MISSOURI STATE COLLEGE
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

A Message from the Secretary

Your tremendous response to our Fall mailing of lists of "lost" alumni has resulted in the location of more than 600 graduates whose records are now current in the Alumni Office. Your continued interest in your College and fellow graduates is greatly appreciated.

The Fall issue of the Nemoscope as well as this issue and the Spring issue are devoted principally to news of alumni, many of whom were included on the "lost" list. We appreciate the favorable comments on the magazine by many of you and will strive to improve each issue.

Several area alumni meetings are scheduled for this Spring and those of us from the College are looking forward to seeing many of you on these occasions. The meeting schedule appears elsewhere in this publication.

The Association continues to grow through your efforts and support. We look forward to additional growth mutually benefiting your College and its thousands of graduates and former students.

Alum Jack Welch Writes of Experiences In Saudi Arabia as Airline Adviser

EDITOR'S NOTE: Welch, a 1950 graduate of NMSC, is with Saudi Arabian Airlines through a loan agreement with TWA. We thought you would enjoy portions of recent letters received by the Alumni Office.

Here goes a report from the sunny land of Arabia. I have had two lovely experiences in the last 24 hours. I attended an Arab wedding engagement party last night and today I went snorkeling in the Red Sea. Both were memorable experiences that I will never forget. My boss and I were invited to the party by one of the local boys who works in our department. His cousin was getting married and this was the official party for their formal engagement. When we arrived at the home where the party was being held we first met the boy's parents who were giving the party. The two families and those of the bridegroom all lived in the same block so the whole street was lit up with strings of white lights in front of the houses. After meeting the parents the men and women were separated. First we saw the huge table where the women were to eat. It was completely covered with pastries and fruits. I never saw such a spread in my life. The men were escorted into a separate house which turned out to be the guest house used only for parties and for guests. We met literally scores of Arabs who were guests. The room we were in was large. Two of the walls were painted in a deep coral, two in a pale blue and the ceiling was a pale yellow. It was brilliantly lighted by many light fixtures on both walls and ceiling. The floor was tile but completely covered with Persian rugs. Modernistic chairs and sofas were all around the walls. They had stereo music from a tape player and of course there was a large water pipe or "hubble bubbly" as they are called. This thing is very ornate and the mouthpiece is at the end of a long hose. The "tobaccoe" is put in a pan in the top, then some hot coals on top of that and then you suck the whole thing down through water and out through the hose. The mouthpiece is passed from one to the other. After much Arab coffee they then started bringing the hot tea around. It is very heavily sugared and tastes to me just like syrup. The Arabs are great ones for shaking hands. As a result Jack (my boss) and I were up and down like yo-yos for a while because everytime someone came in they were brought over to be introduced to us.

The men all wore their robes and some of the more affluent wore cloaks trimmed with gold braid and their fancy headgear. Many of the guests took off their sandals as they entered the room but most of them left their shoes on. The music played and played. They had both our western music as well as Arabic music. We were seated at the front of the room to the right of the wedding party when they came in. There were a priest, the bridegroom, the bride's father and uncle and various other cousins, etc. The priest picked up the microphone, this was all over speakers, and started a chant which lasted for quite a long time. Finally he took the groom's hand and chanted something to him, the groom replied, everyone smiled, shook hands and sat posed till the photographers took all the pictures. They passed out a small box of almonds to each guest and while the ceremony was going on there were two incense burners going full blast. One of the guests turned to me as the pictures were being taken and indicated that it was all over. For all intents and purposes they were married but the final ceremony would take place later.

Other than the ceremony just described the whole evening was spent in small talk. Many of the Arabs speak English so we had people to talk to. We got there around 8:30 p.m. and around 12:00 we were told that it was time for supper. The servants came in with a large piece of oilcloth—must have been five or six feet wide. They put the cloth down in the middle of the floor and proceeded to start "setting the table." This was quite different since the boys were barefoot and were walking all over the cloth as they placed everything. Lined along the edges were alternate dishes of apples and oranges, also dishes of pickled vegetables such as pickles, cauliflower, green beans, peppers, onions, etc. There were large rings of pastry filled with dates, and finally came the master stroke, the piece de resistance, which consisted of three huge platters of rice and in the middle of each was a huge pile of lamb. Each platter was at least 30 and maybe 36 inches across. Everyone had to eat a lot and I was just taking my time when I noticed many of the men were getting up and others were sitting down. Those who were now sitting down were the servants and I was eating with them. The guests just sat back in their chairs and talked and watched the servants eat. When the boys were finished they began cleaning up. All dishes and platters were picked up. This left only the scraps of fruit and the tableware. They then proceeded to pick up the cloth, fold it up with everything inside and carry it out. This whole thing was quite an experience.

