to the trials in Los Angeles. Armstead said his biggest support comes from himself, saying he gave himself the biggest shove toward his goal. But Armstead gives a lot of credit to his mother and girlfriend, saying his family was always supportive of his track endeavors despite the fact they didn't know anything about the sport.

Armstead said he found an advantage in NMSU's track, saying the slow track forced him to run faster; however, he said he always wanted to run in his own stadium before a home crowd. But Armstead has never been one to let poor circumstances stand in his way, because, he said, he believes in himself and his ability as an athlete. When it was cold at home in St. Louis, Armstead used to run in the basement for 30 minutes to equal one mile, and when he suffered a thigh cramp in the Drake Relays in Des Moines, Iowa, and fell, Armstead picked himself back up and headed for the Trials a month later.

"You've got to really believe. In order to make it, you've got to really believe because nobody else will believe in you if you don't. Success is very hard," he said.

Perhaps it is because of such circumstances and conditions that Armstead said he always felt he had to work out harder than the other guy; for example, Robin Thomas, from Southeast Missouri State University (Cape Girardeau).

"He (Thomas) was the man who kept me running fast times because he was the NCAA Division I champion in the 500 meters. And he was good. That's the best competition I'd ever had until I went to the trials."

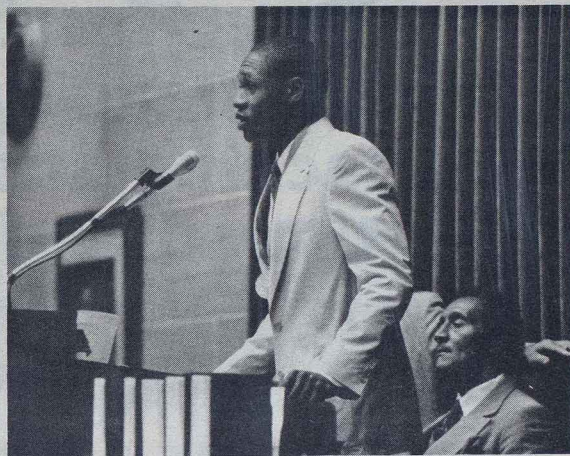

After making the 4x400-meter relay team in the Trials, Armstead, too, became one of those well-outfitted, contracted athletes like his teammates, Sunder Nix, Antonio McKay and Alonzo Babers. Adidas, one of his primary sponsors, gave him more than one pair of brand-new track shoes and his days of scrounging around for running suits and wearing sweats full of holes were over.

Despite the fact that he was now one of the team, Armstead said he didn't really change. He said people expected him to be different, but that he was still a "crazy" guy. But what about the other Olympic stars? Armstead said they, too, were just like your average college students and were a lot of fun in Los Angeles. At the beginning of the Trials, however, Armstead was a little intimidated by the other athletes.

"I was never scared of them (his competition), I wanted to beat them. But deep inside of me, I know when they step on the track now with Ray Armstead, Olympic gold medal winner, they're going to be intimidated, because I won the gold. But Alonzo Babers won the 400 meters and I stepped on there and I said, 'Ah, Alonzo Babers,' just like if you step on the basketball court with Kareem (Abdul-Jabbar), you're going to say, 'Wow' because you're going to be scared and intimidated. But I'm not intimidated any more. They intimidated me to the point of when I was in the blocks, I would not snap out of it until the gun was shot off. Now I'm used to them and now, they've got to look out for me," Armstead said.

Armstead said he learned a lot from the other Olympic athletes. He learned a little about diet, although he said he is not on a strict one, and about stretching before a race.

"I used to do push-ups and sit-ups before I ran because I thought push-ups make your chest bigger when you ran and sit-ups keep me from throwing up. I always thought that. They (his teammates) told me, 'You don't do push-ups and sit-ups because you're trying to get loose and that just tightens you up.' There were a lot of bad habits I had."

Despite Armstead's bad habits, he went from success in the Olympics to success in Europe. He finished third in the 400 meters in Zurich, Switzerland and Cologne, West Germany. In Koblenz, West Germany, on Aug. 29, Armstead defeated the entire field, including Babers, and took first-place honors at the international meet. He repeated this performance two days later at the Golden Gala in Rome by beating out the 1980 400-meter Olympic gold medalist Victor Markin of the Soviet Union and the 1976 gold medalist, Alberto Juantorena of Cuba. Armstead found, however, the crowd appreciated Markin more than him in Rome. Although he was cheered on for his first-place finish, Markin received a roar from the fans. But Armstead did find a way to gain the crowd's appreciation—he did a little break dancing on the track.

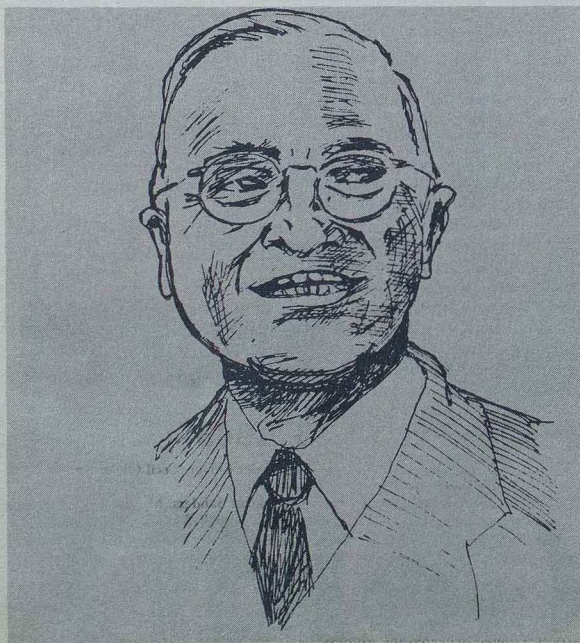

"I can't break dance," Armstead said. "I've got one move and they went wild. I should have done that a long time ago. They'll remember me for that."

