Presidents message

Dear Alumni and Friends:

I am honored to write you as Northeast Missouri State University's 12th president. Since July 1, I have settled into the job and my home—slowly becoming accustomed to the friendly, hard-working people of the University and of Kirksville.

What a unique privilege it is for me to serve at one of the leading universities in the country. Though from Virginia, I have been an admirer for many years, commenting often, "They are doing good things at Northeast." Now I can say "We are doing good things at Northeast."

When I applied for the presidency my knowledge of Northeast covered only the previous 10 years. Since accepting the presidency, I have gained great insight into the distinguished history of this university. It is humbling to occupy the office once held by some of education's great leaders—Joseph Baldwin, John R. Kirk, Walter H. Ryle and Charles McClain.

Without question, this university has been blessed with outstanding leadership. Coupled with an abundance of loyal, supportive alumni and friends, it is little wonder that Northeast has such a rich heritage.

I have one simple pledge—to carry on this tradition of excellence.

Over the next few months, I will visit with as many alumni and friends as possible—asking questions and seeking suggestions and opinions. At the same time I will be actively discussing the University with faculty, staff and students. In the end, a long-term plan will be formulated to take Northeast into the next century. Hopefully this will be unveiled in the spring of 1991.

Your input and support during this period of transition is important. Since 1867, committed alumni, friends, faculty, staff and students have made Northeast the great institution it is today. This same commitment will serve the foundation for Northeast's growth and progress through the year 2000 and beyond.

Once more, I am truly fortunate and thankful to be associated with such a dynamic institution. I look forward to working with you to further the tradition of Northeast excellence.

Sincerely yours,

*Russell G. Warren
President*

Northeast begins new era

Traditionally, the beginning of a new decade has signaled change and progress. For Northeast Missouri State University the 1990s represent a change in University leadership. On July 2, Russell G. Warren officially assumed duties as Northeast's 12th president.

Warren's first months have been spent meeting with faculty and staff to acquaint himself with the philosophy of the University.

"I don't think I'm entering a school with any real trouble spot areas," Warren said in a St. Louis Post-Dispatch article. "There are presidencies where you have to come in and start running. This is not one of them."

Some might deem this an enviable situation. However, as Warren pointed out, because there are no immediate crises he must fix, he must be judged on longer-term accomplishments.

"If you had the choice, politically, you would follow a president who was a failure because you will look good. Well, the fact is that I'm following a president who is one of the best in the country. The major advice I give myself is to be the best Russell Warren I can be.

"Because Northeast does not have any crises, I intend to spend a lot of time listening and talking to people to be sure I understand the culture," Warren said.

"What I would like to do next year is ask the basic question, once we complete the Five-Year Plan, where do we go from there?" Warren said.

Warren hopes to develop a long-term strategy which addresses the future beyond completion of the current plan. Ideas for such a project will come from not only faculty and staff, but also from alumni and parents, and, perhaps most importantly, students.

Education is serious business to Warren.

"You only can have one objective in a university, and it should be the focal point of all who work at a university every day. And that is, to insure that the graduate leaves Northeast Missouri better educated so that he or she can have a happier, more meaningful life. If that is not achieved, then we have wasted everything," Warren said.

Warren's views on the importance of education are strong and clear. He feels that the learning environment should be enjoyable and at the same time, challenging, and that it is possible to achieve both.

"I think that education should be relevant, but we need to work very hard at explaining its relevance. . . . We ought to teach students broad concepts which will be transferable to the real world," Warren said. "What makes it difficult is that it sometimes takes years for students to understand the relevance of the broad concepts they learn from a liberal arts education. Often students only define relevance as that which is useful in their first or second job."

It was Northeast's emphasis on general education and the liberal arts mission, in particular, which appealed to Warren.

"I think the aspect of a college education that is terribly important to me is the emphasis on general education. Right now, nationwide, most universities are still spending too much time preparing students for their first or second job, rather than for the rest of their career and for the non-career aspects of their life," Warren said. "The heart of an outstanding university in my view is and always will be the teaching of general education."

Warren meets with staff to plan Northeast's strategy.

Ray Jager

"There are very few university faculties who are genuinely open to new ways to teach and learn," Warren said. He's convinced that while most universities are preparing students to enter the world that their professors lived in when they graduated from college, that Northeast is not in that category.

"Change is a norm at Northeast. Northeast lived through it for at least 10 years. Too many universities are structured in ways that they cannot change. I happen to think that our students are going to enter an incredibly changing world. We need to be capable of making alterations in what we teach and how we teach in order to ensure that they are ready for that world," he said. "Teaching comfort with change is itself an important aspect of a good university."

Warren prefers to take an active role when it comes to teaching. In his prior positions he has taught one course in economics each semester in addition to performing his administrative duties. He would like to continue to teach on a regular basis, but because of added time restrictions as president he hasn't made that decision yet.

According to Warren, everyone on the university campus has the potential to teach students.

"One of the finest teachers I ever saw was a fellow who cared for buildings and grounds area at the University of Montevallo in Alabama. He was a wise man, and students engaged him in conversation, and they all learned from him. In my view, if teaching is done well everyone plays a very powerful role in improving student knowledge," Warren said.

"The most important teaching we do, as faculty members, administrators and staff members, is modeling. Students will learn far more from our actions than they will from textbooks or our words. Therefore, we have a special challenge in our decision making and the way we relate to students and the way we relate to each other to provide a model community that we would be proud if they emulated when they graduate," Warren said.

Warren feels the most powerful teachers of all are one's fellow students. Thus, he stresses the importance of a diversified campus with students from different backgrounds with different interests. Warren hopes to include ways to provide for a more diverse student body and give greater attention to minority student and faculty recruitment.

Other objectives that he has include continuing to integrate the curriculum to give it better coherence, providing a stronger tie between the general education program and each academic major and to increase the amount of fundraising to enhance academic programs. He also wants Northeast to develop educational outcomes for its athletic student development programs.

Warren recognizes the growing need to supplement state funding. He feels Northeast's reputation for providing a high-quality education gives it an accountability advantage.

"There are very few universities that can go to a donor with anything other than anecdotes about how good they are. We [Northeast] can go to a donor and say this is a university that has been accountable for every dollar it spends and we'll do the same with yours. So, if you want to put money where we can prove you make a difference, then put it here," Warren said.

"Northeast is a university that really does educate students and make their lives better," Warren said. "Most people want to be part of a winning team, and we are a winner."

McClain Hall Dedicated

 The Administration/Humanities Building was renamed McClain Hall at ceremonies held Aug. 10 in honor of former university president, Charles J. McClain. Northeast's Board of Governors decided, unanimously, to name the building after McClain in recognition of his 19 years of leadership and service to the University.

Several hundred people attended the ceremonies which included an address by McClain and the unveiling of the namestone. A reception for McClain was held after the ceremony.

Later that evening, McClain delivered the address at the summer commencement exercises. More than 250 people were conferred degrees at ceremonies held in Stokes Stadium. Pam Weems of Ord, Neb., was named valedictorian of the summer graduating class. Weems graduated with a bachelor of arts degree in sociology and earned a 3.96 grade point average on a 4.0 scale.

New Board members appointed

Thomas R. ShROUT Jr., executive director of the St. Louis Citizens for Modern Transit, was named to the Northeast Missouri State University Board of Governors in June by Gov. John Ashcroft. ShROUT replaces former St. Louis Mayor James Conway whose term expired Jan. 1.

As executive director of Citizens for Modern Transit for the past three years, ShROUT has directed efforts to gain approval for and begin construction of the light-rail public transportation system in St. Louis.

