1000 Hills Summer Youth They Keep

Coach Jim Baker shows students a tricky passing maneuver to keep the opponents from getting the basketball during the Junior High Girls' Basketball Camp last week.

The 1000 Hills Summer Youth Program at NMSU has been so successful in recent years that students can't seem to get enough of the summer camps.

For example, Su and Lu Hiltabidle, twins from Waverly, are participating for their seventh consecutive year in the camps. They first signed up in junior high school for band camp.

Jim Jatho, Fulton, liked the program so much last year that he attended three out of the five weeks of activities offered.

And two summers ago Carroll Bracewell came from Allerton, Iowa, for band, computer science and advanced computer science camps--three weeks in a row. He is now majoring in computer science at NMSU.

Designed for junior and senior high school students, the 22 camps provide expert instruction in band, chorus, computer science, tennis, newspaper and yearbook staffs, piano, cheerleading, pom-pom, gymnastics, art, football, jazz and baton twirling and drum major. This summer they run from June 4 through July 13.

Camps this week include High School Girls' Basketball, High School Band, High School Choral, Junior High / High School Strings, High School Computer Science, High School Boys' Tennis and High School Newspaper Staff.

Campers learn new skills or sharpen old ones in the instructional program from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. Mondays through Fridays.

Although beginners are welcome to join any camp, Head Counselor Jim Head said most of the girls in the junior high basketball camp last week were involved in basketball programs at their schools.

Fourteen-year-old Stephanie Steffen of Shelbyville came to the Junior High Girls' Basketball Camp last year and liked it so much she talked several friends into coming with her this year. All of them are on basketball teams in their schools.

it would be fun and help improve their skills.

Toni Smith, 13, Shelbina, was a bit more specific about why she came to camp. "I came 'cause I was a bench warmer last year!" she admitted with a laugh.

Camp instructors are experts in their fields—nationally known clinicians, NMSU faculty members, well-qualified coaches and exceptional public school teachers. Two guest clinicians on campus this week, Col. Arnald Gabriel and Paul Salamunovich, are especially outstanding.

Gabriel has conducted in all 50 states and in 45 countries throughout the world. As commander of The U.S. Air Force Band and Singing Sergeants, he is the only active Air Force musician to hold the Legion of Merit, a peacetime award.

Tom Duden, director of the 1000 Hills Summer Youth Program, said, "He's the best conductor in the U.S. The moment he walks onto the stage the air changes; it's a magnetism." Gabriel is working with the band camp this week for his 12th year.

Salamunovich, directing the 1000 Hills Summer Youth Choral Camp

Chorus for his fifth year, has been singing, teaching and conducting choral music in southern California for more than 30 years, winning many awards.

He is associate professor of music at Loyola Marymount University in Los Angeles and has been associate conductor of the Roger Wagner Chorale, a professional group in Los Angeles that travels worldwide.

Head said Salamunovich develops good rapport with his campers during rehearsals so they really strive for their best.

The band and chorus will give a concert at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Baldwin Auditorium.

Duden maintains his program by adding new camps to attract more students. Northeast's camp program has not been greatly affected by the national trend of dropping enrollment caused by increased costs and more youngsters' working during the summer because of his strategy.

Since he became director in 1966, the program has evolved into a 22-camp program with 1700 students involved. When it began in 1954 it had only three--band, chorus and twirling.

"This is the only program I know of where everything is organized under one umbrella, one person," Duden said. He said he believes better coordination of activities results.

Cost is another way the 1000 Hills program differs. Duden said a lot of places have different prices for the various camps. At NMSU $65 is charged, regardless of the camp.

During the camps, the campers and counselors live in NMSU residence halls and eat in the hall cafeterias. The camp fee also includes a week's room and board.

Students aren't the only ones that come back again and again. Head, his wife, Betsy, and daughter, Amy, have been with the camps for nine, eight and six years. Both Head and his wife are counselors.

The camps have changed a lot. Eight years ago the program was only one week long; now it runs for five weeks. Betsy said, "The time will come when we won't be working with the camps anymore, but I'm kind of hesitant to think about it. We'd really miss it."

See you next year!

Junior high girls, split up into several groups, practice their basketball skills in the Kirk Auditorium this year because of the Pershing Building's remodeling.