After success in the largest amateur event in the world, and further success in Europe, what plan does Armstead have? First, he said, he is going to finish school, hoping to graduate in December with a bachelor's degree in commercial art. Then, it's back into fierce training for the World Cup meet in October 1985. After that, Armstead said he'll take it as it comes and look forward to 1988 and Seoul, South Korea.

Ray's success has made him a public figure, making several guest appearances such as delivering a speech before the Missouri Senate.

Turns To Gold

“Our fighting men are steadily and surely attacking and destroying the outer forces of the enemy. Our invincible will is stepping up the tempo of the war and the inevitable day approaches when the gates of Rome, Berlin and Tokyo will fall.”

This year has been full of salutes to the only Missourian to become president. Harry Truman would have celebrated his 100th birthday this year if he had lived. Among the tributes was one from the Democratic Party. Truman's old party saluted him at its national convention in July.

Most are familiar with Truman's eight years as president, and many also know that he served briefly as vice president and for several years as a U.S. Senator. However, not as many remember that Truman addressed students at the University while a senator.

The occasion was 31 years ago in August. Truman gave the summer commencement address less than two years before he would become president following the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt. The speech is interesting because it reflects Truman's beliefs about America and its future.

Truman told the 117 graduating students that as the chairman of a senate committee overseeing the American efforts in World War II, he felt sure the Allies would win.

“Our fighting men are steadily and surely attacking and destroying the outer fortresses of the enemy. Our invincible will is stepping up the tempo of the war and the inevitable day approaches when the gates of Rome, Berlin and Tokyo will fall,” Truman said.

Nonetheless, Truman told the crowd that Americans at the front and at home must work even harder to end the war. “War today is total war and power cannot be exerted at the front unless we have the capacity to produce war materials and the articles necessary for the maintenance of a sound, healthy, civilian economy strong enough to endure a long war,” Truman said.

Truman pointed out that the war had revitalized the American economy and put several million people back to work, and he applauded the fact that many women had entered the workplace during the war years. “The last war put the women into the offices, and they never left them,” Truman told the crowd. “Let no one imagine that the women will permit themselves to be shunted out of these jobs which they have so well demonstrated their capacity to do.”

The senator then went on to predict several new innovations for the future; some of these predictions were to come true, some were not.

Truman predicted a bright future for television, and he was correct. “The day cannot be far off when our homes, schools, offices and automobiles will be equipped with television sets,” Truman said. “We will see news and sporting events while they are actually happening. Movies, concerts and variety shows will be enjoyed by millions of living room audiences all over the country. Television may have a profound influence on our future social, political and economic progress.”

Truman also correctly foretold the future of food storage. “The present vegetable markets where vegetables, gathered hours or even days before, are piled up in bins open to contamination from the air, and allowed to dry and wither away will be the rare exception. Deep freezers will be just as common in the home of the future as the electric refrigerator is in the present home. Not only will the fruits and vegetables be purer, but they will have been made ready for almost instant use by factories where the tedious job of shelling peas and beans will have been done by machinery for the housewife of the future.”

Truman was mistaken in some of his thinking, however. He predicted a revolution in the transportation industry, featuring a lightweight, high-mileage car that would sell at gas stations like tires or batteries. The price would be only $400.

The senator also told the graduates that chances were good they would all own private airplanes. “The day is not far distant when an airplane engine, weighing less than 100 pounds and capable of producing 100 horsepower, which would be ample for a small private plane, will be produced in mass quantities for $100 each,” he said. “With the new techniques of using magnesium and aluminum and the new supplies of those formerly costly metals, it should be possible to make private airplanes well within the purchasing power of the ordinary citizen."

Truman also overplayed the importance of the helicopter. "The helicopter can rise and descend vertically and with it you can land in places that would not only be impossible for airplanes, but which would be inaccessible to either boats or land vehicles," he said. "The Greyhound Bus Lines have already publicly announced that they intend to use them in lieu of buses as connecting links with air transcontinental routes."

Truman had challenged the crowd with visions of the future, he challenged the graduating seniors in Ophelia Parrish Auditorium to conquer that future.

"You young men and women will be called upon to help build the pattern and execute the plans for a postwar world," Truman said 31 years ago. "Your actions and decisions will play a great part in making that world. You have received excellent training in these classrooms for the momentous task before you and we know we can rely on you to carry out your responsibilities with intelligence, courage and vision."

ALUMNI NOTES

Ottie M. Greiner celebrated her 103rd birthday May 26 with a small party at the Twin Pines Adult Care Center in Kirksville, where she is residing. She taught at Benton, Washington and Greenwood Schools and was principal at Benton School from 1927 to 1949. After retiring from teaching, she was librarian at the Sojourner's Public Library in Kirksville from 1949 to 1961.

'21

Ruby Webber Farmer, St. Louis, is retired. She taught at Normandy High School from 1931 to 1965. Her children are Earl L. Farmer II, LaVara J. Goodman and Eileen Hoganson.

'24

Elsie Shuman was honored by the First United Methodist Church of Kirksville for her many years of service to the church and to the cause of Christian education. She taught in various Sunday schools for a total of 68 years. When she retired from teaching in 1963, she returned to Kirksville to make her home and continued as a Sunday school teacher until failing eyesight forced her to discontinue last year. She has been a teacher in the public schools of Adair County, Salem, Mo., and East Chicago, Ind., for 45 years, 37 of which she spent in East Chicago. She is listed in "Who's Who Among American Women" and "Who's Who in the Midwest."

John D. Shaver, Buckhannon, W.Va., is a professor emeritus from West Virginia Wesleyan College. He has a daughter, Rachel Shaver Melvin ('52).

Letha Waddill Morehead is retired and residing in Pueblo, Colo. She has two children, Wayne Morehead and June Simonson.

Garnett Grow Reed, Watervliet, Mich., is retired.

Harry E. Stroup and Louise Shouse Bragg Stroup ('62) are living in La Plata, Mo. He is retired and she is a share farmer. Their children are Jackie Stroup, Joyee Stroup Stomberg ('69), Phillis Bragg Belt ('53), Larry Bragg and Jimmy Bragg.

Isabelle Farrington Otto and husband, Frederick, are retired and residing in South Daytona, Fla.