Previous to his position with CMT, ShROUT was director of academic marketing for the response Marketing group of St. Louis. From 1971-86, ShROUT was director of external affairs at MSU. He was responsible for the university's advancement program including news and information, alumni affairs, development, publications, student recruitment and sports information.

Nikki Phillips, a junior political science major from St. Charles, Mo., was sworn in as the new student representative to the Board of Governors in January. Phillips is a member of the College Republicans, Student Senate and National Association of Parliamentarians.

William V. North ('53) of Lawrence Mission, Kan., was appointed as the first out-of-state member of the Board of Governors by Gov. John Ashcroft in August. His appointment is one of two non-Missouri positions that were added to the Board of Governors when Northeast's mission was changed from that of a regional institution to Missouri's public liberal arts and sciences university in 1986. Both North and the second national representative (who remains to be named) will serve as non-voting members offering a nationwide perspective to Board issues.

North, a trial attorney, is a director and shareholder of

Zoumaras recognized

Thomas Zoumaras, assistant professor of history, was recently recognized in The Boston

Globe for his work in writing the biography of C. Douglas Dillon, secretary of the Treasury during the John F. Kennedy presidency and ambassador to France during the Eisenhower administration.

Zoumaras was selected by the John F. Kennedy Library to receive the first Theodore C. Sorenson Research Fellowship, giving him $5,000 toward his work with Dillon. He is also negotiating for a publishing contract with Random House so his book may be promoted to the general public, rather than just to scholars.

Zoumaras plans to meet with Dillon every month, interviewing and spending time with him to get a feel for his lifestyle. He hopes to have the biography completed in three to four years.

Rhodes addresses Presidents' Banquet

Mary Rhodes ('80) delivered the keynote address at the third annual Presidents' Banquet. Rhodes, of Hannibal, Mo., is a partner with Clayton, Stine and Rhodes, attorneys at law.

Rhodes spoke to presidents and advisors representing more than 200 organizations, councils and athletic teams at Northeast. The banquet honors those who endeavor to make a positive difference in the quality of life and education at the University.

In the news

College consumers may want to review a new guide, The Barron's 300: Best Buys in College Education. Among the 300 institutions across the country featured in the first edition is Northeast.

More than 450 schools were researched based on their tuition rate compared with the average for all colleges, colleges in their region and colleges of similar academic emphasis. Other objective criteria included average test scores of entering freshmen, percent of faculty with doctorates, data on room and board and percent of students who graduate and go on to seek higher degrees.

"At these schools, students continually report that they are getting their money's worth in terms of faculty attention, inspiring and useful programs, and personal and professional development," writes Barron's publicity director, Grace Freedson.

Full house

Once again, Northeast received more than 7,000 applications for its fall 1990 freshman class of 1,400. This year's crop of freshmen rank high in their high school graduating classes. The typical 1990 freshman has an Enhanced-ACT composite score of 25.7, a high school grade point average of 3.40 on a 4.00 scale and graduated in the top 20 percent of his or her class.

Sophomore wins Barry Goldwater Scholarship

Anthony Ballman, a sophomore biology major from Columbia, Mo., has been chosen as a 1990 Barry M. Goldwater Scholar. The Barry M. Goldwater Scholarship and Excellence in Education Program was authorized by the United States Congress in 1986 to honor Goldwater who served his country for 56 years as a soldier and statesman, including 30 years in the U.S. Senate.

The program awards undergraduate scholarships to sophomores (who will be juniors) who have outstanding potential and intend to pursue careers in mathematics and the natural sciences. The enabling legislation was aimed at alleviating a critical current and future shortage of scientists and mathematicians.

To be considered, a student must be nominated by his or her college or university. Each scholarship will cover eligible expenses for tuition, fees, books and room and board, up to a maximum of $7,000. Ballman is eligible to receive the scholarship for two years.

Romitti Fullbright finalist

Martin Romitti, of Madrid, Iowa, was chosen as a finalist in the Fullbright Grant Competition. The Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act (the Fullbright-Hays Act) pays for one academic year of study and research in a foreign country. Romitti, however, was not selected to receive a grant.

The program was established "to enable the government of the United States to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and other countries." If chosen, Romitti would have studied the progressive political and social changes taking place in the Philippines.

Romitti graduated in May with a bachelor of science degree in political science and public administration.

Barnes receives fellowship

Jim Barnes, professor of comparative literature, was awarded a Bellagio Residency Fellowship from the Rockefeller Foundation of New York City. Barnes spent a month, May 5-June 5, at the Rockefeller Bellagio Study and Conference Center in Bellagio, Italy, beginning a translation of two volumes of poetry by West German poet Dagmar Nick.

In 1980, Barnes received a $500 Translation Award from the Translation Center of Columbia University (New York) for his conversion of another volume of Nick's work. Barnes said he has admired the German poet for years, and corresponds with her.

After the close of the residency, Barnes attended the 13th Anglo-Franco Festival in Poetry and Translation in Paris, France. He was one of only a handful of American poets invited to participate in this year's festival.

Chariton Review in the top

According to a list provided in the April 1990 issue of Writer's Digest, The Chariton Review is one of the top 19 publications that "shape our fiction outlook" in this country.

Writer's Digest asked more than 100 editors and agents to identify trend-setting magazines—publications they read when taking the pulse of our literary culture or searching for new talent. In addition to The Chariton Review, the list contained a wide variety of publications from The New Yorker to Playboy to Prairie Schooner.

Jim Barnes, professor of comparative literature, has been editor of The Chariton Review since he founded it in 1975. Published in spring and fall, the journal contains fiction, poetry, essays and translations and has a circulation of more than 7,000.

In the news, again

Northeast is among 300 select colleges included in the ninth edition of Peterson's Competitive Colleges. This is the fourth consecutive year Northeast has been recognized by the Princeton, New Jersey-based publisher of education and career reference materials.

Inclusion in Competitive Colleges is based upon admission data and information regarding student achievement rather than application numbers and reputation.

In addition to quality, the book addresses the growing need to consider financial aid and costs. A special article helps students estimate their family's financial contributions with an easy three-step process and gives tips for students with or without financial need. Within each institutional profile, all of the financial data are now contained in a new clearly defined section to make it easy to compare institutions' cost and financial aid arrangements.

Interim President Robert Dager congratulates Romitti on his selection as one of the finalists for the Fullbright Grant.

Communications Week brings in the pros

Communication professionals were on hand for presentations, panel discussions and critique sessions during this year's Communications Week held March 26-31. Armen Keteyian, an ABC news correspondent and former Sports Illustrated reporter, was the week's featured speaker.

Others attending were Jim Ankovich, photographer from St. Paul, Minn.; Les Dunseith ('80), copy editor and backup news editor for the Los Angeles Times; Lori Koraida Dunseith, news writer and assistant producer for KTTV-TV, Los Angeles; Brian Greif ('82), news director for WHO-TV, Des Moines, Iowa; Brian Karem, police and court reporter for KMOL-TV, San Antonio, Texas; and Bob Ridgely, news director for Missouri in Jefferson City, Mo.

Webster delivers commencement address

Missouri Attorney General William Webster delivered the address at Northeast's 120th spring commencement, May 19. Webster, Missouri's 39th attorney general, was first elected in 1984 and is the youngest person elected to that office since 1892.

Vocal advocacy of consumer rights earned Webster a spot among the "10 Most Feared Attorneys General" in 1988.

His consumer protection program, which responds to more than 40,000 consumer complaints each year, has been recognized as one of the best in the nation.

Webster addressed more than 950 bachelor's, master's and education specialist graduates in Pershing Arena. This year's spring valedictorian was Elizabeth Dunne from St. Louis. Dunne received a bachelor of science degree in economics and graduated with a perfect 4.0 GPA.