This brings me to the second nice experience which was a trip up the coast to an oasis called Twenty-Nine Palms. It is near an unfinished palace started by the former King Saud. The reef is 150 to 200 yards out and at that point the water is about waist to chest deep. The breakers come in and hit you and it is really fun. The high point of this however was snorkeling over the edge of the reef. At this point the bottom just drops out of sight. You are at the edge of the reef and then straight down. I never in my life was so spellbound. The fish were out of this world. I never knew there were so many colors. The water was the most beautiful blue you ever saw and the multi-colored fish in the blue water were absolutely beautiful—saw some big sea bass. I had been promising the kids I would get them all snorkeling gear, the masks, breathing tubes, flippers, etc. I didn't know that I was going to open up a whole new world for them. It was the most beautiful sight I can remember. The shells and coral are beautiful and the whole thing is just another world.

This is the time of the annual Haj pilgrimage to Medina and Mecca. This is a great religious thing with the Moslems and they are flocking in here from all over the world. You never saw such colors and costumes in your life. There is a market section set up right at the airport and a couple of times I have gone over to watch the pilgrims come in. They are absolutely loaded down with baggage of all kinds. Almost everyone is equipped with a small pot for brewing tea which is almost a national drink around here. Each one wears sandals or goes bare-foot, many have their beards dyed with what must be henna—gives a reddish brown color. Many also have their heads shaved and oiled. There is a standard costume they are to wear when they are in Mecca. It consists of two white towel-like sheets. This makes all of them equal in the eyes of God and the rich man is no different from the poor man. Many of them are crippled or blind and I am told that some of these people spend their lives just saving to make this pilgrimage.

About the school here—TWA actually underwrites the American School (called the Parent's Cooperative School) here is Jeddah. There are several stateside companies, Grove Engineering, Raytheon, Lockheed, etc. and children of their employees attend the school, also Embassy children. They are picked up and delivered by regular school bus. They go to school Saturday through Wednesday and are off Thursday and Friday. A new school is under construction and should be ready for the coming school year. It is really a nice facility and will have all the latest of everything. Children here for the most part are being prepared for boarding schools since the present program only goes through the eighth grade.

I went over to Taif last Friday. On a map of Saudi Arabia you will find it Southeast of Jeddah about 120 miles. It lies in the mountains at about 6,000 feet elevation. What a trip—just one hairpin turn after another. The main road to Taif runs through Mecca and non-Moslems aren't allowed there. The result is a cut-off around Mecca some 50 miles long. It goes across the desert and there isn't a town or station anywhere along the road. The terrain looks like nothing you have ever seen. Very little green anywhere—just rocks, sand, sand dunes and more rocks. You see camels and the nomads with their flocks of goats. The women, even in the desert, are covered from head to foot and wear masks over their faces. You also see the little burros or donkeys which will be loaded sky high. We went by a Turkish fort which must be hundreds of years old, all in all, a very interesting trip.

Driving in Jeddah is really an experience. The traffic here is hard for me to explain. The center line of the road merely denotes that both sides are equally distant from that line. They drive where the fancy strikes and think nothing of turning in front of you. The car to your right may want to make a left turn and if he does, look out! I have come so close to getting hit so many times I've lost count. They signal madly with their arms and even the passenger on the right side puts his arm out and signals. I don't know what they mean other than that the window is open. If you were to take horns off their cars they probably couldn't drive any more. The great thing over here is a set of musical horns which they love to play at any hour of the day or night.

Bulldogs Cagers Third In MIAA; Finish With 11-11 Record

Coach Boyd King of Northeast Missouri State is never satisfied with a .500 basketball record. Although his 1968-69 team finished with an 11-11 ledger, he is looking ahead to next season with guarded optimism.

"I think we should be better next year, especially if we can find an outstanding shooter and a big, rugged rebounder," declares the Dean of Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association hardwood mentors. "However, other conference teams will have key men back next winter, so the MIAA will be real tough."

If the Bulldog pilot can find the scorer and boardman he needs, his enthusiasm could be well justified. Slated to return next year will be 10 roundballers, who saw at least a few minutes of action during the 1968-69 campaign. Claude Wilson (Chicago, Ill.), who paced the team in scoring and rebounding will be back. The other nine are center-forward Charles Currie (Decatur, Ill.), center Jerry Buhr (Waterloo, Ia.), forward Don Bramlett (St. Louis), center Dan O'Connell (East St. Louis, Ill.), forward Steve Jurkins (Springfield, Ill.), and guards Bob Fuka (Cicero, Ill.), Ron Sterchi (Olney, Ill.), Dan Sullivan (St. Louis), and Steve Luett (Clinton, Ia.).