Mildred Schroder Pruitt and husband, Gradon, who were living in Springfield, Va., moved to Fairfax, Va. in October. Gradon has been an electrical engineer in communications with the U.S. Navy for 30 years.

Dr. Hubert A. Conner, Cincinnati, is a retired research manager. His wife, Gladys, also retired, taught high school mathematics. They have a married daughter, Alice Emery.

Evelyn Burkhalter Stickler, retired, is living in Kirksville. She has a daughter, Franette Stickler Hopkins ('72).

'31

Marie Mason Kraus, retired, spends winters in Mesa, Ariz., and summers on her farm near Gorin, Mo. Her sons are Samuel K. Kraus and William C. Kraus ('61). Another son, Jean M. Kraus ('65), was killed in Vietnam in 1970.

'32

Marion Johnson Eagle and William J. Eagle ('37) are living in Brookville, Ohio. She is retired and he is manager of Penn Terra Golf Course Pro-Shop. Their children are Jerry and Shelly.

'34

Marvin C. Gutekunst and wife, Frances, are retired and residing in Highland, Calif. They have a daughter, Beth Gutekunst Austin ('73).

'35

Helen Curry Deveny a homemaker, and husband, Dr. James A. Deveny, a retired osteopathic physician, are residing in Ingram, Texas. They have two married daughters, Ann McInroe and Judi Murray.

Dr. Merle E. Muhrer, former chemistry professor at NMSU and professor emeritus from the University of Missouri-Columbia, is residing in Columbia, Mo. His wife, Madaline Acklie Muhrer, who attended NMSU, is a retired teacher. Their children are Verle, Darryl, Merlin and Henry.

Orville W. Towers, M.D., is retired. He and his wife, Lois, are living in St. Charles, Mo. They have three children, T.W. Towers, R.S. Towers and Sue K. Brockmeyer.

Cleone Keller Thompson, a housewife, resides in Red Lodge, Mont. Her husband, Stanley, is a retired vice president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. She has a daughter, Betty Jean Farmer DeLapp, and a stepdaughter, Janet Marie Thompson.

'37

Esther Thoeke Jones, Eureka, Mo., is retired from the Rockwood R-6 School District.

'38

John R. Roderick, D.O., and Ruth Stith Roderick ('47) live in Kirksville. He is a retired physician and she is owner of the Royal Shoppe. They have two married daughters, Marjorie Roderick Bard, ('72) and Betty Roderick Bohon ('73).

'39

Elma Lee Beard Lewis and husband, Garold, are retired and residing in St. Joseph, Mo. They have two children, Gary Lee Lewis and Sharon Kay Lewis Berger.

Martha Crigler Prater and Dr. Arnold Prater ('40) live in Lantana, Fla. She is a housewife and he is an approved evangelist for the United Methodist Church. Their children are Ken and Judy.

Frances Paris Bartlett, a housewife, lives in Albuquerque, N.M. Her husband, Ellsworth, is an osteopathic physician.

Mary Lee Swenson is retired and residing in Kansas City, Mo. She has five sons and one daughter.

'40

Bernard F. Yaeger, retired, lives in Rangely, Colo.

Norine Ator Swearingen and husband, M. Jay, are retired and residing in Denver. They have a son, Jay Wayne.

Robert L. Whisler lives in Newport, Ore. He and his wife, Zoe, are retired. They have one son, Barrett.

Paul Ward, Kirkwood, Mo., won one gold medal (golf putting) and four silver medals in the Senior Olympics at Southern Illinois University, Edwardsville. He participated in the shot put, 50-yard dash, golf putting, free throws, spin casting and discus.

Maxine Schneider Montgomery is a retired teacher. She and her husband, Clifford, are living in rural Novinger, Mo., where he is a farmer. Three of their children graduated from NMSU in 1969. They are Linda Montgomery Myers, Gail E. Montgomery, and Kathy Montgomery Bell. Another son, David L. Montgomery, graduated from NMSU in 1973.

Ruth Lovell Shriver and husband, Bryan, are residing in Foxwood retirement complex in Raytown, Mo. She was a teacher for 33 years and he is a retired civil service employee.

Betty Leslie Vortman, Albuquerque, N.M., is senior vice president of Sunwest Bank of Albuquerque. Her husband, Luke, is a research engineer.

'43

Elnora Heller Rogers, a retired teacher, is residing in Macon, Mo. She has a son, David.

'44

Darlene Williams Horn Gardner and husband, William, are retired and living in Galesburg, Ill. She has a son, Andrew J. Horn III.

'46

Elva Meeks Holliday, a retired teacher, lives in Milan, Mo.

'47

Mary Kathryn Shackelford Wolfe, Brunswick, Mo., is a retired teacher from the Keokuk, Iowa, schools. Her husband, Harold, is a retired farmer.

Mary Fritsinger Shoemaker and Lewis L. Shoemaker ('49) live in Lancaster, Calif. They are both retired teacher consultants. Their sons are L. Paul and Mark A.

Geraldine VanDyne Olson and husband, Ernest, are living in rural Seymour, Iowa. She is a sixth grade teacher in Seymour Community Schools and he is a farmer. They have a son, Gary E. Olson, and a daughter, Candace Olson Whittet ('74).

THE PRESIDENT'S LIST

The Northeast Missouri State University Development Fund was established in 1980, to financially assist the University in its educational endeavors—to ensure that the academic future of NMSU will be as bright or brighter than its past.

This fund is supported primarily by gifts from alumni and friends of NMSU.

The President's List has been compiled to illustrate the progress of Northeast Missouri State University, provide an overview of the workings of the Development Fund and thank those people who have supported Northeast with gifts in the 1983-1984 fiscal year.

Operation 1990 is the University's 10 year project to raise $2 million for the Development Fund by the year 1990.

Generally speaking, money given to the Development Fund is placed in University investment accounts, and interest from the principal is used to fund scholarship programs and other current projects. In that way, the money works now for the University's benefit but remains available for future needs.