A surprise reception honoring Interim President Robert Dager was held April 26 in the Student Union. More than 300 faculty, staff and students attended to express their thanks for his year of service as president. He was presented with an engraved proclamation of appreciation from the Faculty Senate and a golf putter from the Student Senate. Pictured is Dager thanking Dean of Instruction Jack Magruder.

Dager assumed the responsibilities from Charles McClain on September 16, 1989 and turned over the office to Russell Warren on July 1.

Monroe Educator of the Year

Chandler Monroe, professor of speech, was named the 1990 Educator of the Year at the annual recognition banquet. Monroe was chosen from more than 45 nominations offered by students.

A committee of students evaluated applications submitted by the nominees and narrowed the field to six finalists. The finalists were then observed in a classroom setting to determine the Educator of the Year.

The Educator of the Year Award was established by Alpha Phi Sigma, Pershing Society, Phi Eta Sigma and Student Senate to provide a way for students to show their appreciation for exceptional teaching and dedication. The program is funded in part by the NMSU Development Fund.

Earth Day, every day

Northeast observed the 20th anniversary of Earth Day, April 22, with numerous activities. During the festivities Interim President Robert Dager presented a four-point pledge confirming the University's commitment to the preservation of the environment. Dager pledged:

1. to initiate a University policy aimed at the recovery of all wastepaper produced on the campus;
2. to initiate an energy audit to identify exactly how, where and how much energy is consumed on the campus in order that improvements and reductions in energy consumption may be made;
3. to promote and encourage the use of recycled paper in the University wherever financially feasible;
4. to appoint a University officer to oversee these measures and to promote environmental awareness among students, faculty and staff. In addition, this person should be accepted into membership of the Community Recycling Advancement Committee of Kirksville as an official representative of Northeast.

Michelle Terhune-Yost ('84), director of public relations for Northeast, has left the University to begin work as an account executive with Wilson Sculley & Associates, an advertising firm based in St. Louis. He is a three-time Outstanding Research Award recipient from the American Personnel and Guidance Association. Krumboltz is also listed in Who's Who in America, Leaders in Education and American Men and Women of Science.

Cogan Lecture Features Seefeldt

The 1990 Max Cogan Lecture was presented by Dr. Fern Seefeldt, director of the Institute for the Study of Youth Sports at Michigan State University. Seefeldt spoke March 14 on "The Future of Youth Sports in America: What Lies Beyond Victory or Defeat?"

Seefeldt holds a doctorate degree from the University of Wisconsin-Madison with a specialty in motor development. Seefeldt's 22-year career in higher education has been devoted to the study of relationships between motor skill acquisition, physical growth and biological maturation of children and youth.

Funded through donations to the NMSU Development Fund, the lecture series focuses on the integration of physical education and the social sciences and was established to honor the late Max Cogan, professor of physical education at Northeast from 1966 to 1988.

McNeill presents Kohlenberg/ Towne Lecture

William McNeill presented the annual Kohlenberg/Towne Lecture April 19. McNeill, the Robert A. Millikan Distinguished Service Professor at the University of Chicago, presented "The Politics of Population: Ancient and Modern," and "The Pursuit and Practice of World History."

McNeill earned a doctorate in Eastern European history at Cornell University (Ithaca, NY). He currently serves as editor of the Journal of Modern History and Chairman of the Board for the Demos Foundation. He is also the author of more than 20 books, one of which, The Rise of the West: A History of the Human Community, won the 1963 National Book Award for history and the Gordon J. Laing Prize at the University of Chicago.

The Kohlenberg/Towne Lecture Series was established in honor of Gilbert Kohlenberg, professor emeritus of history and head emeritus of the social science division and Ruth Towne, professor emeritus of history and dean emeritus of graduate studies. Funding is provided through donations to the NMSU Development Fund.

Excellence at Academy

Northeast students won several awards for papers presented at the 1990 Missouri Academy of Science meeting held at St. Louis University last April. Out of 18 possible awards, Northeast students received seven.

In all, 91 students representing 17 Missouri colleges and universities presented papers in the Collegiate Division competition. Northeast was represented with 29 student papers—more than any other participating school.

The Academy consists of scientists and teachers of science throughout Missouri. Its goals are to increase scientific knowledge and aid in its diffusion, to encourage and support the scientific spirit, to promote cooperation among the scientific interests in Missouri, and to foster the education of Missourians about the constructive role of science and technology in the improvement of our society's general welfare. The Academy is composed of three divisions: Junior, Collegiate and Senior.

Schools in competition with Northeast included University of Missouri-Rolla, University of Missouri-Columbia, St. Louis University, Washington University, Westminster College and William Jewell College.

Award-winning Funny Business

Nine Northeast students clinched a first place title in the 1990 American Advertising Federation (AAF) District IX National Student Advertising Competition held April 7 in Omaha, Neb. The project for this year's competition was to develop a new magazine for Hearst Publishing.

Northeast was the only first-time competitor in a field which included Kansas University, University of Missouri-Columbia, Kansas State, Iowa State, Wichita State University and St. Louis University among others. The team, calling itself "The Eight Star Creative Group," presented Funny Business, a magazine designed to give an overview of the comedy/humor industry and encourage reader participation. For the competition, the group had to compile a 50-page marketing and business plan, create a 12-page prototype, and make an oral presentation.

Man on a mission

“It’s important for them to know that the person at the top cares. Given the opportunity, lower-, moderate-income people are no different than middle-class, upper-class people. They want exactly the same things: decent, safe, sanitary conditions; good schools for their kids; and to be respected.”

Alphonso Jackson ('68) is well known in the public housing developments of Dallas, Texas. His actions there elicit positive responses from nearly everyone he sees, and from everyone who sees him. Although Jackson does not live there, he is constantly present, and its residents regularly come face to face with him.

Jackson is the Executive Director of the Dallas Housing Authority.

He is not the average executive director though. The impoverished, as well as the affluent, of Dallas realize this, applauding him for his efforts since he arrived there in January 1988.

Jackson oversees approximately 50,000 residents living in conventional public housing and apartments served by certificate and voucher programs. Overseeing is an ambiguous term that Jackson interprets as very personal.

"It's important for them to know that the person at the top cares," Jackson said. Given the opportunity, lower-, moderate-income people are no different than middle-class, upper-class people. They want exactly the same things: decent, safe, sanitary conditions; good schools for their kids; and to be respected."

Jackson is on a mission to make public housing the best it possibly can be.

"I think he understands public housing," Dallas Mayor Annette Strauss said, "and that he is going to do whatever needs to be done to make our public housing some of the best anywhere. . . . He has the vision for the future that we need."

His mission stems from a childhood spent in South Dallas, growing up with 11 older siblings and his parents. He said his parents were a key influence in his education and sense of value and worth.

"They always stressed that education is the best tool to fight racism," Jackson said, "and as an African-American you must be better than your white counterpart in order to get to the level that your white counterpart gets to. . . . That was the thing: Don't let racism stop you."

Jackson didn't, going to college on a full athletic scholarship out of 42 offered him when he graduated from high school in 1964. He didn't stay in one place too long though, attending several universities in the South, East and Midwest. This landed him at Northeast Missouri State College where he earned a bachelor of science in education degree in history in 1968 and in 1969 a master of arts degree in school administration.

Soon after Jackson graduated he took his wife and daughter to St. Louis where he attended law school at Washington University. He also took fond memories of people who had influenced him at Northeast.

"The caring Coach Kenneth Gardner showed taught us we were not here only as athletes but to get an education," recalled the track and field All-American.