Wilson, Currie and Luett were sophomores this season, and Sullivan was an impressive-looking freshman. The others were juniors.

The Bulldogs were reeling the first two weeks of February from four consecutive setbacks, the longest drouth since the 1965-66 winter. But then they reversed the trend to capture their final three encounters, 70-65 over Northwest Missouri, 80-70 over Parsons, and 67-60 over Southern Illinois (Edwardsville).

Not one Bulldog hoopster ranked among the top league cagers in individual categories, although the Kingmen finished in a tie for third with Northwest Missouri, both with 6-4 marks. Furthermore, Northeast Missouri was forced to play much of the campaign without all-conference Paul Ozug, who topped the MIAA in scoring and ranked second in rebounding last year. Ozug suffered a knee injury in December and decided to call it quits after attempting to play in several games.

The 6'3" Wilson was given a shot at a starting position after the Christmas holidays and responded by pouring in 234 points for a 16.7 average in the last 14 tilts. Altogether, he scored 286 points, a 13.0 average, and grabbed 180 caroms, an 8.2 average. Ozug averaged 12.2 for the 12 contests in which he played before being sidelined.

In addition to Ozug, King loses three other senior veterans, Ken Parker, a starter the last few games of the season, Dick Hlavek whose last second bucket defeated Southeast Missouri, 88-86, on the Kirksville court, and Mike McPheron, who could spark the Bulldogs with his long jump shots when he came off the bench.

The mentor had to teach three junior college transfers, Buhr, Fuka and Bramlett, the Bulldog offense and defense.

NMSC Wrestlers Have Outstanding Season With 16-1 Record

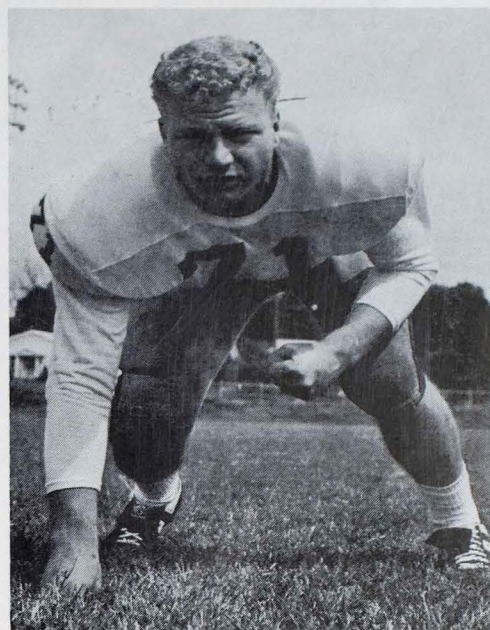

As they prepared to defend their MIAA Conference crown on February 28, Bulldog wrestlers had compiled the most successful season in the four-year history of the sport at Kirksville.

They had posted a 16-1 ledger in dual competition, losing only to powerful Nebraska University of Omaha, ranked one or two all winter in the NAIA poll. Coach H. A. Walmsley's matmen also captured the Southwest Missouri State College Invitational and finished second in the Graceland College Invitational.

Therefore, as they approached February 28, they hoped to notch their second straight league title and finish higher than their ninth place standing in the 1968 NCAA College Division championships.

Bulldog victims included such wrestling powers as Wayne (Neb.) State, Northwest Missouri of Maryville, MacMurray (Ill.), plus Missouri and Kansas State of the Big 8 Conference.

Junior co-captains Rich Beard of Ottawa, Ill. and Curd Alexander of Edwardsville, Ill. spearheaded the purple and white's surge this year. The two all-Americans (Alexander won the 115-pound crown last March and Beard was fourth at heavyweight) had compiled a composite overall standard

Ron Lillquist

Denver Broncos Sign Ron Lillquist, Bulldog Tackle

Ron Lillquist of Chicago, starting offensive tackle last fall for Northeast Missouri State, was signed this week as a free agent by the Denver Broncos.

The 6'4", 230 pound lineman will report to the Denver training camp about the middle of July for pre-season drills. "I'm real happy to get the chance to make it with a professional team. . . I expect they will try me at an offensive guard or tackle position," remarked Lillquist after signing the contract. He said he would start working out on his own in the next few weeks, continuing through June while attending the first summer session at the State College.

Lillquist, a quick, agile tackle for the Bulldogs, was selected to the 1968 alternate mythical squad for the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association after experiencing his finest season at Northeast Missouri. His intercollegiate career had been plagued by injuries until last year.

He transferred to Northeast Missouri in 1966 from Trinidad (Colo.) Junior College. Lillquist prepped at Chicago Taft High School where he was an all-conference, all-city, all-district and all-state selection.

of 33-3-0. Beard was undefeated with 19 consecutive victories, a new school record.