Though $2 million seems to be a rather large sum of money it will only generate approximately $200,000 of income or 1.4% of the $14.1 million appropriated to Northeast by the State for the 1984-1985 fiscal year. To make a considerable impact, the NMSU Development Fund must continue to grow, thus University fund-raising will not end in 1990.

Operation 1990 is already funding scholarships for many deserving students and will continue to do so. However, upon completion of this project the fund will be carefully examined and the monies allocated to specific areas of need. The long-range goals would call for the funds to be distributed as follows:

STUDENT DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

Even though Northeast's costs are still relatively low, most students today must borrow money in order to finish their college degrees. The Students Development Program would establish a work-scholarship program by which qualified students could work their way through college. Student research would also be funded through this area, as well as certain scholarships in areas not currently provided for through private sources. About 650,000 is expected to be allocated in this area.

FACULTY RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

To attract and keep top-level faculty members, research opportunities are important. Northeast funds a few such projects on a limited basis now and would increase this program. In addition, endowed professorships and faculty fellowships would ensure that the best teachers are retained in Northeast's academic programs. About $550,000 is the expected need in this area.

UNRESTRICTED OPPORTUNITY FUND

Emergency construction, recognition programs and various other University and development projects would be funded through the remainder of the Operation 1990 funds. This final area will be the unrestricted money which will ensure the margin of excellence for the future.

DEVELOPMENT PROJECTS

Though Operation 1990 has not fully reached its goal, funds are presently at work enhancing the University, its students and alumni. Uses include:

Scholarship Program—Several endowed scholarships are administered through the Development Fund. Among these are scholarships in honor of former faculty and students. These scholarships were established through a minimum gift of $1,000, (this amount has been raised to $3,000, effective July 1, 1984) from which the interest is annually awarded to a deserving recipient.

Memorial/Student Loan Program—A variety of financial aid packages are supplemented by University-sponsored student loans. The loan fund aids students who otherwise would not be able to finance their educations.

Recognition Programs—Development funds support several programs which seek to reward outstanding scholarship and achievement. In the past, such activities as the Alumni Art Show, the Outstanding Alumnus in Communication, the Executive-in-Residence program and the NMSU Athletic Hall of Fame have been supported through development funds. In the future, faculty recognition programs, as well as recognition programs in other academic divisions for alumni and students, are planned.

Academic Division Endowments—This is an area where development funds are set-aside to supplement faculty salaries and projects within academic divisions. The Divisions of Business and Home Economics are presently the only participants in this program.

Endowed Chairs—In exchange for financial support, a contributor can designate a specific faculty position in their honor. The endowed chair allows the University to attract outstanding faculty members to the campus by offering salaries and benefits above that otherwise available.

The University's first endowed faculty chair was established in May. President Charles McClain announced the formation of the William O'Donnell Lee Chair of Asian Studies at spring commencement ceremonies.

The chair, named after the former president of the Board of Regents, falls under the Social Science Division. It is being funded through a gift to the NMSU Development Fund, Inc. by Lee's widow, Dr. Jeanne Stephens Lee, and their three children, William Stephens, James Jay and Lucienne Alma.

Lee died Sept. 22, 1983. He was a member of the Board of Regents from 1971-77, and served as the Board's president his last two years in office.

Competitive Programs—Each year NMSU sponsors a piano recital for high school seniors. This competition is partially funded through the Development Fund. Other types of competitions are planned for the future.

Research Stipends—Similar to a scholarship with the exception that money is set-aside to assist students in their respective educational research. The Dr. Clifton R. Bell Stipend is the only one of its kind in this funding area.

Construction Programs—Development Funds were used to complete the dugouts for the women's softball field.

Priority List—The NMSU fund-raising effort will not come to a halt upon the receipt of the two-millionth dollar goal. To

These are campus projects that await private or state funding. Dollar amounts will give interested alumni a way to judge the endowment needed in order to name the program after the contributor.

DEVELOPMENT FUNDING

TEL-ALUMNI

Since 1980, NMSU alumni have been receiving an annual phone call from current University students seeking support of the Development Fund. The students are volunteer phone solicitors who compete as organization members in the phonathon. Because of their enthusiasm and honesty, students often add more to the call than just a simple request for money. Many alumni express the feeling that this personal contact is well worth the amount of their annual pledge.

PERIODIC MAILINGS

Direct mail is generally used to support Tel-Alumni, but is also used to announce new programs or update present projects. An example of such is our Tribute Gift Drives in memory of an individual closely related to the University. All gifts are individually announced and totaled as a tribute to the person named.

MATCHING GIFTS

Many contributors add to their annual support of the University by taking advantage of their employer's matching gift program. Matching gift companies will match, double or even triple the amount of the employee's gift. In most cases, the employee simply must fill out and forward a brief form to the University. Information and materials are generally available in the company's personnel or public relations office.

PLANNED GIFTS

As the name implies, this area of giving is not as simple as fulfilling a Tel-Alumni pledge, yet from the standpoint of the University and the contributor, it is by far the most exciting and rewarding method of giving.

The one asset that people use extensively in philanthropy is cash, yet as a part of most people's net worth it is the smallest portion. Giving of assets other than cash is where planned giving enters the picture.

Planned gifts will allow you more flexibility, ensure financial security for you and your family and at the same time enhance NMSU.

The following is a list of basic forms of planned gifts. Keep in mind that each or any combination, can be tailored to meet your specific needs.

Appreciated Security—Outright gifts of appreciated stock and other securities often are made to enhance the University. There are several tax advantages in making gifts of this type. First, the contributor is not required to pay a capital gains tax on appreciated securities which are contributed. Second, he or she may claim the full current market value of long-term securities as a charitable deduction in computing income tax. To be considered long-term, securities must be held more than 12 months. Closely held stock can also be given with excellent tax results for many donors.

Real and Personal Property—Real estate and marketable items of personal property having established values can be given as outright gifts. In the case of real estate, the contributor may deduct for tax purposes the fair market value of the property. Items of tangible personal property, in order to be fully deductible, must be related to the University's purpose and function. The fair market value of both real and personal property should be established by a recognized appraiser.