"He used to tell us, 'The athlete (preparation) will leave you soon, but if you prepare the whole person, it will carry you through life.' Gardner was a man who realized the importance of the development of the whole person."

Gilbert Kohlenberg was also instrumental in his education. Jackson remembers Kohlenberg teaching several history courses he "enjoyed thoroughly."

Although NMSU is a small part of his past, Jackson said it was significant. "Northeast Missouri (State University) taught me the ability to get along and prepared me clearly for my career."

Jackson's career has certainly been distinguished:

- ★ Assistant to the chancellor and assistant professor of criminal justice and political science at the University of Missouri-St. Louis.
- ★ Director of public safety and executive director of the Housing Authority in St. Louis.
- ★ Director of organizational and human resources for Laventhol & Horwath public accounting firm.
- ★ Director of the Washington, D.C. Housing Authority.

Along the way Jackson has gained numerous admirers and accolades. U.S. Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-St. Louis, who served on the St. Louis Board of Aldermen at the time Jackson was in charge of public safety, said, "I have a very high opinion of his ability. His great strength is that he gets along with people. He's smart and he's able to get people to follow his leadership. That's what leadership is all about."

While in Washington, Jackson instituted the first public-housing ownership program in the country. The program, which allows residents to purchase apartments, caught President Ronald Reagan's attention. Jackson was invited to the White House on several occasions.

So why is he back in Dallas? "He came very highly recommended," said U.S. Rep. Steve Bartlett, R-Dallas, who serves on the housing subcommittee in Congress and who once chaired the housing committee on the Dallas City Council. "So highly recommended, in fact, by people I know and trust in housing circles, frankly, that I was suspicious anybody could be that good. He is that good. He has lived up to all the expectations I had of him and more."

Jackson's formula for success can be found in his strong convictions. He often uses the phrase, "old American values," and expresses his desire to "give something back."

"There is no greater honor than to serve your own community," he said.

"I don't see this as a job. I actually see this as a mission: to make life better for lower- and moderate-income people.

"What I look at is: How are we going to transform the many problems that we have into the solutions that we need to make this country a better place for all of us to live? How are we going to do that? That's what I keep asking myself."

You can count on this: Alphonso Jackson will work diligently to answer that question.

A Piece of My Mind

Maria L. Evans ('81), a fourth-year student at the University of Missouri-Columbia School of Medicine, was published in the Feb. 9 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA). The article, "Dit Dit," was written as a tribute to the late W.B. "Pete" Stewart and appeared in the "A Piece of My Mind" column.

"A Piece of My Mind" is devoted to relationships between professionals and their patients and is considered to be one of the Journal's most popular sections. According to Roxanne Young, an associate editor for JAMA, the column receives about 600 submissions each year but only 5 to 10 percent are printed.

An avid ham radio operator, Evans met Stewart on the air during her senior year at Macon High School and developed a friendship that lasted eight years. Evans credits Stewart, a retired pathology professor at the UMC Medical School, as a positive influence in her life and a strong force in her decision to pursue medicine as a career. "Dit Dit" is a ham radio operator's message for, "I'm here. No need to worry. I'm still with you. You're not alone."

Evans was also recently selected to the Missouri State Medical Association Executive Council. The council consists of one physician from each congressional district, one resident physician, and one medical student.

His most famous serial character was superhero Doc Savage who battled criminals throughout the pages of a 10-cent pulp magazine in the '30s and '40s; it was later reissued in paperback by Bantam Books. The Doc Savage stories are currently being published by Bantam, in groups of four, in a numbered Omnibus series.

ST. LOUIS

Investigating schizophrenia

Terry Early ('77), M.D., assistant professor of psychiatry at Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis, was the principal investigator of a research team studying schizophrenia. The team proposed a new scientific model that attributes schizophrenia to an abnormality in the left hemisphere of the brain in an area that controls attention.

More than two million Americans have schizophrenia, which usually strikes between the ages of 17 and 30. It is characterized by such symptoms as hallucinations, delusions, thought disorder, blunted emotions and impaired attention; yet it has no single distinctive feature as its hallmark. Precisely because of its myriad manifestations, schizophrenia long ago was labeled as having many physiological causes. This assumption splintered approaches to understanding the illness.

"Actually, evidence suggests much more uniformity than has been thought," Early said.

The model offers possible explanations for many aspects of schizophrenia, and attempts to link cognitive function to the anatomy of the disorder.

"It's (the model) defined precisely enough that it can be tested fairly well, and it suggests a number of avenues of study," Early said. He presented the model at the World Congress of Psychiatry last fall in Athens, Greece, and two articles describing it will be published later this year in the journal Psychiatric Developments.

Portrait of a professional cartoonist

Buck Jones (no relation to Indiana) is a self-proclaimed “Raider of the Lost Art”—the lost art of cartooning. And as a free-lance cartoonist/illustrator, Jones, who received his bachelor’s from Northeast in 1983, pursues his quest with a motivation rarely equaled.

Jones began his career as soon as he learned to draw, with doodling a favorite hobby.

“I always enjoyed drawing cartoons, and it became entertaining to my classmates,” Jones said.

As a student at Iowa City High School, Jones drew for the school paper and during his senior year, won an award for one of his editorial cartoons.

Jones majored in art at Northeast, adding design skills to his artistic repertoire. Faculty don’t routinely encourage cartooning as a career, and when Jones said that was all he did, he was told, “We’ll break you of that.” They never succeeded, though, and Jones credits William Murray, associate professor of art; Robert Jones, associate professor of art and graphic designer; and Garry Gordon, assistant professor of art; with helping to further his development.

For academic enhancement and diversion, Jones was involved with several University organizations including Art Students of Baldwin and Phi Kappa Theta fraternity, and was a student member of the University & College Designers Association. He drew editorial cartoons for the Index, which brought him further awards his junior year.

During his senior year, Jones became a student designer in the Northeast Publications Office. There, on Valentine’s Day, he met his future wife. Kim Wright was a staff assistant in publications, and Jones courted her with cartoons for 1 1/2 years.

Soon after graduation, Jones answered an ad for a cartoonist and began work as an illustrator/designer for Decal Specialties in Mason City, Iowa. At that time, the company was riding high on the children’s sticker fad.

“You see an ad like that about once every 10 years, so I had to pursue it,” Jones said. “I was cheap help, but I was doing what I wanted to do.”

Jones survived five layoffs during his two years with the company. He moved to Des Moines, Iowa, when Kim got a job with Drake University, where she is currently director of publications.

It was then that Kim encouraged Jones to free-lance. In fact, Jones has a tendency to credit Kim for quite a bit of his success.

“My best projects, I think, and the ones that seem to be the most popular, are the ones Kim and I collaborate on,” Jones said.

He developed a promotional piece to show off his creative and artistic flair, which included a resume and clip-out response card. About 250 pieces were sent out, mostly to businesses and agencies in the Des Moines area, at a cost of approximately $500. Jones said although the investment seemed great at the time, he made it up within the first month of business.

Jones also submitted his self-promotion piece to several cartoonists whose work he admires. He is especially proud of the note he received in response from Mike Peters, creator of the nationally syndicated "Mother Goose and Grimm" comic strip. Peters said he liked the piece and wished Jones luck.

But luck really hasn't been necessary so far. Although Jones described the free-lance business as "hills and valleys" in terms of work load, he has been keeping busy.

In 1987, Jones submitted samples of work, featuring a dragon named Max, to Better Homes and Gardens, one of several Meredith Corp. publications. To date, Max the Dragon and his friends have appeared in 16 children's activity books and four story books. Max is now a copyrighted character and trademark of Meredith Corp. and appears on plastic bottles of French's mustard as well as in the form of a stuffed animal. His success has led to other BH&G illustrative projects, including a barbecue recipe book and a book about latchkey kids.