Life Insurance—A contributor may make an outright gift of a whole life or universal life insurance policy, which can be income tax deductible at its cash value at the time of transfer to the University. Contributors also may assign ownership of a policy to the University and name the University as sole beneficiary. Subsequent premiums paid by the contributors are then tax deductible.

Bequests—A bequest through a will is the most frequent form of a planned gift, largely because it can be a means of making a substantial contribution without diminishing the assets available to the contributor during his or her lifetime. Important estate tax savings can result from this type of contribution since bequests to Northeast may be deducted from the taxable estate.

The drafting of the will should be arranged through an attorney. Counsel for the University will be available upon request to confer with you and your attorney in drafting the appropriate bequest clauses.

Of the numerous ways to provide support for the University through a will, a bequest of a fixed amount of dollars or specific items of real or personal property is perhaps the simplest.

Bequests need not be large to have a worthwhile impact; for example, a $10,000 bequest could provide a perpetual annual gift of about $1,000 for unrestricted use or for a specific program of your choice. If the bequest is unrestricted, the following clause may be used as a guide: "I give and bequeath to Northeast Missouri State University, Kirksville, Mo., a nonprofit corporation organized under the laws of Missouri, (the sum of $————) or (all my right, title and interest in the following described property:————) or (all the rest, residue and remainder of my estate) to be used in such manner as the Board of Regents of NMSU shall, in its sole discretion, determine."

The amount of a bequest may be specified in a variety of ways depending upon the contributor's personal needs and objectives. For example, a bequest of a fixed amount of dollars or specific items of property can be made; or a proportional bequest, where the University receives a determined portion of an estate after personal provisions have been met, can also be established. If a contributor wishes to support the University and at the same time provide his or her spouse, family or others with an income during their lifetimes, a testamentary charitable remainder trust may be used. As in a simple bequest, provisions for a testamentary charitable remainder trust are made in your will, and the trust does not become operative and binding until your death.

Life Income Plans—For those individuals who wish to provide substantial future support to Northeast, yet wish to retain a lifetime income from the assets which eventually will comprise their gift, a life-income trust program offers a great opportunity. Gifts in the form of living trusts provide the same estate tax benefits as bequests. In addition, these agreements may provide substantial lifetime income tax benefits.

The two specific trusts available are the charitable remainder annuity trust and the charitable remainder unitrust. In each case, the individual transfers either cash or property to a trustee, such as a bank trust department or the University. The trustee then agrees to pay a specified amount to the individual or his or her designated beneficiary(ies) for life. He or she may receive income payments based upon a fixed dollar amount (annuity trust) or may choose a specified percentage of the total trust assets as valued each year (unitrust).

The contributor need not pay capital gains tax on the gift property and may deduct from his or her federal income tax the current value of the University's remainder interest in the trust. The principal of the trust becomes available to the University following the death of the life-income beneficiary(ies) and is used for the purpose provided by the contributor in the trust instrument. These gifts eventually provide substantial funding.

The charitable remainder trusts have a wide variety of uses which can fit a large number of planning situations. The trusts can be funded with farm land, commercial real estate, securities or cash.

For example: A 70 year old woman owns rental property valued at $80,000 that she would like to sell. The property could be placed in a charitable remainder unitrust which could be set up to pay her 8% income for the rest of her life. The unitrust would pay her $5,600 per year plus a potential for growth in future years if the trust earns more than 8%. There is no capital gains tax when the asset is sold by the trustee. The unitrust will also provide an income tax charitable deduction of about $35,000 in the year of the gift and any unused portion can be carried forward up to five years. The trust principal passes to charity at her death.

The unitrust can be set up for two lives and there are reinsurance plans that can protect the principal for heirs.

JOHN R. KIRK SOCIETY

As the fifth president of Northeast Missouri State University, John R. Kirk exemplified the essence of education. A teacher at 19, he attended and received a degree from Northeast during the years it was still under the direction of its founder, Joseph Baldwin. Kirk was an innovative educator, a national leader for educational excellence and a compelling personality.

In his personal and professional life, Kirk exemplified the ideals of education. After his retirement from Northeast in 1925 at the age of 76, John R. Kirk enrolled in George Peabody College for Teachers in Nashville, Tenn., to study for a master's degree.

The president at Peabody College, among others, discouraged Kirk from studying for a degree at his age. The Peabody president remarked, "Who in the United States cares whether John R. Kirk, the great educator, has a master's degree?" Kirk quickly replied, "John R. Kirk cares."

This dedication to education inspired alumni and friends of Northeast Missouri State to form a society to honor President Kirk in 1981 and to perpetuate his commitment to excellence.

The John R. Kirk Society is open to all alumni and other friends of the University, exclusive of organization, societies and other groups. In the case of husband and wife, the membership may be joint.

The Society meets annually on campus during Homecoming activities. Members receive distinctive plaques signifying their dedication to Northeast, and life members are recognized on a large wooden plaque in the Alumni Office.

The four levels of membership—John R. Kirk Society Member, John R. Kirk Society Fellow, John R. Kirk Society Distinguished Fellow and John R. Kirk Society Very Distinguished Fellow—are available to individuals who agree to meet one or more of the following conditions:

1. Signify by a pledge the intention to contribute $5,000 payable over a five-year period at a rate of not less than $1,000 a year, in the case of a Fellow; $25,000, payable over a 10-year period at a rate of not less than $2,500 a year, in the case of a Distinguished Fellow; and $50,000, payable over a 10-year period at not less than $5,000 per year in the case of a Very Distinguished Fellow.

2. Contribute an outright sum of at least $500* (one-year Member), $5,000 (Fellow), $25,000 (Distinguished Fellow) or $50,000 (Very Distinguished Fellow) to Northeast Missouri State University.

3. Signify the intention to provide to Northeast Missouri State University by a bequest, funded life insurance program, life income contract or other type of deferred gift at least $5,000 (Member), $10,000 (Fellow), $50,000 (Distinguished Fellow) or $100,000 (Very Distinguished Fellow).

Four levels of additional membership—Corporate Member, Corporate Fellow, Corporate Distinguished Fellow and Corporate Very Distinguished Fellow—are available to corporations, trusts and foundations that agree to meet one or more of the following conditions:

1. Signify the intention to contribute $25,000 payable over a 10-year period at $2,500 a year (Corporate Member); $50,000, payable over a 10-year period at $5,000 a year (Corporate Fellow); $100,000, payable over a 10-year period at $10,000 a year (Distinguished Corporate Fellow) and $250,000, payable over a 10-year period at $25,000 a year (Very Distinguished Corporate Fellow).

2. Contribute an outright sum of at least $25,000 (Corporate Member), $50,000 (Corporate Fellow), $100,000 (Distinguished Corporate Fellow) or $250,000 (Very Distinguished Corporate Fellow) to Northeast Missouri State University.

*Level of contribution required for one-year membership is expected to increase in subsequent years.

Update: Athletics

The athletic department at Lindenwood College in St. Charles, Mo., may not seem directly connected to NMSU, but the two schools are definitely linked these days. Both the new athletic director and her assistant at Lindenwood are Northeast graduates.

Marilyn Morris ('76) was appointed athletic director in May. Linda White ('66) was recently named assistant athletic director.

Morris is happy with her new role, and says things are running smoothly. "I have inherited a wonderful group of coaches and everything is going very well," Morris said. "Right now, we're trying to get organized for the year. It's a little difficult because all the coaches here at Lindenwood are part-time. We're building the program but at the same time getting it organized. Our first responsibility is to the kids, and we're trying to develop the program for them."

Both Morris and White have numerous other duties at Lindenwood. Morris is the director of day admissions, and has been a member of the Admissions Office staff since 1980. White is the women's softball coach and is in charge of a Lindenwood residence hall.

Morris praised White for her help. "Linda is invaluable, and we have a great working relationship," Morris said. "I can really use her help because on paper, my position as director of admissions is a full-time job, while the athletic director position is only one-fifth time.

So she winds up doing a little bit of everything."

Morris majored in physical education at Northeast, and says she is happy to be involved with athletics again. "I'm not as actively involved in athletics as I was in college, when Dr. (Ralph) Pink used to make us run a mile before class," she laughed. "But this position (athletic director) has enabled me to get back into athletics, plus it gives me a great opportunity to work with the students. Eventually, I'd like to be a dean of students or dean of college life someday, and my education at NMSU and experience like this should help me attain that."

Update: Fine Arts

Mary Belle Martin retired in May after 17 years of teaching at Northeast Martin works full time as an art therapist at Kirksville's Laughlin Hospital.

The Division of Fine Arts lost more than an instructor with the retirement of Mary Belle Martin, professor emeritus of art, art education and art therapy. It also lost part of a master's program.

Because the art therapy option of the master's program in art education attracted a small number of students each year, the division could not justify hiring an instructor solely for the art therapy program, William Murray, associate professor of fine arts, said.

"We needed to find an instructor certified in art therapy but also qualified to teach in the other areas of the art education program," Murray said.

Known for its use as a diagnostic tool, art therapy acts "an outlet for the creative bend in man, allows you, as well as others, to find out things about yourself," Martin said.

Since the division had little luck in finding an instructor with those qualifications, it lost that option of the program, which was initiated in 1980.

The few remaining students in the program are finishing up their degree under Martin by putting in clinic hours at Laughlin Hospital in Kirksville. The program required the students to work 600 clinic hours.

Although the division is losing its art therapy program, Martin highly commended both the undergraduate and graduate art education programs. "I've been told by teachers outside this area that NMSU produces the best art teachers in the state," she said.

"Ever since I came here (in 1967), there's been an upgrading of the art program. I'm very proud to have been a faculty member here," Martin said.

Martin felt that part of the success of the programs is in requiring students to have a strong background in the studio. "Rather than require umpteen education hours and a smattering of art classes," Martin said, "the program must make the student a strong artist. A good balance is necessary."

Since 1978, Martin has been a member of the adjunct faculty of the Department of Psychiatry at Laughlin Hospital. Martin's training in art therapy has included postgraduate study at New York State University (Buffalo); University of Oklahoma (Norman); Northern Illinois University (DeKalb); and Kansas State University (Emporia).

Since her retirement in May, Martin has turned her part-time work as art therapist at Laughlin Hospital into a full-time job. Martin works with physically and mentally handicapped and emotionally disturbed patients and finds it "very rewarding."

Any free time that Martin finds during her retirement will be spent showing her horse and painting. Having ridden competitively for five years, Martin showed her three-gaited horse at the Iowa State Fair this summer.

Update: Language & Literature

"It would be so nice if the student could be made aware—if not of the aesthetic pleasure of learning another language—of the utilitarian aspects of it."

Jane Byrd, assistant professor emerita of Spanish, said that was the goal she would like to see achieved in the foreign language program that she left behind. Byrd ended her 22-year teaching career at the University when she retired in May.

"Simply because it's mandatory (for some students), it turns a lot of students off," Byrd said.

Instructor of the elementary Spanish classes, Byrd said that she chose to stay with teaching the basic grammar of the language because "it has a neatness to it. You get into the advanced classes and it becomes 'un-neat' because you find you have more than one way of saying things."

She also felt that students in the advanced classes benefited more with a native speaker of the language as an instructor. Vera Piper, instructor of Spanish and native of Costa Rica, teaches the upper-level Spanish courses.

Byrd earned her master's degree in English education at Northeast in 1961. She had received her bachelor's degree five years earlier at Central College (Fayette, Mo.). Byrd also did graduate work at Indiana University (Bloomington).

The elementary Spanish classes will be taught by three professors this year. Joaquin Penalver, who has been at the University since 1967, will teach the bulk of the classes. Two new faculty members, Roy Tanner and Thomas Coates, will teach one class apiece.

Byrd's retirement plans remain indefinite. Raising dogs and traveling to Europe and Latin America are possibilities in the future, but at present, Byrd said she is "going to fish, wherever and whenever I can drop my hook."