"Better Homes and Gardens is one of the bread-and-butter accounts that a free-lancer dreams about," Jones said. "I'm very thankful I have it."

Jones also dabbled with newspapers again that year, submitting three editorial cartoons per week under contract for Extra Newspaper Features syndicate in Rochester, Minn. Throughout the year, Jones' cartoons appeared in about 10 U.S. papers, and when they were purchased, Jones and his syndicate split the fee 50/50.

Jones achieved a long-term career goal last year when one of his editorial cartoons was published in the 1989 edition of Best Editorial Cartoons of the Year. The cartoon, featuring Humpty Dumpty slain by crack cocaine while a mourning Pinocchio observes, originally appeared in the Mason City Globe-Gazette.

Despite his success in the editorial arena, Jones insists politics aren't his strong suit.

"I'm about as politically oriented as a doughnut," he said.

He's more interested in making people laugh, through characters like Arnie the Pig, a concept Kim came up with in 1984.

The Jones promotional describes Arnie as "an original Iowa creation . . . a pig with a love for the heartland but a taste for stardom. He lives out fantasies most pigs only dream of." Arnie lives out his fantasies by taking on famous personalities such as Pigasso, Bruce Swinesteen (Born in the M.U.D.) and Boy George (Do you really want to eat me?), and can be seen on sweatshirts, T-shirts and greeting cards designed by Jones. Arnie's real moment in the limelight was when Willard Scott presented a Jones cartoon on the "Today" show, featuring Arnie as each of the show's four hosts.

These days a new subject has entered the Jones chronicles. His name is Satchel Buck Jones, their son, born last October. Not only has Satchel appeared on the personalized thank-you notes Jones sends to his clients and starred in an elaborate book-birth announcement titled A Stitch in Time, he has also rearranged Jones' schedule. Jones said now that he plays Mr. Mom during the day, he often ends up putting in 12- to 14-hour days.

"The hours are unbelievably tough," Jones said.

And, for a free-lance cartoonist, self-promotion is the number-one priority.

"You've got to keep your face out there," he said.

On the brighter side, Jones enjoys working with a variety of clients rather than having one particular boss, which he said keeps things interesting.

But the Jones adventure doesn't end here. His hopes for the future include branching out into the national market, drawing his own syndicated comic strip and going into business with Kim. In fact, they already have a business name and logo developed, Buckim, which they use on personalized Christmas cards, greeting cards and other items.

How long will Jones free-lance? As long as they can pay the bills.

"I'm doing what I always dreamed of doing," Jones said.

BULLDOG SPRING ROUNDUP

TENNIS Ramiro Azcui was pleasantly surprised by the performances of his NMSU men's and women's teams this spring.

The women compiled a better-than-expected 16-6 dual record and a second-place finish at the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association Championships. Despite a shaky 0-6 start in dual competition, the Bulldog men refused to panic and finished a rebuilding year with a 5-12 mark. They came in third at the MIAA Tournament.

The highlight of the women's season was junior Betty Hernandez (Morelia, Mexico-Rector Hildago) participating in NCAA Division II Championships. Hernandez, who logged a team-leading 18-6 record at No. 1 singles and was ranked 39th nationally, lost a first-round NCAA match. She was the first Lady Bulldog to qualify for the national championships.

Diane Karl (St. Louis-Cor Jesu Academy), who was 7-3 as a part-time No. 6 player, was the only senior on the women's roster.

Hernandez will return in 1991, along with sophomore Chris Murphy (Arlington Heights, Ill.-Rolling Meadows), 16-8 at No. 2 singles; sophomore Beth Koenig (Belleville, Ill.-East), 16-5 at No. 3; junior Donita Foster (Palmyra), 13-9 at No. 4; sophomore Sherry Banez (St. Louis-Ursuline Academy), 16-8 at No. 5; and freshman Mitzi Fischer (St. Louis-Oakville), 12-9 at No. 6. Sophomore Carol Johnson (Arlington Heights, Ill.-Rolling Meadows), who was 8-5 in limited action at No. 6 this past campaign, is also scheduled to be back next spring.

Timmer Willing (Quincy, Ill.-Senior), 7-11 at No. 1 singles, was the only senior for the Bulldog men. Slated to return in 1991 are Timmer's brother, freshman Todd Willing, 12-6 at No. 4; sophomore Jay Selkirk (St. Joseph-Central), 8-10 at No. 2 singles; sophomore Geoff Selkirk (St. Joseph-Central), 6-13 at No. 3; junior Alan Kramer (St. Louis-Eureka), 8-11 at No. 5; and freshman Oliver Nussbaum (St. Louis-Clayton), 6-12 at No. 6.

SOFTBALL Despite the fact they were 17-18 overall and finished sixth in the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association Post Season Tournament, softball coach Dan Zimmer was generally pleased with the performance of the Lady Bulldogs in their first campaign under his direction.

Zimmer said cold bats and crucial errors were NMSU's downfall in the conference tournament, and inconsistent pitching hurt the team during the regular season. The Lady Bulldogs were last in league pitching with a 2.95 earned-run average.

However, Zimmer can look forward to 1991 with eager anticipation as only one player on the 1990 roster is not slated to return. Senior backup catcher-designated hitter Sheila Means (Hanna City, Ill.-Limestone-Bartonville) completed her two-year career for the Lady Bulldogs with a .217 batting average and 13 runs-batted-in.

Three members of this year's team collected some type of all-MIAA honors. Freshman catcher Vicki Dennington (House Springs-Northwest) was an all-North Division first-team and all-conference second-team choice. Junior short-stop Trish Horn (Bloomfield, Iowa-Davenport County), and freshman first baseman Anne Moe (Davenport, Iowa-North) were all-MIAA honorable-mention.

Horn also landed on the NCAA Division II All-Central Region second team. Horn, Dennington and Moe led NMSU in batting with .333, .316 and .314 averages, respectively.

Top pitchers for the Lady Bulldogs this past campaign were sophomore Christine Harstad (Toddville, Iowa-Alburnett Community) and junior Miss Pewe (New Liberty, Iowa-Calamus-Wheatland). Harstad, an NCAA Division II All-Central Region second-team pick, finished the spring with a 2.37 earned-run average and 12-9 record. Pewe was 4-4 with a 2.64 ERA.

WOMEN'S GOLF After losing several key performers from the 1989 team, the NMSU women's golfers underwent a partial rebuilding job before the 1990 spring season.

Coach Sam Lesseig said he was pleased with the results, as the Lady Bulldogs finished fifth at the National Golf Coaches' Association National Intercollegiate Championship and held their own in three other tournaments against primarily Division I opponents.

Senior D'Anne Gross (Marshalltown, Iowa) was fifth in the individual standings at the national championships, the highest finish for an NMSU player in that tournament since the Lady Bulldogs started competing intercollegiately in the 1985-86 campaign.

Before next season, Lesseig must replace Gross, but the rest of the lineup is slated to return. That group includes sophomore Mary O'Connor (Des Moines, Iowa-Dowling) and freshmen Nicole Barth (Green, Iowa), Brenda Morris (Galesburg, Ill.-Senior) and Karin Moore (Jefferson City).

MEN'S GOLF The 1990 season was successful overall for the Bulldog men's golfers. Bill Richerson's team captured its seventh straight Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association title and qualified for the NCAA Division II Championships for the sixth consecutive year.

Although the 'Dogs had to settle for a disappointing last-place finish in the national tournament, Richerson said they recorded a good campaign, considering they had to replace All-American J.P. Velasco from the 1989 squad.

Richerson, who received MIAA and all-district Coach of the Year accolades this spring, must replace MIAA medalist Dan Mulhearn (Chicago Heights, Ill.-Marion Catholic) and two other seniors, Tim Albers (Eldridge, Iowa-North Scott), eighth in the conference tournament, and Chris Truelson (Kalona, Iowa-Mid-Prairie), a part-time member of the lineup. Mulhearn earned All-American honors once and all-district laurels three times during his career.

Northeast's nucleus next season will be built around juniors Shannon Hosick (Xenia, Ill.-Flora) and Scott Sanford (St. Charles-West). Freshman Kevin Fisher (Waterloo, Iowa-Columbus) is also scheduled to return in 1991 after earning a starting role this year.

MEN'S TRACK The NMSU men's track team concluded a satisfying outdoor season with a fourth-place finish in the tough Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association Championships and a 16th-place standing in the NCAA Division II Championships. Northeast's finish in the national meet was its highest since 1979.

Four Bulldogs earned All-American honors at the NCAA encounter. Senior Rich Hayward (Indianola, Iowa) was third in the discus and fourth in the shot put. Senior Steve Danner (Metamora, Ill.) was fifth in decathlon competion, junior Matt Candrl (Owensville) was seventh in the decathlon, and senior Mark Collier (Kirkwood) was seventh in the shot put. Hayward, who captured All-American accolades for the second straight year, was the high-point performer at the MIAA Meet for the second successive outdoor season.

Coach Ed Schneider will lose Hayward, Danner and Collier from the 1990 team, plus middle distance performer Steve Fisher (Mexico), sprinter Kelly Marsengill (Washington, Iowa), middle distance performer Don Obert (Liberty, Ill.), distance runner Stan Johnson (Elmwood, Ill.) and middle distance runner Curtis Elam (Callao-Macon).

Schneider said he hoped to bolster the jump, sprint, middle distance and field events in particular, before next year.

WOMEN'S TRACK Coach John Cochrane described the 1990 Lady Bulldog outdoor track season as "pretty satisfying." After winning the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association indoor championship for the second consecutive time, the women finished a strong third in the MIAA outdoor meet. Then, they came in 10th at the NCAA Division II Championships, their highest standing since they started competing in the national encounter.

The individual highlight of the campaign was senior Kerry Knepper's (Cascade, Iowa) performance in the NCAA Division I Championships. Knepper, competing in her final collegiate race, finished 10th in the 10,000-meter run at the Division I meet, setting a new school record with a time of 34:28.0. She was only the second Lady Bulldog to participate in the Division I Championships.

Previously, Knepper finished second in the Division II 10,000 meters. Junior Sandra Hester (Davenport, Iowa-Central) took first-place honors in the 400-meter hurdles at the Division II Championships, the first time since 1985 that an NMSU woman has claimed an event title in the national meet. Junior Stacy Roberts (Columbia-Rock Bridge) was seventh in the Division II high-jump competition.

Knepper, Hester and Roberts received All-American recognition. Cochrane will lose only Knepper and hurdler Karla Kaestner (Newton, Iowa) from this year's team, but he said the two standouts will leave big holes to fill before next season.

BASEBALL Kirby Cannon indicated a 12-26 record was not all that bad for his 1990 baseball Bulldogs, especially after a 9-25 mark last year.

This spring, Cannon's men lost 11 contests by just one run, and the first-year head coach said playing close games was a positive factor for the young team, which had only three seniors.

Freshman catcher-designated hitter Todd Schmitt (Manchester-Parkway South) led NMSU in batting (.320), hits (39), home runs (8), runs-batted-in (31), total bases (72) and slugging percentage (.590). Schmitt's eight round trippers set a school record for homers by a freshman. He was named to the 1990 Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association second team as the utility man. Junior outfielder Chad Kerr (Burlington, Iowa), third on the team in hitting (.305), was selected for all-MIAA honorable mention recognition.

Other key holdovers from 1990 include freshman outfielder Nate Mudd (Glen Carbon, Ill.-Edwardsville), who hit .309; sophomore outfielder John Johnson (Burlington, Iowa), who carried a .279 average at the plate; junior pitcher Charlie Lee (Peoria, Ill.-Spalding Institute), 3-4 record; freshman pitcher Shannon Hunter (Oak Grove), 3-4; junior pitcher Nick Steiner (Warrenton-Warren County R-3), 2-6; and sophomore pitcher Shane Williams (Wentzville), 2-1.

Primary contributing seniors this spring were second baseman Darin Koch (Hollywood, Fla.-South Broward), who batted .291 in the lead-off position and landed on the all-conference honorable mention list, and pitcher Steve Klopac (Jonesburg-Warren County R-3), who posted a 1-3 record in 34 innings on the mound.

MIAA announces penalties
Officials of the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association announced this spring action had been taken by the Association, regarding violations of MIAA and NCAA rules by NMSU.

Walter H. Ryle, president of the MIAA, said the University was fined $1,000 and placed on probation for two years as a result of conference and NCAA rules violations by Jack Ball, former Bulldog head coach. The MIAA ruled the NMSU football team ineligible for the 1990 MIAA championship.

Conference officials also issued a public reprimand and censured the University for lack of appropriate internal control of its football program.

In response to the MIAA action against NMSU, former president Robert Dager said, "This is an unfortunate circumstance for the University. However, appropriate measures have been taken to prevent future re-occurrences. We have complete confidence in the current football staff."

Last January, Eric Holm, a former NMSU assistant coach, was appointed Bulldog head football coach.

Late in 1989, the University self-reported possible violations of MIAA and NCAA rules in its student-athlete athletic grants-in-aid for the football program.

With the assistance of its auditing firm, Coopers and Lybrand of St. Louis, NMSU completed an investigation of the scholarship program and submitted a full report to the MIAA and NCAA. The NCAA had not officially responded to the report as of mid-August.

Graham named new AD

Alan Graham, assistant athletic director at James Madison University in Harrisonburg, Va., has been named athletic director at Northeast, effective Sept. 17.

Alan Graham

Graham has been assistant athletic director for external activities at James Madison since 1988. He is responsible for directing the Duke Booster Club fund drive, marketing the football, men's basketball and women's basketball programs, marketing the Colonial Athletic Association conference men's basketball championship tournament and managing the ticket office.

For two years before moving to James Madison, Graham was executive director of the University of New Mexico Lobo Club with responsibilities for athletic development. He has also served as assistant athletic director and executive director of the Cowboy Joe Club at the University of Wyoming, assistant athletic director for development at the U.S. Air Force Academy, and director of customer services and sales administrator for the New Orleans Jazz basketball club.

Graham attended New Mexico State University, where he played four years of basketball. As a senior, he was team captain and the Missouri Valley Conference free-throw champion.

He holds a bachelor's degree in business administration from New Mexico State and a master's degree in health, physical education and recreation from Ohio University.

Graham and his wife, Sally, have two sons, Joshua and Tyler.

Cable named to CoSIDA Board of Directors
William Cable, Northeast sports information director, has been elected to the 15-member board of directors of the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA). Cable will serve a three-year term as the

No More Like Him

*He fought the good fight."
He was always very optimistic."
A family man with an unwavering belief in God."
A positive influence on everyone."
A great coach—a great man."*

These are just a few things that have been said to describe a former Northeast football player and coach. However, Gil Peterson, athletic director at Western Illinois University, may have said it best, "Finding him—we couldn't find anyone better. I don't think there are any more Bruce Craddocks around. That's not to say there aren't any good football coaches, but there certainly aren't any more Bruce Craddocks."