Update: Nursing

In 1971, Susan Jackson, newly divorced and with two young children, put her life on hold while she dealt with the anger and remorse of having been diagnosed a victim of multiple sclerosis.

Judging from her list of accomplishments since then—a bachelor's degree, two master's degrees, an assistant professorship in NMSU's Division of Nursing and mother of two active teenagers—it doesn't look like Jackson wasted any more time.

In April, Jackson was recognized for those accomplishments and the courage she has showed in dealing with her disease with the multiple sclerosis Client Courage Award, one of six given in the state. Daughter Missy, 16, and son Brian, 13, wrote a letter to the Community Service Committee of the Multiple Sclerosis Society last year nominating their mother for the award.

Looking back at that first year spent in hiding, Jackson claimed that it was concern for her children that helped to bring her out of her depression. "I realized that not only did I deserve a future, but so did they," she said.

Nursing always was her dream, so Jackson attended NMSU and completed her bachelor's degree in nursing in 1976. Three months after her graduation from the program, the University hired Jackson as a nursing instructor.

While instructing nursing classes full time, Jackson earned her master of arts in guidance and counseling at NMSU. A month later she began commuting to the University of Missouri-Columbia campus to work on her master of science degree in nursing, which she completed in 1983.

Jackson even admitted to stretching herself a little too far while earning her second master's degree. "I was teaching full time, traveling back and forth twice a week and trying to raise two kids. During that last year (of the program), if I wouldn't have seen the light at the end of the tunnel, I wouldn't have made it."

Though the formal instruction had finally ended, Jackson began teaching herself. Receiving an instructional improvement grant from the University for the last two summers, Jackson introduced the computer to the nursing program at NMSU.

Having taken only the very basic computer courses at the University, Jackson planted herself in front of the keyboard in an effort to make her nursing students computer-literate and provide them with a supplement for their clinical and classroom experience. She has written all the programs now in use.

"I figure I can do anything if I can read a book. I just sat down with instructional catalogs and called people when I couldn't figure out my mistakes," Jackson said.

As a result of those hours spent at the keyboard, Jackson has taken her programs on the road. Accepting an invitation from the Missouri League for Nursing, Jackson conducted six workshops around the state on computer literacy in nursing and health care last fall.

Learning to work with her limitations seems to be the philosophy that has carried Jackson this far. And she feels that's a philosophy applicable for everyone, not just those who are physically impaired.

"Everyone has their limits; mine happens to be a little more obvious than most. I use the word 'limits' instead of 'handicap' because that implies that you can't be a total person and that's not true. Everyone has to learn to work within their limits."

Jackson has learned to stretch those limits. The purchase of an Amigo "go-cart," as Jackson refers to it, allows her to buzz about campus and made possible hikes in the mountains and trips to Six Flags with her children during a recent vacation. Jackson is able to cover short distances with the aid of a walking cane.

As Missy and Brian stated in their nomination letter, their mother has stretched those limits even further "with a hobby that is not tried by too many people with two perfect legs."

A member of the handbell choir at the First Baptist Church of Kirksville, Jackson can work with up to 30 English handbells during a solo, which requires her to move to the bells up and down the scale. In choosing a solo piece, Jackson looks for those songs that give her adequate time to reach the bells.

Apparently, she has her timing down because she's been invited to perform at a statewide Missouri Baptist gathering at Tan-Tar-A resort in October. Having played for four years, Jackson has also performed for various groups around the area.

Because MS is a progressive, unpredictable disease, the victim of MS can worsen drastically overnight. Jackson says she is predated should that occur.

"I keep my finger in lots of little pies. If I get to a point where I can't follow my students around while they're doing clinical hours, I have other things to fall back on."

Should her condition worsen, her master's degree in guidance and counseling would allow her to pursue a career in counseling since "you don't need legs to counsel people," Jackson said. Her recent involvement in computers would also provide her with other career alternatives.

Jackson seems to have few complaints concerning her illness. "It physically slows me down. I tire easily and that makes me mad sometimes. But there's very little I can't do," Jackson said.

Missy and Brian don't have many complaints either, judging from the concluding paragraph of their nomination letter.

"Oh, there are things that Mom can't do, like play ball, bike ride, play tennis or golf, but her life is so busy and full now we wonder how she could fit any more in if she didn't have MS. My brother and I think she is quite a mother just the way she is."

Update: Practical Arts

Two Division of Practical Arts faculty members have retired in the past few months, and both had several things in common during their teaching careers.

Both Duane Cole ('39) and William Minor ('42) are NMSU graduates. Both earned their master's degrees at Iowa State University (Ames), and both began teaching at the University in 1947.

Cole and Minor were recently granted emeritus status by the University's Board of Regents. Cole was named assistant professor emeritus in industrial education at summer commencement ceremonies in August. Minor was named associate professor emeritus in industrial education at spring commencement in May.

Minor, who spent most of his teaching career in the electronics field, had many other activities besides his Practical Arts position. Minor served in the Army Air Corps in World War II as a second lieutenant and pilot. Shortly after his 445th Bomb Group started action in Europe, he was shot down during a mission over Germany. Minor was held as a prisoner of war in Germany for the rest of the war.

Minor, who logged time as a pilot of P-40s, P-51s, B-17s and B-24s during the war, continued his interest in aviation as a civilian. He served on the Kirksville Airport Advisory Committee for many years.

Minor was a member of Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity while a student, and he continued that connection as a faculty member. He was the sponsor of the local chapter of APO, chairman of the University's Boy Scout committee and the scoutmaster of the University-sponsored Boy Scout troop.

Minor also was a charter member of the Adair County Democratic Club, and served as that organization's president during the early 1960s. Minor is living in Kirksville with his wife, Delores, and plans to spend more time with his four children, Tom ('68), Jim ('79), Claudia and Diane.

Cole spent most of his 37 years of instruction teaching drafting classes. Before joining the faculty, Cole taught at several area high schools, including Venice in Illinois and Milan and Hannibal in Missouri. Cole will continue to keep in touch by teaching one class in the Division of Practical Arts. He lives in Kirksville with his wife, Vivian. They have a daughter, Deatra, and a son, D.W. ('81).