Bruce Craddock ('66), head football coach of the WIU Leathernecks, died Feb. 22, 1990, in the McDonough District Hospital in Macomb, Ill. Craddock, 46, had been fighting liver cancer since it was first diagnosed in March of 1989.

Craddock came to Northeast as a student from Park Forest, Ill. He helped the football Bulldogs capture two MIAA championships, and in his senior year College Division Representative for the Central Region. CoSIDA has approximately 1,600 members.

He was elected as a college division representative after being recommended by the nominations committee at the 1990 CoSIDA National Workshop held last June in Houston.

A native of Hannibal, Mo., Cable attended Northeast for two years before transferring to the University of Missouri-Columbia where he received his bachelor's degree in journalism. He began working at the University in 1956 as director of the institutional publications office.

earned honorable mention all-conference recognition as a lineman.

After receiving a bachelor's degree in physical education, Craddock worked a year as a Northeast graduate assistant before joining the Marines. He served in Vietnam from 1967 to 1970 rising to the rank of captain.

Craddock returned to NMSU as assistant football coach and head wrestling coach while earning a master's degree in health and physical education in 1971. He left NMSU in 1972 to become assistant football coach at the University of Vermont—a position he held for three years.

In 1975 Craddock came back to his alma mater as offensive and defensive line coach and offensive coordinator. Craddock held those positions until he replaced Ron Taylor after the 1978 season as the Bulldog head coach.

Under the leadership of Craddock, the Bulldogs compiled a 24-19-0 record and won two MIAA titles. The 1982 team was ranked fourth in NCAA Division II and advanced to the quarterfinals before losing to Jacksonville (Ala.) 34-21. Craddock was twice recognized as the MIAA Coach of the Year.

Following the '82 season Craddock moved to Western Illinois University as head coach of the Division I-AA football program. His success continued as he directed the Leathernecks to a 41-35-1 record over seven seasons.

The 1988 squad compiled a 10-2 season, which was a school record, while winning the Gateway Conference and earning a berth in the I-AA playoffs. Craddock was also selected as the Kodak I-AA Region Five Coach of the Year. On Sept. 16, 1989, Craddock was bestowed Northeast's highest athletic honor. In recognition of his contributions to athletics as a player and coach, Crad-

Cable contributed to the creation and organization of the sports information office at Northeast, and in 1972, was named the first full-time director of sports information. The University has 10 women's and 11 men's varsity sports.

In 1988, Cable was selected into membership in the Citizens Savings-CoSIDA Hall of Fame. He was also named to the NMSU Athletic Hall of Fame in 1989. Thirty-one of his athletic press guides have received CoSIDA awards.

dock was inducted into the NMSU Athletic Hall of Fame.

Hundreds of family, friends, former players and fellow coaches joined Craddock's wife, Karen, and children, Sonja, Ryan and Robb, in memorial services held Feb. 26 in Macomb. He was buried in Grinnell, Iowa.

Mrs. G: A Bulldog Institution

She was affectionately called Mrs. G. To many former Bulldog athletes, she was friend, mother and wife to Kenneth Gardner ('47), former coach and NMSU Athletic Director.

Mrs. G, with her husband of 44 years, attended hundreds of athletic events in Kirksville and across the country. She was an NMSU fan, supporter and athletic counselor—a Bulldog institution.

Ethelyn Gardner died June 5, 1990, in Columbia Regional Hospital after a long illness. She was 71 years old.

Originally from Macomb, Ill., she moved to Kirksville after marrying Kenneth Gardner on May 26, 1946. They had one daughter, Barbara Lynn, who died in infancy and a son, Dick Brownlee, of Joplin, Mo.

A graduate of the University of Illinois, Mrs. Gardner held degrees in mathematics and science. She taught school in Marceline from 1947 to 1951 and later served as an instructor at NMSU and the Kirksville College of Osteopathic Medicine. She also worked as a laboratory technician at Grim-Smith Hospital.

Mrs. Gardner was a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution and the American Legion Auxiliary.

She was buried June 8 in Kirksville's Maple Hills Cemetery.

Best Seller: 1990 Alumni Directory Complete

Northeast's 1990 Alumni Directory, compiled and published by the Alumni/Development Office, is hot off the press. The 454-page directory provides the most complete listing available of the more than 40,000 graduates of NMSU.

Nearly 3,000 alumni and friends were sent complimentary hard- or soft-bound copies of the book in July. Directories were provided to those who had made 1990 Development Fund Campaign gifts of $30 to $99 (soft-bound) or $100 or more (hard-bound).

The Directory contains general information about the University and an alphabetical listing of graduates including: address, NMSU degree(s) received and year(s) of graduation. Graduates are also cross-referenced by class year (first degree received) and by geographic location.

This is the second directory produced by the University. The first was published in 1984.

Work on the Directory began last October when questionnaires were mailed asking for updated information from each graduate. From that point, countless hours were spent updating and proofreading.

For those who didn't receive a directory, a limited number of both hard- and soft-bound copies are available. Due to the small quantities, complimentary copies will be given, on a first-come/first-served basis, to those who send Development Fund gifts of $50 or more (soft), or $120 or more (hard) until quantities are depleted. Gifts should be made payable to the NMSU Development Fund.

NMSU National Art Competition receives grant

The NMSU Fine Arts Division recently received a $1,500 grant from the Missouri Arts Council to support the NMSU National Art Competition. This is the first MAC grant received by the University for the visual arts.

Northeast art students organize the annual art competition which was initiated in 1989. The 1990 competition received 496 entries from 172 artists. From these works, John Perreault, the juror, selected 41 entries from 34 artists for local exhibition and consideration for awards.

The grant will be used to underwrite advertising expenses and other promotional costs related to the National Art Competition.

Northeast grant recipient from Coordinating Board

Missouri's Coordinating Board for Higher Education awarded Northeast two grants totaling $46,144 for projects to support and improve mathematics and science teaching skills of elementary and secondary teachers and to improve student understanding and performance in science and mathematics.

Northeast received $24,294 for a project titled "Science, Technology and Society for Elementary Teachers" and $21,850 for "Middle School Science (MSS) Project." Funding for the grants came through the Eisenhower Mathematics and Science Education Act.

Fuld Trust supports Nursing Division

Northeast's Division of Nursing received a $25,000 grant from the Helene Fuld Health Trust, the nation's largest charitable trust devoted exclusively to the welfare of undergraduate student nurses.

A spokesman stated that the grant was made in recognition of the outstanding contributions to the nursing profession being made by the Division of Nursing at Northeast in educating undergraduate nurses to render bedside care to patients. The funds will be used to purchase interactive video equipment and programs for the Nurse Independent Learning Center.

Since its creation in 1969, the Trust has awarded more than $67 million to nursing schools.

IBM provides assistance

The Division of Math and Computer Science and the Computer Services Office have been awarded a $16,000 grant from the IBM Academic Information System Office. The grant will be used to purchase equipment and software for the Academic Computing Lab in Violette Hall.

IBM PS/2 model 55 work stations are being installed in the computing lab. The computers will be networked and have access to the IBM mainframe computer systems. IBM is providing special support to implement its UNIX operating system software in the lab, and Northeast will document its experience related to a multiple operating system environment for instructional computing.

L.G. Waterhouse, vice president for IBM academic information systems, has indicated that IBM plans to utilize the University's Academic Computing Lab as a reference account for viewing by other customers. An IBM Application Brief describing the instructional computing network at Northeast will be published.

Letters

Thanks for the memories

The picture/calendar is excellent of the Old Normal school and grounds. The Practice School occupied the first and second floors of the Library building. I attended it from kindergarten through the eighth grade. That was two years before "The Big Fire." The lake we enjoyed in the summer with the water lilies and ducks. In the winter Mr. Jack would decide when the ice was strong enough that we could skate upon it.

In 1887 when my mother, Mary Belle Plumb, graduated from the First District Normal School I think the only building was Baldwin Hall. Best wishes for Development plans.

Sincerely,
Frances Fuller Spanier ('29)

I was delighted to receive the beautiful poster/calendar some time back and the 1988-89 resident's List with Tom Throust, Jr.'s marvelous "Reflections" which was so beautifully written.

The poster brought back many treasured memories of my early days at KSTC, as we called them. I especially enjoyed reading Pauline Dingle-Knobbs' story of "The Great Fire."

I was in the second quarter of my first year at KSTC that January day of 1924 and had been doing some reference reading in the library that afternoon for Catherine Sullivan-Hill's "Children's Nutrition" class but had finished and had gone home with a friend who lived near the campus, less than an hour before the alarm sounded. We rushed back and ever to this day have I ever forgotten that eerie night and the feeling of horror at what was happening before our eyes. One of my most cherished treasures is my jeweled KSTC pin with its Tower pin guard.

I apologize for being so slow in acknowledging the alumni gifts of poster and President's List but I have the full care of my husband of 64 years who is in his 95th year and housebound, with a heart condition and other complications so that my time is mostly taken up with taking care of his needs and many things get neglected. We were fortunate enough to have been able to attend the 50th reunion of my college graduating class which was a highlight experience for both of us. It afforded us the opportunity to become acquainted with President McClain personally.

I am enclosing checks for continuing my alumni membership and the Development Fund. Wish it could be more but all good wishes go with it for continued success in all your endeavors.

Sincerely,
Virginia Stout-Armstrong ('27)
Lee's Summit, Mo.

I received the big picture of the "old Baldwin Hall" etc., with a letter written by Pauline Knobbs in 1924 alongside it, as well as the 1990 calendar. Thanks.

Since Pauline Bates Dingle Knobbs is from Palmyra, I thought that the college would be interested to know that there is a street here in Palmyra named in her honor, "Dingle Street." The house where she used to live here also stands.

Several people here remember her and I even found some relatives of hers—James and Mary Lou Bates and Hazel Bates. Before locating them, the local historian, Carolyn Jacobs, who was also acquainted with Pauline, had thought we should put the picture with letter by Pauline in the museum here, and I agreed, but then found these relatives to whom I gave the scroll. Whether they will keep it or put it in the museum here will be their choice now.

Pauline Knobbs was teaching at KSTC (as it was called) when I did my undergraduate work there—graduating summer of 1949 by doing summer, Saturday, night classes and extension courses. I didn't have Mrs. Knobbs for any classes but my roommate and friend, Rev. Bertha Porter (Rush, now) had Pauline for a teacher. I didn't know there was a Palmyra, Mo., when I was in college there, but saw Pauline Knobb's name in some literature from NMSU since I've been here (moved here in 1986) and that's how I knew she was from Palmyra.

I retired from teaching in 1983 with 31 years teaching, eight of which were in Putnam County, Mo., two years in Hammond, Ind. and 21 years in Union City, Pa.

Thanks for taking your time to read this.
Sincerely,
Cleta Gordy Matthews ('49)
Palmyra, Mo.

It is with great interest and joy that I look at the picture of the Normal School as it was called in the early days. I attended there from the age of four years until I finished eighth grade in 1915. Then over to the KHS. Then back to NMSU where I received my degree in August, 1922. Dr. Kirk presented it to me. In 1923 I came to California. In due time I taught in the Los Angeles schools for 25 years. Yes, I have returned to Kirksville several times and always made a trip to the University to see what changes have been made.

My son is going to have the picture framed for my 89th birthday. It will hang in the living room with the other picture of the campus that you sent a few years ago.

Tom Angus is my cousin. He lived at our home when he first came to NMSU. In the picture he is on the bridge with Mr. Jack.

Thank you for sending the President's List. I'm very proud to have my name as one of the three graduates in 1922.

Sincerely,
Mildred Paine Helm ('22)
Long Beach, Ca.

Great news

I now have several friends attending NMSU and I have heard only "good news." I really miss the beautiful campus especially this time of year!

You certainly have come a long way! Thanks again for your latest info. I always enjoy the news.

Selby Recipient

I am very honored to be selected as the 1990-91 recipient of the Dr. Paul Owen Selby Memorial Scholarship. This scholarship will greatly assist me as I continue to pursue a degree in accounting and now, more than ever, I am encouraged to work hard and always do my best. I am very excited about Northeast Missouri State University and all it has to offer, and I extend many thanks to all those who made this scholarship possible.

Sincerely,
Tina L. Pryor

Great event

I am writing to you concerning the Black Alumni social event arranged by Dwyane Smith last Thanksgiving holiday. I want to commend Dwyane on his effort and success in making the evening enjoyable and memorable! I had a splendid time. . . . Dwyane did a wonderful job with this event as with most events he organizes. He is creative, talented and genuinely loves putting together socials that will be entertaining and pleasurable for those who will be beneficiaries.

Sincerely,
Lisa M. Vaughn ('89)
St. Louis, Mo.

All the best

Great to hear you're busy keeping up with people. I've retired and the questionnaire enclosed may answer some questions.

It's been a long time since I attended Northeast but I certainly have fond memories.

Now I just get to stay home and watch my youngest, who is 11, grow up and do whatever it is I wish to do. Of course, just being a mother keeps me very busy.

Good luck in your attempt to get all that info.

Have a great year!

The Microeconomics of Trade Seymour Patterson

NMSU Associate Professor of Economics Seymour Patterson writes a clear and comprehensive introduction to the fundamentals of pure trade theory. Pure trade is largely concerned with the movement of real goods across national frontiers. This book attempts to answer the important questions about the basis of trade and the pattern of trade. It covers traditional trade theory, modern trade theory, non-tariff trade restrictions, the theory of tariffs, free trade and restricted trade, trade concentration and trade policy, foreign investment and multinational corporations, non-traded goods, and more.

The Continuum: A Critical Examination of the Foundations of Analysis

Hermann Weyl, translated by Stephen Pollard and Thomas Bole

This edition, originally published in German in 1918, is the first English translation of the classic monograph that examines the foundations of the infinitesimal calculus. It is one of the definitive works of 20th century mathematical logic. Hermann Weyl (1885-1955) ranks among the most important mathematicians and physicists of this century. Weyl was not primarily a philosopher, but his wide-ranging philosophical reflections on the formal and empirical sciences remain extremely valuable.

Stephen Pollard, Associate Professor of Philosophy at NMSU, is also author of Philosophical Introduction to Set Theory.

A License To Show-Me: Northeast Pride

Signs of Northeast Pride will soon be seen on the highways and byways of Missouri. Beginning in October you will see Northeast Missouri State University license plates on vehicles across the state.

Senate Bill 209, passed by the 85th General Assembly, authorizes the Missouri Department of Revenue to issue special personalized license plates to any community college or four-year public or private institution of higher education located in the state of Missouri. The plates are commonly referred to as "Collegiate License Plates." These special plates are designed to promote school spirit while raising funds for each college or university.

Northeast has joined the program and will offer personalized Northeast plates to members of the NMSU Alumni Association. The plates will feature the school logo, name and a license plate configuration consisting of one to five characters.

Under the program guidelines, participating institutions are required to collect a minimum of $25 before an individual is given authorization to purchase or renew a Collegiate License Plate. Funds collected by each school are then to be used for scholarships or other academically-related programs.

To order your NMSU Plates see page 28.