Update: Extension Services

In 30 years, a faculty member can deal with thousands of college students. Charles "Bud" Elam, retired director of Extension Services, has been partly responsible for recruiting the number of people who call themselves NMSU students.

Before becoming the director of the Extension Services Program, Elam was the director of the Admissions Office for 17 years. When he started with this job in 1955, the University boasted an enrollment of about 1,000 students. By the time Elam left this position in 1972, approximately 6,300 attended NMSU.

"All colleges were enjoying a lot of growth (during that time)," Elam said. He attributes the enrollment increases to the baby boom of the 1950s, the number of veterans returning to college and the popularity of college at that particular time. In addition, Elam said Northeast's competitive education costs and in-home recruiting visits probably aided the increases. "We often took a rifle approach" in recruiting students, which was possible then because of the smaller number of students the school was contacting, he said.

The summer honors program, started in the mid-1960s, also brought in college students. The program let outstanding high school students continue their education following their sophomore, junior and senior years. The credits they earned were put in escrow until they attended as a college student.

"We felt there was an advantage for some students to further their education (during the summer months while at the high school age)." The program now attracts 60 to 70 students a year.

Elam also served one year as the chairman for an articulation committee for the Missouri High School/College Relations Commission. It began studying some of the problems that existed in the transfer process from a junior college to a four-year university.

"There were complaints about losing credits in the transfer (process)," he said. "We began pioneering further work in this area... (leading to) the articulation agreement that now exists (between two- and four-year institutions)."

Elam's career at Northeast did not just center on the conventional student; he also worked with the non-traditional student. He became the director of Extension Services in 1972. The office organizes such education programs as off-campus instruction, workshops, seminars, conferences and short courses.

He said the purposes of Extension Services are to "apprise people away from campus that aren't aware of the school (NMSU)" and to "serve a group of students that find it impossible to accommodate traditional ways of study."

To illustrate the popularity of Extension Services, last year approximately 1,400 people applied for some kind of extension program, he said, although only about 1,000 were accepted due to limited facilities and closed classes. In fact, Extension Services had grown so much that the out-of-state programs were discontinued a few years ago. "We had enough business in our state for adult education," he said. Computer courses and workshops on Mark Twain, stress management and Missouri rivers are the most popular right now.

Elam said he sees Extension Services as a definite recruitment tool, "Contact them (non-traditional students) through extension programs and they'll come about (to NMSU) to graduate," he said.

Throughout his 30 years at Northeast, Elam has encountered literally thousands of NMSU students in either traditional or non-traditional educational roles. And although he is accustomed to dealing with a large number of students, he said, "I may grow very tired of retirement, but right now I'm really enjoying it," especially with plans for extensive travel and a possible antique store.

Update: Upward Bound

When one thinks of the Upward Bound program on the NMSU campus, the name Basil Morlan would almost seem synonymous.

Morlan was selected as the UB director in 1966 when a congressional act set up about 300 educational programs across the country, providing preparation skills for high school students who might not initiate a college career on their own.

When Northeast found out about the school's acceptance to sponsor a program, it was mid-May and Morlan had only a couple weeks to hire a staff, set up an office, visit schools and select students, and write the program's curriculum before June 1. He said the whole organization process was "not under ideal conditions," but the first summer built a foundation for almost two decades of successful UB programs.

"Everybody thought it (the first summer program) was great, but I was aware of all sorts of problems, but nationally we did alright," Morlan said. "The idea is so good and it helps kids so much that that overcomes a lot of (small) problems."

Each year, Morlan and his staff were able to update and make changes to eliminate "small problems." Morlan attributes a lot of the program's success to the innovative staff and the freedom to try different things in the academic area that the public schools are unable to.

"He's a person who gives you a lot of freedom to come up with your own ideas and develop them into whatever structure has been set," Lana Brown, UB administrative assistant, said.

Morlan always had the concerns of the staffs in mind while still keeping the students' needs and the federal program's goals in perspective, she said.

But the biggest contribution to UB's success is the tremendous support from the University's administration and faculty. "That's the secret of it," Morlan said. "We have to cooperate with every department (on campus to make our program work)."

Morlan's 18 years of experience lent a unique perspective to the program. Brown singled out his patience and tolerance as qualities he brought to UB, adding that "he'd been over the roller coaster" with things that could go right and wrong in the program. He could predict how a new idea would be received in the program's scheme because of his observation of a similar one a few years ago.

Now residing in Kansas City, Mo., with his wife, Louise, Morlan is keeping busy with refinishing and restoring antiques.

ALUMNI TOURS

After the long, cold months of winter, a tropical cruise would be the perfect remedy. Alumni and friends of Northeast Missouri State University will have a chance to cure their winter blues with the Alumni Travel Tour program.

The program was set up "to provide a service to alums and by having a specific tour for a specific time, they will know other alums (from Northeast) will be on that tour," David Clithero, tour program coordinator and assistant in Alumni/Development, said.

Two tours are scheduled for this spring. AAA World Wide Travel Agency has arranged two seven-day cruises so far. The first leaves Feb. 3, 1985, on the M/S Southward for the Caribbean, making port stops at Puerto Plata, St. Thomas, San Juan and Nassau. The second tour sails April 27 on the S.S. Independence for the Hawaiian Islands, starting from Honolulu. The ship will make stops at Nawiliwili on the island of Kauai, Hilo and Kona on the island of Hawaii, the Kahului on Maui and then sail around the island of Molokai before returning to Honolulu.

Other tours will be arranged about every quarter during the year, Clithero said.

To make the cruises even more appealing, NMSU alumni will receive a discount on each cruise with members of the Alumni Association being entitled to an additional discount. The cost of the cruises includes airfare, post taxes and all meals and entertainment on board, Doreen Yantis, manager of AAA, said.

Complete information concerning the cruises and their prices will be sent to alumni prior to each cruise.

"I hope that alums will take advantage of this service. . .to be able to renew old acquaintances and make new friends," Clithero said.
